Hints to dispel those first week jitters

by WENDY WINKLEBAKE
Now that high school is out of the way, most people are ready to begin their college career. But what about those little details that seem so trivial yet so nagging the first few days of school? Like where is the library? the cafeteria? the counseling center? which parking lots are student and which are faculty?

Most of these have simple answers and detailed information can be obtained in a number of places on campus. The main information booth is located in the foyer of Bldg. A where general questions can be answered. If there is a specific question concerning courses, it is best to consult a counselor or a member of the department. Here are a few helpful hints that can make those first few days of college a bit easier. Where is the library? The library, complete with full-time reference librarian and plenty of reserve material, is on the second floor of Bldg. F. Current magazines and newspaper microfilm are available for student use. Any student with an activity card may check out library materials for a 3-week period.

Where are the counseling centers located? In an effort to help effectively serve students, counseling services are offered from three Student Development Centers located in Bldgs. A, D and I. Each center is staffed with four or five counselors and maintains information on occupations and general college selection for use by all students. Up-to-date transfer information is also available.

The Bldg. A cluster serves students involved in the Communications, Humanities and Fine Arts Division, Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation Division and the Special Services Division.

The Bldg. D counseling cluster will be responsible for Technology, Mathematics and Physical Science and the Life Science and Human Services Divisions. Business and Social Science will be housed in Bldg. I.

Career Programs are located in the following buildings:

Building A Fashion design and Interior Design

Building D Child Development, Dental Hygiene, Electromechanical Technology, Horticulture, Nursing, Architectural Technology, Operating Room Technician, Criminal Justice, Dietetic Technician, Fire Science Technology, Mechanical Engineering, Park and Grounds Operations Management and Refrigeration and Air Conditioning

Building I Accounting, Aide, Banking Finance and Credit, Food Service Management, Legal

Secretary, Marketing, Mid-Management, Medical Office Assistant, Supervisory and Administrative Management, Data Processing Technology, Executive Secretarial Development, Journalism, Legal Technology, Material Management and Real Estate

Where is the cafeteria? The cafeteria is located on the first floor of Bldg. A. It opens at 7:30 a.m. and serves complete breakfasts. The menu includes eggs, pancakes, french toast and the old favorites, doughnuts and sweet rolls.

The cafeteria is open throughout the day and serves hot lunches and dimers. (Please turn to page 3)

Registration Still Open

Counselors will still be available to offer assistance in selecting courses and arranging schedules today and Friday. Late registration continues in the Bldg. A lounge until 3:30 Friday afternoon. Although exact figures will not be known till next week, there was a marked increase in enrollment this semester. (Photos by Lori Jane Gay and Rick Kolbke.)

Membership open in special activities group

Homework and studying are only part of college life. Whether tastes run from astrology to political science, chances are there is a club on campus to meet individual needs. Currently there are 22 active clubs on campus. Several career areas have started clubs in addition to the religious and special interest groups available to students.

Special interest clubs on campus include the Astronomy Club, Circle K (a service organization), the C.I.A.D. Club (an organization aimed at deaf students), Engineering Club, Geology Club, International Students, Phi Theta Kappa (a scholastic honor society), Political Science Club, the Spread Eagle Ski Club and the Video Production Club.

Religious groups currently open to students are the Bahai Club, Catholic Campus Ministry and Seekers. Career areas that have started clubs include the Association of Legal Students, Data Processing Management, Food Service Executives, Future Secretaries Association, Harper's Bazaar Club (fashion design), J.A.D.H.A. (Dental Hygiene Association), Operating Room Technicians Club, Phi Theta Epsilon law enforcement, Sophomore Nurses Club, Students Organized for Child Care and the Student Nurses Association of Illinois.

Membership in the Harbinger and WHCM, the campus radio station, studio theater and the speech team is also open to all students.

Each club on campus has at least one faculty advisor. For more information on any of these activities contact the Student Activities Office, Bldg. ASB, ext. 242.

Racquetball and Swimming classes are now available in the Physical Education Center. Registration for these classes will be possible through August 30. Open Recreation times for use of physical education facilities will be posted in M Building beginning September 1.

Harbinger revises style, redefines policy

Times, they are a changing'. And in order to keep up with the changing trends, constant revisions are necessary. Thus, the Harbinger deemed it necessary to make a complete overhaul and improve the quality of the publication.

As in the past, news reporting will remain fair and accurate. News directly concerning the general campus community will be given top priority. Club and organization news and general announcements will be published in the "Upcoming section" of the paper.

Various facets of student life will be highlighted in the feature section of the Harbinger. Columns dealing with music and personality outlines of various faculty members can also be found in this section.

Once again equal attention will be given to both men's and women's sports. Whenever possible intramural informa-sports can be found on page 8. Another new feature of the Harbinger is the "From the desk of..." column found on the editorial page. This will be written on a rotating basis by James McGrath, Harper president; Don Slansbury, vice-president of student affairs; Karen Keres, faculty senate president and John Malukowski, student trustee. Topics covered in the column will pertain to the general campus community.

New viewpoints and perspectives will be offered by those participating in the column. Letters to the editor are welcome and will be run as long as they are signed. The Harbinger will accept no unsigned letters. Names will be published with each letter.

Items, whether from students or faculty members, for stories, pictures or overall improvement of the Harbinger will be accepted on page 7. And, last but not in any way least, are welcome. With the cooperation of the students, faculty and staff of Harper College, the Harbinger can continue to be the high quality newspaper that it is. Wendy M. Winkleshake Editor-in-Chief year leave of absence and is now in Taegu, Korea where he will teach at Kyungtok National University.

With the beginning of the semester, many students will be seeking ways to get the most out of the college year, both academically and in campus activity. Support services designed to help students succeed in their academic programs are available with the opening of classes. These include tutoring services, learning skills laboratories, and remedial offerings. Both new and returning students can find these services beneficial.

A full schedule of college activities is available to students at Harper. Many recreational, social, and career interest clubs are active on campus. Students work on a weekly newspaper, do campus radio station, and in productions of the Studio Theatre group. The Program Board and Cultural Arts Committee work to bring programs, films and concerts to the Harper campus.

Both intercollegiate and intramural athletics are available to men and women. The several choral and instrumental groups of the music department are open to non-music majors as well as the students enrolling in the music program.

This semester can be a busy and productive one for everyone at Harper. My best wishes to all students, faculty, and staff members returning to or beginning their experience at Harper College.

From the desk of...

James McGrath
Harper President

The beginning of a fall semester at Harper College is always an exciting time. Returning faculty and students exchange information about summer activities. New students, faculty and staff are welcomed to the Harper College community.

The 1800-81 year at Harper is off to a fine start. Full time equivalent (FTE) enrollment at the end of open registration is nine percent greater than at the same time last year. Final figures, of course, will not be available until the end of late registration on August 29.

The Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation facility (Building M) is finally ready for full occupancy. This fall including the long-awaited swimming pool and racquetball courts. Buildings 1 and 2, the other new buildings on campus, are fully scheduled for business and child care courses.

My sincere thanks go to all who were involved in fall registration. Registration of a large number of students was possible only because of the planning, patience and flexibility of Harper College staff and students.

Several administrative changes have occurred during the summer. Former Director of Admissions and Registrar Don Slansbury has been named Vice President of Student Affairs. Dr. Charles Harrington, formerly Associate Dean of the Business and Social Science Division, is now Dean of Instruction. Professor Larry S. King will serve as Acting Associate Dean of the Division. Martin J. Ryan, of the English Department, was appointed Associate Dean of the Communications, Humanities, and Fine Arts Division.

During the summer, Associate Professor Kenneth Busch of electronics technology received a Fulbright Fellowship. He hastens a one-

School days...

Harper parking lot policies set

By DANIELA STROJANOVIC
Enforcing parking regulations is going to mean more than just a mere warning to violators this fall, according to Kevin King, public safety chief.

Three major parking no-no's, of concern to Chief Kevin King and campus security, are persons parking in the handicapped medical lots, without permits to do so; parking in fire lanes, (areas with a yellow curb), and students parking in the faculty-staff lots. Generally, no warning will be given for these three major violations. Violators will be issued a ticket for five dollars payable to the Village of Palatine.

In the past years there has been trouble with faculty-staff lots. Staff and faculty members get upset when students park in their lots and put pressure on students. There are ten student parking lots on campus which leaves students no reason to use a faculty-staff lot. Drivers are also urged to obey speed limits, put parking stickers on the inside of their back windows, and park in a lined space (no angle parking).

"During the first one or two weeks of school we will have extra personnel out to help students," added King, "but all they really need to do is read the signs."

The 1960-61 Peer Counselors have begun their annual fall membership drive. Peer counselors are students who assist other students with questions and problems. Students may encounter at Harper. Peer Counselors work primarily in the Peer Counseling Center, but they also spend time in the three counseling centers on campus in buildings A, D, and I. They participate in various activities throughout the school year. One of the most satisfying activities in 1970 was the serving of coffee and hot chocolate during finals week.

Peer Counselors have a training period consisting of two evenings and one Saturday. They meet weekly and are expected to commit at least two hours a week to the program. Students who become Peer Counselors may be paid for their time or they may earn up to three hours of credit. Any student who enjoys being with people, is seeking a way to be helpful, and wants to have a great time while he or she gets to know Harper should pick up an application for Peer Counseling at A347 (A Building Counseling Center). Franco Brantley, Peer Counselor sponsor, extension 483, may be contacted if you have questions. Applications should be returned by Sept. 12, 1960 to A347, directed to Frances Brantley.

Tips for success in those first 'frosch' days

Snacks are available all day. Which are students parking lots? Of the 13 parking lots on campus, 10 are set aside for student use. Lots are designated as either student, faculty, medical or visitors lots. Anyone parking in the wrong lot will be ticketed by the Public Safety Department. The lots, on all sides of the campus, provide approximately 4,750 spaces.

Where can students receive help if the cars won't start? The Public Safety Department will lend jumper cables to students. However, the student must find another car to jump the "dead" car. There is no charge for the service but students must leave their drivers license with office personnel when cables are checked out.

Is there a doctor available on campus? A physician is available every morning in the Health Service Office, Bldg. A362. Those wishing to see the physician may do so on a walk-in basis. In addition, the Health Service provides free breast cultures and pregnancy, venereal disease, tuberculosis, mono spot tests are available. The office is open from 9:15 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 8:15 to 4:30 p.m. Friday. Aspirin and bandages are also available. More information may be obtained by calling the office at ext. 268 or 266.

Need some help in a class? Visit the tutoring center on the first floor of Bldg. P. Students may receive help in almost any course from the personnel here. For detailed information on the service call ext. 539.

Reynolds is back - was he ever gone?

Wally Reynolds is back. Not that he was ever gone, mind you. But from rumors that abounded over the past summer, one might have thought the Coordinator of Intramurals and varsity baseball coach had been fired from both posts. Not so.

"I wasn't fired," said Reynolds. "I'm tired up this year, but I wasn't fired."

The rumors were spurred on when the Board of Trustees showed a proposal to make the part-time coordinator post a full-time occupation. It was also rumored that Reynolds would not return as varsity baseball coach because he wouldn't get a full-time post. Again, not so.

"What happened was that the Board did not have the money to create the full-time position," said Asst. Athletic Director John Gelek.

Reynolds' hours as CI have been reduced from 30 hours a week he put in last year to 16 hours a week. That is because the budget, while slightly larger than it was last year, does not include a $5,000 grant that it did last year.

"There was some money left over last year," explained

Reynolds, "and the Board gave it to the Athletic Dept. to begin an intramural program."

As CI, Reynolds job has been made easier by the completion of the M building project. Also to Reynolds' advantage is the year of experience behind him.

"We tried to use last year as an input year," he said. "We know the pitfalls of scheduling and know better how to use the facility."

Offentimes last year basketball would conflict with indoor jogging, floor hockey, and badminton during Open Gym. That won't happen this year.

"We've set aside time for each activity in the framework of Open Gym," said Reynolds. With the opening of the swimming pool and racquetball courts, Reynolds will now be able to offer a full complement of activities to the Harper community.

The one setback, however, is that the subcommittee organized events. Many of the tournaments sponsored by the CI last year, such as the flag football tournament, the floor hockey league, and billiards tourney, may have to be scrapped because of the budget cut

Finally, an open pool. . . . sigh!

After a year of delays, the swimming pool is finally, completely, and unequivocally finished. Well, almost.

The pool was to be the gem of the $5.6 million M-building project supposedly completed last fall. Nearly a month before its opening, however, a leak was found in the pool's drainage seal.

Mike Bamburg on sports

The Athletic Department rescheduled the pool to open by January of this year.

When January rolled around, however, the leak was still a problem. So the AD postponed the pool's opening until the end of April. No such luck.

Finally in June, Harper's Board of Trustees accepted a submittal (albeit partial) completion from the contractor who was hired to heat the pool's wound. Now, during World War III, the pool will open Sept. 2.

The pool itself has become almost mystic. No one is quite sure how or why the leak appeared in the draining seal. "I forgot who shot it," who shot our pool?

The leak was discovered when someone noticed that the pool was losing almost three inches of water per day. It was expected that maybe an inch of water would be lost per day simply because of evaporation. But certainly not three.

How much water was lost overall is not known for sure either. "I know we lost many thousands of gallons," said Fred Isden, Manager of Recreational and Athletic Facility, "but I don't know exactly how much."

The contractors were held responsible for repairing the leak because the school didn't yet own the pool. This presents an interesting legality. Until the board accepts the contractor's work either in substantial completion or final completion, the school does not legally own the facility, leaving repair and repair costs to the contractor.

Even if a leak should reappear within the next year, the contractors will be responsible for repair and costs because of a one-year guarantee (or warranty, if you will).

All that remains now is for the board to issue an acceptance of final completion on the new "final touches" left that is due before October.

"The pool is finished," "It's been time consuming," said Don Misse, director of physical plant, "but it's a complex building. And the more complex the building, the more complex the problems."

There were also problems in the handball courts, which are due to open by mid-September and a year later.

It seems that three of the courts began laminating last year. One of the courts was laminating from its driveway, and the other two from the base coat. The contractors have since recoated the three courts and have assured Misse that no further laminations will occur if they should. Harper has a two-year guarantee on all six of the courts.

The board is expected to issue an acceptance of substantial completion on the courts tonight and the year-long headache will finally be over. Sigh.

Now . . . And Then

The swimming pool (above during a swim class last Tuesday) and before its repair last fall (below). The pool will open to Harper students Sept. 2nd and will signal the completion of the $5.6 million M building project started three years ago. The pool's opening was delayed almost 13 months because of a leak in the drain seal. The 220,000 gallon pool was losing almost 500 gallons an hour because of the leak. (Photos by Rick Kohnke).

Building V redesigned to house sculpture, and ceramic studios

Sandwiched between Bldg M and Bldg B is a small, insignificant-looking Bldg V, which appears to be a storage area.

Not too long ago it was used as storage for the bookstore and also as a physical education facility, according to Michael Brown, associate professor of art and department chairman.

Brown redesigned the interior of the 4,000 square foot complex as a studio for sculpture, ceramics and three-dimensional design.

"In the planning process, both William Fouat and Ken Danberg worked with me," he said.

"The move to U-Bldg V has given us much more space, so that we can have a primary instructional area with a series of specialized support facilities," he said.

Welding and brazing booths, metal working equipment, clay instruction, small casting and fabrication are offered in one area of the studio.

"We have a new 20 cubic foot gas kiln, in addition to our six, five kilns," said Brown, who received his B.S. degree from the State University College of Buffalo and his Masters in Fine Arts from the Rhode Island School of Design.

"The gas kiln has twice the capacity and allows us to do different kinds of firing."

"What used to be a shower room is now a walk-in clamp storage room for storing clay projects which need to be kept moist. There is also a separate room for clay mixing and repressing.

"There is a pottery wheel room that will contain eight pottery wheels including a pottery wheel for the handicapped," he said.

There is a woodshop and studio for fabricating and carrying and a finishing room that can be used for paint spraying, wood finish application, and fiberglass lamination.

"Special attention has been given to the safety and welfare of the students," Brown said.

Area comm. colleges gain from sliding economy

by WENDY WINKELBAKE

Area community colleges have experienced a sharp increase in fall enrollment due to an economic downturn in areas ranging from 1 percent to 11 percent.

College officials attribute the increases to the traditional enrollment pattern in a time with high unemployment rates and a sliding economy, college enrollments generally increase Harper, Elgin and Oakton Community Colleges also stated similar increase in summer school registration.

"The summer increase was due to the economy. Full Time Equivalent (FTE) enrollment was up 23 percent. It was mostly young students who are most affected by unemployment," said John Lucas, director of planning and research at Harper.

There was an overall increase of 3 percent in Harper's first week of fall registration. This resulted in an 8.3 percent increase in FTE. A total of 17,435 students had signed up for fall classes by the middle of the first week of school.

Harper will receive more revenue than expected if enrollment holds up since the FTE enrollment reached 7000 rather than the 6800 which the Trustees used to base budget projections.

Elgin had 530 students enrolled on the first day of classes, 17.1 percent more than last year. Their FTE tally reached 2602 students, a 12.7 percent increase.

Having just settled into the new Des Plaines campus and a branch campus in the Niles East High School building in Skokie, Oakton experienced an 11 percent increase in enrollment over last year. Seven thousand students were enrolled the first week of classes with FTE up to both an 8 percent increase. In addition to the economy officials at Oakton attribute a heavy ad campaign announcing the switch to the new satellite campus to their increases.

Due to its sharp increase in enrollment, Harper had to go off campus to find space to house all courses. As a result, Hawthorne School (located in Wheeling and Harrison) and Schaumburg High Schools will offer both continuing education and credit courses for Harper.

Harper student attacked in lot 2

The above composite sketch was pieced together by the Palatine police department based on a description by the victim of an attempted rape. The attempt occurred late last week in parking lot 2. The assailant is described as white, 5'8", 20 years old, medium build, curly brown hair and unknown. He was last seen wearing a peach colored button-down shirt and blue jeans.

by WENDY WINKELBAKE

Police and campus security have no leads as yet in the attempted rape of a 19-year-old Harper student late last week.

The assailant, described as a white, medium build and about 20 years old, attacked a Harper student Friday morning in parking lot 2, adjacent to Bldg 30. According to reports, the man held a knife on the woman and forced her into her car. Police say the woman got to the car, leaned on the horn and screamed, scaring the assailant off. Although there were several people in the area at the time of the attack, there are no direct witnesses to the 11 a.m. attack.

Investigators have no way of knowing if the man is a Harper student or someone with no campus connections. There is no guarantee that he is a student. "Pot" he have not ruled out the possibility that he came on to campus from the surrounding roads," explained Public Safety Officer Ken King.

Police put together a composite photo of the assailant based on the victim's description. The woman described her attacker as unknown, about 17 to 6 inches to 5 feet 6 inches tall, medium build with wavy, brown hair. He was last seen wearing a peach-colored twoshirt with white knit sleeves and blue jeans.

Daytime parking lot patrols will be stepped up as a result of the attack. King announced that a revision of the patrol schedule will be made for the remainder of the semester. "There will be increased patrol of parking lots, there will be a different deployment of patrolmen. We'll be watching the parking lots more closely but only for them but for the safety of students and faculty members," he said.

The overall plan for increased parking lot patrol will mean a decrease in the number of public safety officers in campus buildings during the day.

If the assailant is spotted on campus, King requests members of the campus community to call the Public Safety department, ext. 31 or 211, immediately. Absolutely no effort should be made to apprehend the assailant, by any one, including him King warned.

Anyone having any information is asked to call Commander Robert Warr at the Palatine police department, 335-2131 or the Public Safety of the Name of those having information will be kept confidential.

State aid is based on the number of FTE students enrolled or how many students there would actually be if each carried a full-time course load of 15 credit hours. However, the college will not receive aid for this semester's increase for two years. This is due to a state sanctioned formula designed to help colleges with decreasing enrollments. This formula allowed colleges facing enrollment problems two years to prepare for the inevitable.

While they will not receive state aid for this semester until two years from now, the colleges do retain the tuition collected at registration. Lucas feels that even this amount will not be enough to pay for the additional part-time faculty Harper was forced to hire to meet the needs of students. "It will be a tight budget to keep this year," Lucas alleged.

Although exact figures are not known for the fall, it is expected that the sharpest increase came in the transfer programs as with summer registration. There were also notable increases in the special services and remedial programs.

Registration is up more than we expected a year ago. We projected a 3 percent increase, actually less than a 3 percent. Lucas concluded.

Best rape protection knowledge, common sense

by WENDY WINKELBAKE

While there are no hard and fast rules to prevent rape, women should know how to react. If the situation ever arises, no amount of self-defense training or "attack sprays" will ever replace the most valuable defense: knowledge and common sense. Although its victims are women, rape is a crime that should be a concern of all. It is not a crime against an individual. It is a crime against society.

According to the Palestine police department, more women escape rape by talking than by fighting. By going along with the assailant, possible victims can buy time until they can react safely. This approach involves nothing to increase personal danger, or make the situation worse. It is recommended that women talk to their assailant, gain his trust. Having done this, take the first opportunity to escape. It is an advantage to this approach is that if it fails, there is still a chance for other alternatives.

One such alternative is to try shouting. Another is to turn the head and induce vomiting by sticking the forefinger down the throat.

Screaming in some cases, may bring help or frighten the assailant. However, it could also cause him to become more violent in order to silence the victim. If it seems that screaming may help, experts recommend that women scream. "Face" as the unparalleled means of attracting attention.

However, it is not recommended that women physically resist. Life is too important. Don't hold back. If instinct should force resisting. The victim should try to physically hurt her assailant. The groin is a particularly vulnerable area. A deep gouge to the corner of the eye or a sharp push with the heel of the hand to the nose are other alternatives. Both require courage and skill. If victims get the chance to disable the assailant run!

There are a number of other ways of protecting oneself and everyone should be aware of their possible merits, as well as pitfalls.

Struggling. It may scare him off but it could also work against the victim. Intense struggling may wear the victim out. It may also make the assailant more angry or sexually arouse him which will defeat the entire purpose. If victims know their attacker is alone or not carrying weapons, struggling might make sense. The real danger in this type of action is that once a victim has started struggling, they are committed. They should ask themselves if they are willing to fight hard enough to stop him and if they can really hurt someone else.

If it is someone's natural reaction to fight, they should make sure they know how to sign up for a self-defense or martial arts class and get totally involved.

Weapons. Most of the so-called weapons carried by women are kept in the purse—the first thing they will drop if someone grabs them. Even if a victim manages to grab a "weapon," how little from the purse chances are it will be taken away and used against them. The best weapon against any assailant is to think quickly and clearly.

Running. This could work but it could also go awry. One should run only if they are sure they can get to safety without being stopped by the assailant. Since it is virtually impossible to identify a rapist, it is important to learn how to recognize potentially dangerous situations and how to protect oneself.

Survey the surroundings. At home, this is the place where the greatest control over safety can be exercised. The following can be used as a guide to home protection.

- Keep the doors and windows secure at all times, even if leaving for only a few minutes.
- Install an intercom or peephole in the door.
- Install single cylinder dead-bolt locks, or, if there is glass in the door or window nearby, a double cylinder deadbolt.

• Let anyone at the door think that there is a man present. "It is alright, Jim. I can get it."

• Demand identification from any strangers at the door. Don't let a stranger in the house to make a phone call, make the call yourself.

• Don't give out personal information over the phone or let anyone calling know you are alone. Hang up if you are alone. Hang up on obscene phone calls immediately.

• If living alone, use only initials rather than first names on the mailbox or in the phone book.

• Drill and pin all sliding doors and windows.

• Always keep the doors locked and windows rolled up.

• If there is reason to suspect that someone is following or trying to run the car off the road do something to attract attention. As long as the car is operable, keep the motor running and stay in it. Do not, under any circumstance, go home. Drive to a fire station, police station, restaurant or anywhere there are people to help.

In parking lots.

- Park close to the building and in a well-lit area. Always lock the car.
- Have the keys ready when returning to the car.
- If there is a breakdown in an unfamiliar area, stay in the car and keep the doors locked.

When someone comes by roll the windows down far enough to ask them to call the police.

• Try to let someone know when you will be returning from the trip.

On the street.

- Try to let someone know the destination and when to expect you home.
- Try to walk alone, especially at night.
- Stick to familiar, well-traveled and well-lit streets.
- Walk away from buildings and hedger.

If an attack or rape occurs:

- Do not clean up, douche, bath or change clothes. This is important for collecting evidence.
- Seek medical attention and be sure to receive tests for possible venereal disease, pregnancy and the presence of semen as well as a pelvic examination.
- If raped at home or in the car, do not disturb the scene of the crime until the police have a chance to investigate.
- Try to remember everything the rapist may have touched.

On campus. There are emergency telephones located in each of the buildings. Locate the phones in each building in case they are needed. Numbers of the Public Safety Department and the Health Service are posted at each phone.

McGrath: from faculty dean to college president

by KAREN J. JOHNSON

James McGrath, President of Harper College since 1978 was previously an accounting teacher and administrator at the City University of New York.

McGrath graduated from Long Island University with a Masters Degree in accounting.

Karin Johnson

teacher feature

He started teaching at New York City Community College then taught at the City University of New York.

He began teaching in 1957 "because I don't like the teachers in college. I thought I could make accounting easier from what I'd seen. Education doesn't have to hurt. I wanted to share the responsibilities with the students," McGrath said.

"I think one of the most important things to do is teach to be a part of someone else's success. I have tremendous respect for what goes on in the classroom."

And to prove that, McGrath took a class here this summer. He took Introduction to Art with Ben Ballas. "It gave me a feel for what goes on in the classroom and I got to know the students. It also opened up a whole new world for me, coming from an accounting background."

McGrath left New York with a change in mind. He sent his resume to Harper College during their National search for a President and he got the job.

"I felt I should look for a presidency," he said. "I started teaching at a community college and have always liked them. I was attracted to it.

linally by the general atmosphere of the Movement, the quality of life, the attitudes of the people, especially the students."

"I'd like to say here there's a lot to be done and I like Harper very much. There's nothing I'd rather be or do than work with faculty and students. I enjoy being associated with a community college better than a four-year college because the faculty is interested in working with and teaching undergraduates. They want to be an influence on what the students want to or could become," McGrath said.

In his free time, President McGrath is involved in Harper activities because a lot of life revolves around college. A lot goes on which is entertaining and cultural. I'm supportive of what they're trying to do. He also enjoys playing mixed doubles in tennis with his wife reading, Shakespeare, poetry by John Donne and W. B. Yeats, and traveling.

"I get excited reading poetry and enjoy reading history. Shelby Foote did a study of the Civil War which makes me war re-act like a novel," he said.

McGrath's favorite place that he's visited in Jerusalem. "I went there in November of 1971. I was invited by the City and State University of New York. We spent three weeks in Israel visiting universities. I like Jerusalem because of the spirit of the people and the land of contrast in terms of the modern and the ancient." He also likes Yugoslavia. "The Adriatic Sea is just beautiful, the pure rugged beauty of the coast. Of course, like London, Oxford and Stratford, too."

But if he could visit anywhere in the world, it would be a return to Jerusalem. "I'd visit all the Christian and Modern Shires there and get the feeling of the history in that country, he said. His goal in life is "to be a good president at Harper."

Public safety the scapegoat in campus attack

There is always a scapegoat. Whether it is a simple misunderstanding between friends, a robbery, an accident or even an on-campus attack of a Harper student, the blame always has to be placed on another pair of shoulders.

Late last week, a Harper student was attacked in parking lot two, adjacent to Bligg. The woman unlocked her car door, turned around and met with an unknown assailant armed with a knife who forced her into the car. Fortunately, the woman had the good sense to lean on the horn and scream, scaring the attacker off.

But, of course, when people hear of the attack, they will not think to ask of the woman's physical condition, a description of the attacker or even what time the attack occurred. The most immediate question seems to be "Where was public safety?" Well, public safety officers were patrolling various buildings just as they have been doing since the campus opened. It is the most logical thing for them to do at 11:30 a.m.

True, the sole function of campus security is to watch students, staff, and faculty members' safety during campus hours and they do this accordingly. At any given time of the day, public safety officers can be seen patrolling various buildings and general open areas with the heaviest concentration of people.

At night public safety cars are constantly patrolling parking lots and campus roads, oftentimes seeing time wasted to their cars safety.

Thus, the argument of "if public safety was around there wouldn't have been an attack" lacks validity.

The fact remains the "body system" people waiting to and from the parking lot to buildings together is one of the most effective ways to prevent an attack. And without question the best weapons against lack of knowledge and common sense: the knowledge of various means of protection and the common sense to remain calm enough to apply them.

Rape and attempted rape are not crimes against an individual; they are crimes against society as a whole.

Everyone should know various means of protecting themselves whether it means enrolling in a self-defense course, installing deadbolt locks throughout the home or carrying keys with points sticking through the fingers. Society will always need police, campus' will always need public safety departments. However, if everyone took just a few hours to learn to protect themselves, no one would become overdependent on the organizations. But then, if people knew how to protect themselves and took a few minutes out to help educate others, who would they have to shoulder the blame?

Student service doors open; use services provided

by WENDY WINKELBAK

In a time of increasing unemployment, rising prices and a roller coasting economy, it is good to see that a few people are using sound judgement. Although there was a sharp increase in fall enrollment which will result in increased revenue in the next two years, the Board of Trustees have not gone overboard in lower projections concerning the budget.

The college will not receive state aid for the increased enrollment for two years due to a state formula designed several years ago to help prepare colleges with fluctuating enrollments for the inevitable. However, the tuition collected during registration is retained by the college and must be used to hire additional part-time faculty members.

College officials were overwhelmed with the overall 11% increase in enrollment for the fall semester. While expecting a 2-3 percent increase and not hoping for anything beyond 1 percent, Harper's enrollment based on Full Time Equivalent figures shot up 7.5 percent. This increase is due partially to the status of the economy with younger people most affected by the high unemployment rates. They have time to return to school. This is also evident in summer school registration. Based on Full Time Equivalent (FTE) figures, enrollment skyrocketed 18 percent. Increases in state aid came about through an increase in the FTE figures (or how many students the college would have if all were enrolled on a full time basis). Thus the college may be able to add more programs or replace items cut from the budget with the added revenue. All of this requires careful planning in an act to go toward increasing enrollment. There is no way to be sure that enrollment will continue to increase, level off or drop.

Accommodations for the added students must also be taken into account. With an increasing number of students and classes there must be appropriate classroom facilities. Again, bravo to the board. Additional space has been added by adding credit and continuing education courses at Hawthorne School in Wheeling and Barrington and Seaburg High Schools.

Even, though it seems that things are on the upswing this will be a tough year in that there is a tight budget to keep. Additional space, supplies and faculty must be paid for while at the same time not scrimping in other areas of academic life. Researchers, college officials and board members must continue with careful scrutiny of future plans and look for the forest through the trees.

Harper students, RTA commuters one in the same

What does the rapid transit of New York City, Boston and Chicago have in common with Harper College? Or for that matter, the Bus of Honolulu, or the cable cars of San Francisco?

Well, there are more than a few similarities.

For starters, the people who use the above modes of transportation, and who attend Harper College, are both called "commuters."

It used to be that commuting was cheap. Not so today. It almost is as expensive as a state-run operation that, it is still a best buy when one considers the alternatives.

Some commuters venture from one beginning to one end. And yet, there are those who are just on for the ride.

Commuters whose journey will not end with the current mode, will hopefully try to transfer to another mode of transportation, or as the case is in education, school. Transferring is a tricky situation. When one train leaves you off, it may be a hour before the next ride. In school, not every class is transferable, which means you bought a one-way ticket to ride. And those one-way tickets add up, one should figure this into the total fiscal amount.

Today, both transportation and colleges are having many monetary problems. Who's to blame, you ask? I don't know.

The taxpayers you say, maybe. But, are they to be responsible to pay for services which they may never use? (Maybe, that is enough said about that, maybe another column.)

And when the college and transportation authorities get no monetary help, budgets are cut, and extra-curricular activities, such as Night Owl Service are out.

Strangely enough though, colleges, and systems of public transportation are seeing an increasing amount of riders. But, is this new ridership a cause of inflation, or a change in thinking?

Have you ever noticed the graffiti on some of the walls of trains, or the stains of the bathrooms at Harper?

I saw the following on one rapid transit ride in New York City, and I'm sure some college student wrote them: "God is alive and well, and is living in the Bronx," and "Jesus, still loves you," and still another "Who the hell is J.R., and who really gives a blank!?"

After a quick patrol of the men's room stalls, at Harper, I found: "Let's bomb Cleveland for the hell of it," and "Isn't it pretty to think so, Brett," and still another "This place (blanks)."

Run your fingers along the bottom of your seat. ECH! No one knows where to put their old bubble gum. I double dare you to try that on a CTA or car. God only knows what life form is present under there.

But, here is the major and most profound way of looking at the similarities of Harper College and the rapid transit systems of the big cities.

A friend and I thought of it, and talked about it. I'm sure you will agree with us.

"People come and go, and leave cigarette butts on the floor."

it, sell it, program it, listen to it, and, for the first time in print, I am going to criticize it.

I don't want any death threats sent to me, therefore, I will try to be fair throughout the year. If students or faculty ever disagree with any opinions presented in this column send an intelligent letter to the Harbinger, Bldg. A367.

My background? Well, my specialties on this planet are record albums, Rolling Stones, rare records, cut-outs, new and old wave, power pop, heavy metal, space rock, the avant garde and imported music. I'm not a jazz aficionado and classical music has not yet entered my frame of listening.

Criticism is a scale with a delicate balance. One would not criticize the latest piece of metal by Judas Priest and then follow the same style with a Martha and the Muffins lp. Listening to music requires sorting the group or ensemble into a genre and then deciding if that group is a good representative of that genre. Or, if it represents anything at all. Like I said, I'm slightly crazed. On to the music.

Queen - The Game
One of the best new releases by an old wave band but only because Brian May's wickedness with the guitar makes up for all of the over-dubbed vocal slip. His composition, "Dragon Attack" is the heaviest tune contained within the groove, the lead guitar is scuzzing. And Freddie Mercury gets rough for a change. This album contains some potential Top 40 material that may sicken fans of heavy metal, but the good songs outplay the bad. "The Game" makes me forget that I used to hate Queen more than I hate the Archers.

Firefall - Underflow
When will these guys quit rehearsing old Crosby, Stills, etc. cliches. Their story six months from the West Coast music factory get together to manufacture more of the same.

Their music will convince you of the validity of de ja vu—you've heard it all before. I don't need to go into detail but heavy handed, emotionless lead guitar licks sets against a wash of acoustic guitars, flute and depressing, why-did-you-leave-me lyrics add up to a big zero.

Magazine - The Current Use of Soap
A Virgin Records release that is strong throughout. Magazine's vocalist and lyricist, Howard Devoto, is a "hopeless romantic" a la Brain Ferry but has the manic delivery of Peter Dinklage. The cover version of Sly Stone's "Thank You" is a great piece of three minute funk that doesn't seem out of place with the other songs. Some may label this group new wave but I prefer to call it frantic art rock. The use of synthesizers adds to music instead of buying it and the bassist is superb. Check it out; it is both listenable and danceable. Roxy Music fans will enjoy.

Well, that is about it for this week. In the next issue I will be reviewing Peter Hamill's new release along with one or two others. Also, a new Gary Munson collection should be out sometime this month and some new songs from John Lennon. Wow! has it been five years?

High flyin' Hawks looking to winning season

by MIKE BAMBACH
Coming off an 11-1 debut as Harper soccer coach Sander Szabo's biggest question is, "What is to do about an injury?"

The answer? Good question one might consider it too far-fetched a fantasy to talk about a national championship for a second year team and its second year coach. Ah, but this is not your typical second year team either.

After assembling from scratch, a soccer team Szabo went out and won four of his first six games. Then, after a success in against DuPage, the Hawks won three of their last four games to compile a 7-21 regular season record in the sectional playoffs. Harper stomped Waukesha and Triton by 5-0 scores, but then lost to Lewis and Clark in the Region IV championship match. In the national tournament, the Hawks were eliminated by Maroon in the first round, 3-0.

But despite falling to Maroon, the Hawks finished as the No. 2 ranked team in Illinois (behind Lewis & Clark, Lewis & Clark, incidentally, was ranked No. 14 in the nation before the Region IV final).

So expect Harper to be at the very head, but not at the top of the Illinois Junior College rankings. After that, a national ranking won't be far behind.

You can even expect the Hawks to advance further in the national tournament than they did last season. Both Lewis & Clark, which lost most of its starters to graduation, and Maroon will be having their hopes on freshmen.

How far the Hawks advance after that is strictly up to Lady Luck. But remember, leading there is half the fun.

And it will be fun for the Hawks, despite a tougher schedule featuring Triton and DuPage, Lewis and Clark University.

There are seven players returning from last year's team. The addition of three outstanding freshmen won't hurt. Neither will the depth Szabo has added.

"We have a lot more skills than last year," said Szabo, who should have talked with his coaches if he was an All-American three straight years at Illinois, New York.

Here is a rundown, by position of the 1988 Hawks.

GOALIE - The only real question mark on the team is Steve Todd, a former Mid Suburban League all conference at Rolling Meadows turned in a 14 goal average last year. He also was All-State and All-Region James. He suffered a knee injury last spring though and underwent surgery in July. "He seems to be recovering," said Szabo, "and the doctor gave him the okay to play." Todd says he will be back on Sept. 2nd but Szabo's later concerns is if Todd can get himself into shape for Harper's games against Illinois Institute of Technology this Saturday. If Todd's recovery is slowed, he is backed up by Keith Vuos, who was back-up in Todd at Rolling Meadows. There is also Chris Small normally a fullback who can do an adequate job.

DEFENSE - This is the defense that made Todd an All-State and All-Region choice. That says it all. By far the strongest point on the team, it has been strengthened by the addition of Mark Mota and Martin Francisco. Frasco (Brent), the team captain Steve Crane and Sander Szabo spearheads a soccer practice last week. The team, in its second year, is expected to place high in N-C conference. (Photo by Rick Kohnke)

Dan Reynolds are each returning from last year. With Todd in goal and this defense in front of him, opponents won't be able to score often, if at all.

MIDFIELD - Palatine's Rick Pul is the scorer and quarterback that Szabo wishes he had last year. "He has all the tools to be an excellent scorer and player. I think he'll make All-American."

FORWARDS - Easy the most improved part of the team. The biggest addition here is 26-year old Mike Purich, a native Yugoslavian. Purich graduated from Crown High School last year and his age, plus experience automatically makes him the team's leader. "He has good ball control," said Szabo.

That is one of the few things the Hawks lacked last season - a passing, control oriented offense. The return of Andy Botowski (goals), John Priel, Jim Marmor, and freshman Mark Plutawa will give Harper all the offense it will need.

OUTLOOK - This will be the best soccer team in Harper's short soccer history. It has more offense, more experience, and more depth than last year's squad. The return of Todd to last year's form is important, but not to the point of crucial because of the Hawk's outstanding defense. But, because of the tough schedule, it won't be easy to duplicate last year's record in the long run, however. Harper's schedule will be an edge simply because the Hawks will have played so many good opponents that they won't get on naughty for lesser foes. Now, if they can just get Lady Luck on their side.

Harper football kicks off season Saturday

by MIKE BAMBACH
The Harper football Hawks marked the pinnacle of success in 1987. The Hawks won the N4C title, the Region IV championship game, and were ranked 6th nationally at the close of the year. That was two years ago. Heady and hard times have set in. Last year's squad dropped to 1-3 in conference play, although winning all three of its non-conference games. They were trounced twice by 40-scores at the hands of Triton and Illinois Valley. And three times they let leads get away. They lost a bizarre 5-2 contest to Thornton, 20-14 in Joliet, and 25-20 in Wright.

"Last year's team" said head coach John Eliavik, "can't overly as good as they were."

Problems developed basically from a freshman quarterback. "He didn't deliver as we hoped," said Eliavik.

That quarterback, former Rolling Meadows star Pat Bremer, is gone. So is a backfield that gained 122 yards on the ground.

The team will again depend on freshman Dave Loch, an All-State choice from Arlington, and Mike Riba are the leading candidates to replace Bremer as quarterback.

Riba was injured in his second game for Illinois Grove, but seems to have recovered from a shoulder injury.

The Hawks will be much improved, especially at quarterback and the other skilled positions. However, Triton, Illinois Valley, Joliet, and DuPage are a good bet to be a struggle to beat, even though the Hawks have an advantage in the schedule. Six of their eight games - including the last four - are at home.

The Hawks are still rebuilding, but if the freshmen produce, the Hawks have a shot at a third place finish Triton and Illinois Valley, perennial powers, will dominate the first and second place slots.

Here is a rundown, by position of the 1988 Hawks.

QUARTERBACK - A third hand percent better with the addition of Loch and Riba. Both can pass and, as Eliavik says, "Riba is a fast learner." Loch is shorter, compared to the 6-4 Riba, but has leadership qualities.

Bolt looking to fill team openings

After dominating junior college tennis for the past four years, women's tennis has entered a retooling age.

Cathy Martin Bolt, whose team finished as the ninth best team in the nation last year, is having trouble. Not with talent but with depth.

"I'm starting over. I'm not getting those five girls down the way because I've replaced with what I've seen. But I need three more girls."

The five girls are in the team are Pam Meyer, Sherry Johnston, Jackie Anderson, John Kohnke, and Katherine Defranco.

All but Kohnke are from Mid Suburban schools, which have a reputation as being one of the state's finest tennis run areas.

She is expected to look at last year's squad which may have been the best in Harper's history. The team of Cheryl Herman, Jenny Janner, Cindy Sarno, and Steers & Chen finished north last year of the N4C playoffs, and have been here before.

"I feel we can be a strong team, but it will depend on the players," says Bolt.

There is also Ben Verke, an existing receiver. Bolt are DEFENSE LINE - Don't ever offend these guys. Big, strong, mean, the kind that eat meals at breakfast. Tackles John Tucker and Brad Pignard have size (6-4, 360 and 6-6, 300 respectively). Ends Dan Schreiner and Don Basker are also big (6-3, 290 and 6-3, 300 respectively). This is exactly the strongest part of the team.

LINEBACKERS - Not too far behind the defense line are

Board renews space contact with District 220

by WENDY WINKELHAKE

The Board of Trustees unanimously passed a resolution which allows Harper to offer both degree credit courses and graduate extension courses in the Barrington High School facilities.

Reamendment of the existing agreement came about due to a request from school District 220. The district also requested adjustment of the compensation for use of the facility. After reviewing the agreement, the only significant change that came about is to increase payment for rental of the facility and services rendered by school District 22 from $1,200 to $2,000 per year.

Terms of the agreement state:

- Community College District 512 will assume the responsibility for offering an adequate adult and continuing education program in the facilities.
- that the Barrington facility will be available between the hours of 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday each week during the academic year.

- costs and benefits of the agreement will be reviewed annually by the respective districts.
- each district is to hold harmless the other district for any claims resulting from the implementation and operation of this agreement and.
- the offices of the high school principal of District 220 and the office of the Director of Continuing Education and Program Services of District 512 will be responsible for the operations within the agreement. Other matters dealt with at the August meeting included the ratification of a two-year agreement with the service E-employees, International Union, Local 1. The unions previous contract expired July 1, thus ratification by the board of trustees before the new contract could take effect.

Terms of the new contract include a 10 percent salary increase for the current year and 8 to 11 percent increase for 1981-82 depending on the yearly Consumer Price Index as of May 31, 1980.

In other action:

- The board approved a maximum of $10,200 for salary adjustments to the Teacher Associate staff for the 1980-81 year. The single salary range used for this employee group during the 1979-1980 academic year had been $50 to $11,000 for a 30 week contract at 37.5 hours per week. However, two salary ranges will be implemented during the current year. Individual placement on the range is based upon the credentials of the associate.

- Range A (BA or less): $7,500-$13,600
- Range B (BA plus 30 min.): $9,350-$15,350

Re-examination of the Resources Allocation and Management Plan for Community Colleges (RAMPC) is being completed. This is the planning document required each year by the Illinois Board of Higher Education and is the basis for requests to the legislature for funding. The capital request for capital funding is contained within the document. The document is a long range study focusing on the specific functions of the college. An examination of the functions in terms of past and present and efforts to determine what direction these functions should take in the future.

Board of Trustee approval was needed before full occupancy of Bldg. M would be allowed. Last winter the walls of the racquetball courts showed signs of delamination and it was questionable as to whether the walls could stand the hard use of handball and racquetball play. Repair work was done on the walls and they showed no signs of further delamination during the last five months.

However, in the event of future delamination which requires repair, the areas will be repaired and surfaces resanded. In addition to extending the guarantee for one year to two, the contractor took out a $25,000 bond covering the guarantee.

Health Service has open door; free tests, counseling available

by NANCY KARABATOS
Students who wonder what happens to the activity fees they pay might want to take advantage of the Health Service, located in Building A. Free medical counseling and treatment for minor illnesses are available to all Harper students. The Health Service also sponsors three blood drives yearly and a health fair each spring.

Tests for pregnancy, mononucleosis, strep throat and rubellulosis are available as are the diagnosis and treatment of venereal disease. The Health Service emphasizes the fact that all visits are kept strictly confidential.

The center offers brochures on health concerns such as alcohol, cardio pulmonary resuscitation, cancer, birth control, pregnancy, venereal disease, mononucleosis, allergies and acne. Group counseling sessions are available on topics such as smoking, sexuality and weight loss.

Students can purchase a 24-hour accident and sickness insurance policy at the center. This hospitalization policy is in effect from the date of purchase until the following Fall semester.

The center is staffed by fully qualified registered nurses, part time physicians and available for approximately an hour and a half each day, funded by student activity fees. The staff doctors are each affiliated with one or more of the following hospitals: Northwest Community, Alexian Brothers or Suburban Medical Center. Support services for the disabled are coordinated through the Health Service. Services include readers for the visually impaired, testing assistants and note-taking. Disabled students may obtain medical parking permits at the corner when they present physician's request.

Located in Bldg. A36, the Health Service is open Monday through Thursday 8:15 a.m. to 10:00 p.m., and Friday from 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Fall art exhibit at Harper

An art exhibit, on display until Sept. 30, will feature the final projects of Harper students from the spring class of 1980. Lithographs, merigraphs and other selections will be available for viewing.

Oct. 6-24 Harper will present University of Illinois Art

Faculty Exhibit which will include prints and drawings done by 12 artists from the Champagne campus faculty.

Both exhibits will be on display on the second floor of Buildings C and P. The exhibit is open during regular college operating hours.

A RARE MOMENT: It's not often that someone isn't manning the system at WHCM. The campus radio station entertains students throughout the day with a variety of rock music comparable to several Chicago FM stations. The broadcast day begins at 8 a.m. and doesn't end till 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday (the station signs off at 2 p.m. on Friday.) Requests are taken at ext. 237. Photo courtesy of WHCM.

King: No leads in lot attack

Investigators have no leads in the attack of a 19-year-old Harper student. The attack occurred in parking lot 2, adjacent to Bldg. M during the second week of classes.

The assailant was described as white, medium build and about 20 years old. He was last seen wearing a peach colored tee shirt and blue jeans.

Anyone having any information concerning the attack is asked to contact Kevin King, public safety chief, at ext. 211 or Commander Robert Ward at the Palatine Police Department, 358-2131.

WHCM: rocking campus throughout the day

by JEFF EVERS
WHCM is alive! The student-run campus radio station has been rocking the campus for over a decade.

Although there is no formal radio career program offered at Harper, students can get excellent broadcasting experience from working at WHCM. The station is almost entirely student run but there is an advisor who more or less "lets you to put your head back in the train window."

Although the station itself has survived a decade of rock and roll, the wiring has not. Some wiring running through campus buildings was ten years old and had to be replaced. However, some of the wiring in the cafeteria was mysteriously cut in seven different areas. The cost of replacing the damaged wiring will be absorbed by funds provided through the student activities fee.

Staff positions are open to any Harper student who carries at least three credit hours. Anyone wishing to secure a disc jockey or engineering position is required to perform a audition. Current officers at WHCM are Steve Papp, station manager, Jerry Goldstein, program director, Jim Busch, chief engineer, Greg Stone, news director and Kris Papenburg, music director.

The station operates through money allotted them from the Student Activities Fund. Much of the equipment used in a normal broadcast day were donated by NBC radio in Chicago, many of the records and tapes used are received as promotional material. The station plays a variety of music throughout. Sort of a cross between formats of Chicago FM stations. A typical broadcasting day goes something like this (the format is illustrated by comparisons to Chicago rock stations):

8 a.m. to 9 a.m. Top 40-WFEM
10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Album oriented rock-WLUP
11 a.m. to 12 p.m. adult contemporary-WKXQ
12 p.m. to 1 p.m. Album oriented rock-WLUP
1 p.m. to 4 p.m. progressive rock-WXRT
4 p.m. to 6 p.m. adult contemporary-WKXQ
6 p.m. to 10 p.m. album oriented rock-WLUP

The station begins its day at 8 a.m. and continues till 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The day begins at 8 a.m. on Friday, but signs off at 2 p.m. For requests call ext. 237.

Rock Valley Thumps Hawks, 19-7

Mike Riba calls it a season

by JOE KOST
Last Saturday on Harper's home field, Rock Valley's sophomore quarterback J.F. Green, from Pleasant Valley Iowa, thumped the Hawks by picking apart their defense with his precise passes in the first contest of the 1980 season.

According to Rock Valley's coach, Norm Matzi, "Green came to us as a wide receiver last year and because of injuries we had to use him as a quarterback in the one other game we used him in, he threw for 523 yards and 7 touchdowns."

Green and his Trojan teammates controlled the flow of play for the greater majority of the game.

The Hawks first drive was probably the most impressive of the two teams throughout the entire game.

On the first play of the football, Rock Valley was assessed a 15-yard penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct. That penalty, along with an 18-yard run by fullback Jim Vancoville, gave Harper a first down on the Trojan 47 yard line.

Hawk quarterback Dave Lock then completed two passes to the big tightend Demetrius Gaines for a total of 20 yards. On Gaines' second catch, he shook off a defending linebacker and scampered his way down to the 19-yard line. Harper then moved the ball

by JOE KOST
Riba was taken by Dave Loch the Hawks top two quarterbacks, told head coach John Eliasak before last Saturday's game that he quit. That leaves the Hawks with Loch and Mike Choklad at the quarterback spot.

"Friday night he contacted me," said Eliasak, "and told down to the five-yard line but costly mistakes forced them to end their 65 yard drive scoreless.

The Trojan's hurt at offense moved the ball downfield very well until defensive men Don Pokorny and Dan Scheisser combined for a sack. Ball brought on a punt situation. A 38-yard return by Harper's Bob Blok was called back due to a clipping penalty.

With a few minutes remaining in the first quarter, the Trojan's marched the ball down the field to the Hawk's five-yard line. Penalties and incomplete passes made the Trojans settle for a 37-yard field goal and a 3-0 lead.

Throughout the rest of the first half, neither team me of his decision to quit the team. I thought he was every bit as good as Loch, but we decided on Loch. I had planned to use Riba in the game."

According to Eliasak and other players, Riba gave no indication of his intentions until he contacted Eliasak Friday night.

"I thought they were going to start Mike," said Loch. "He was really doing good and then they told me Friday that I was threatened to score, however Rock Valley found themselves intercepted three different times. Twice by Linebacker Jeff Anderson and once by Physique Murray.

The Trojans struck again in the third quarter when J.F. Green connected with receiver Mark Newton for a 38-yard going to start.

"I knew I wouldn't play the whole game," he continued. "I knew Mike was going to be in there just as much if not more than me."

Riba wasn't available for comment that to say he quit "because I wasn't going to start."

"I think it was a poor decision," said Eliasak, "on Mike's part."

touchdown pass. Steve Huston's extra point kick was good and the lead was increasing to 19-0 in favor of Rock Valley.

The Trojans scored minutes later on another touchdown pass to Newton. This one from Green went for 48 yards and a 16-0 lead. Steve Huston added a field goal with 8:19 remaining in the game to make Rock Valley's lead 19-0.

Harper's third quarterback of the day was Scott Choklad. Choklad came in with a few minutes left and led the Hawks down the field for their only score of the day. Now the score stood 19-7, in favor of the Rock Valley Trojans. Neither team scored again.

Hawk's coach John Eliasak had this to say about Choklad's performance, "Scott was probably the brightest thing we saw all day. He got his opportunity and made the most of it. He had gotten the least amount of work because we had the two other quarterbacks in front of him and he was splitting his time on defense."

"Best thing we could get out of the game is that now the freshmen have their first college game behind them and we're hoping they improve," Coach Eliasak concluded.

Fred Inden gets equal time

(Note: This is an extemporaneous interview and its contents are not to be taken seriously. It is a labor of how people become famous.)

Fred Inden wants to be famous. Actually he is. It's just that nobody knows about it.

So I'm giving Fred his chance. It's about time, he feels, to let everyone know just how famous he is. So Fred, take it away.

"I first realized I was famous when I was six months old. At the time, I was drafted by three pro football teams," says the jolly round man.

But Fred bypassed football and proceeded with kindergarten. Yet, a decision about playing pro ball was inevitable.

"By the time I was five years old, I had to make a decision whether to report to training camp or graduate from the fifth grade," he says. "And realizing the importance of an education, I decided to stay in school."

"Now looking back, I regret not signing my pro contract." But there were bigger things to do.

"After finishing college," Inden remembers, "I realized I had to win World War II so I enlisted in the Marine Corps and singlehandedly won battles. The most notable was the battle of Iwojima's Bar in New Zealand."

But the war was soon over. Inden was forced to look ahead.

"After defeating Tojo and bringing Japan to its knees, I took my fling to pro football, finally going to a team with a 9-28-1 record."

And it is here where Inden, after years of waiting, made his biggest impact. On the gridiron or pro football. You won't find him in the Hall of Fame, but the job he did is still recognized as the most extraordinary in football.

"In 1980, I turned an 1-11 record around to a 6-12 record receiving a broken knee, broken nose, and shoulder separation."

Not bad Fred, not bad at all. "It was about this time I had a vision while riding my bike on the suite drive, that there would be a community college that would sadly need my talents."

We often read of such professionals having visions of saving an aspect of American subculture. We often read about born again athletes. But Inden's vision became a reality.

In 1980, William Rainey Harper College was founded and Inden, who had been in retirement from football for eight years, was picked up by the football Hawks, as they were called, on waivers. The rest, as they say, is history.

What's your dental IQ?

by DANIELA STOJANOVIC
What's your dental IQ?
By going down to the Dental Hygiene Lab (Bldg. 5-120) any Harper student can make an appointment to have a dental check up for $4.50.
Cleaning, full mouth x-rays, and complete dental care have been part of the Dental Hygiene Program here at Harper since 1960. The program is very intense and takes two years to complete. It prepares students for a career in the dental field and also helps develop their ability to get along with other people.

Students who enter the program are required to take an aptitude test, ACT test, and bring in their high school or college transcripts (admission policy is in the process of changing). "They should be willing to devote a full two years to the program and nothing else," commented second year student Lin Sprouts.

The first semester of the program begins with lectures and classes. Students are also given chances to practice on each other. It's a period of frustration and practice to get the little technicalities right. "It's like learning to write all over again," said Sprouts. During the second semester students get a chance to show what they've learned by practicing on actual patients. While they work qualified instructors watch and evaluate them.

The clinic is a vital part of the dental program. It not only gives the student a clinical setting and dental practice but experience in dealing with people as well. Understanding and confidence between student and patient is a strong goal in the program.
An appointment is a three to

Senate elections slated for next week

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
Student Senate elections will be held Monday and Tuesday. Polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Bldg. A lounge and again from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Bldg. J lounge.
Below are candidate profiles in the dental hygiene program and is currently involved in general studies

Doug Dvorak

Although she hasn't established a major yet, Hall is sure of her interest in getting into a student government, getting things going for people and getting involved," she said.
The Human Services/Life Science Division candidate feels that a good senator is one who is not there for the title but for the good of the student body as a whole. She also favors getting out and personally meeting students and dealing with their problems. "I am very interested in dealing with people and what they think," Hall explained. "I am experienced in organizing activities and I like getting involved."

Charles Kern

The second year physics major feels that publicity is the key to getting more students involved in campus activities. "I am running because I'd like to see more students involved in activities on campus and utilizing the facilities," Kern explained. "No one really sells anyone (about the activities/facilities available). There should be more publicity about things like Bldg. M which is about the same as a Chicago Death Club for only $12 a year."

Kern, who works as a physics tutor in the learning resource center, describes a good senator as one who is working hard and trying to do something for the students.
Kern is running for representative from the Math, Physical Science and Technology division. "I would like to represent my division because it would be very depressing if the elections were postponed again for lack of interest," he said.

Tracee Gillen

This first year Harper student is running for the Fine Arts, Humanities and Communications Division seat on the Student Senate. She is also involved with Program Board and Ski Club.
"I was very involved at Rolling Meadows High School and want to remain involved at Harper. I don't want to be an inactive student; the more active I am now, the better person I will be when I get out (of school)," Gillen explained.

Gillen feels that the key to generating student interest is to conduct surveys on various issues pertaining to student life. She feels that the biggest problem is that people don't want to go in the Senate with their problems, ideas and opinions. "People don't want to come to us, we have to start surveying them. They don't know that we can make a difference," she said.

Active in Student Council affairs throughout high school, Gillen describes a good senator as one who finds out what the people want and then acts on it. "I can't make up something and then act on it. I have to know what the people want and then act on that. And we (senate) can't think in just groups, we must think of the college as a whole," stated Gillen.
"Involvement is important especially in a community college. Students don't get involved as they should," Gillen concluded.

Gillen is on the alternate list

"I want to view Harper in a better way," commented Dvorak, candidate from the Physical Education Division.

Dvorak feels the best way to become aware of student needs and opinions is to directly meet with the students. "Basically, I plan to go out in the cafeteria and talk to students and just get to know students," he explained.

According to Dvorak a good senator is someone who knows the needs of students. "He views a good senate as a group working together to best meet these needs."

The physical education major is seeking a senate seat because he believes it would be beneficial to him. "I believe it would be beneficial to myself and to the students I would be representing. I plan to major in p.e. and with my six years in the athletic field I think that I would qualify," he stated.

Driver passes out, hits eight autos

A major accident involving eight parked cars occurred last week in parking lot 5 when a driver passed out all the wheel and lost control of her car.
Geraldine Hrbek, a part-time student at Harper was driving her car through the lot when she suddenly fell from sight. Her car continued to accelerate and collided with eight parked autos.

Vicky Luempert, an eye witness to the accident, said, "She slowed down and then pulled over. I couldn't see her at the wheel, she was at her side. Suddenly, she was going very fast. She hit the first car and kept going. The wheels kept spinning, which caused all the smoke and the very long tire streaks. I turned off the car and sent for help."

Kevin King, director of public safety, said, "She had some type of physical problem which is undetermined at this time. Our main concern was one of her safety, and also of the other students in the area."
Ten of the eight cars had punctured gas tanks, which sprayed gas over the area. The Palestine Fire Dept. was called into the scene to wash it off.

At the time of the accident, Rosemary Murray of Health Services noted, "She Hrbek has no recollection of anything happening. She said the last thing she remembered was that she fell tired and numb in her arm, that's all."
Public Safety, Health Service, and the student who helped all responded very well to the accident," commented President James McGrath. "Everyone concerned responded very rapidly, and in what seemed like seconds, all possible medical attention was administered."

According to Northwest Community Hospital spokesman, Anne Finney, Hrbek sustained an ankle fracture in the accident. Hrbek was admitted to the intensive care unit and is being observed for possible head injuries. "She is in serious, but improving condition," Finney explained. No one else was injured in the collision.

"My friend saw it, and told me about it," said Bob Jurtschke, owner of a damaged auto. "What can you say? It was an accident."
"It's going to cost a lot of money," said Bob Brown, whose car sustained the most damage. "My insurance will go up, and it's not even my fault. You know, it's ironic, if you park in the end you're more apt to get hit. I parked in the middle, and look at what happens."

Paramedics work to remove Geraldine Hrbek from her auto after she passed out and lost control of her vehicle. Hrbek was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she is being held for observation. Eight parked cars were damaged but no one else was injured. The accident occurred in parking lot 5 last week. (Photo by Lori Lynn Guay) Another picture appears on page 3.

Student voters a must in all elections

Building A320 should be one of the busiest places on campus this week. No, it is not the site of a concert, film, lecture or ice cream social. It is the campus center for voter registration.

Registration is totally free; all one has to do is show proof of address. There are only a few details that are involved in registering. One must be a citizen of the United States, 18 years old and a resident of a suburban Cook County election precinct. And this whole process takes only a few minutes.

What is to stop students from taking a few moments out of the day and become a registered voter of the United States? Well, there is that cold drink waiting in the cafeteria, the cute guy that spends his time in the lounge the same time the ogling girl does and the outside job that always seems to be waiting. These factors all stand in the way of responsible citizenship.

And, of course, there is the prevailing attitude that "my vote doesn't count anyway." However, the government can not function without the direct input of the people and the most direct input there is the power of the vote. Without the participation of eligible voters, elections become merely a charade, an annual event held by political parties to put the proper characters in the appropriate roles. The most obvious of all reasons for registering to vote is the upcoming presidential election. Legislation concerning the country as a whole passes across the desk of the person elected to the office. The only voice a citizen really has in the legislation and the election of the office is their voice.

On a smaller scale are local elections. Although the offices may not carry the weight of the president, it is just as important to vote in local elections and understand the workings of the system.

This voice in legislation is also an important weapon against office holders. What better way to get an official to listen to problems and get involved than to threaten to take away votes. This voice is a crucial weapon against candidates as well as a citizens' loudest voice.

When citizens do not exercise their voting privileges, the government of the people, for the people and supposedly by the people is no more than a play with the same characters acting as crew, performers and audience.

Being unemployed isn't all bad

by MICHAEL SINKUS
I was in Hawaii for the 10th time. I am not superstitious, but it happened there. Ironically, people call Hawaii "paradise." And even though I returned 2 weeks ago, I feel that I am still living in paradise.

My brothers, Paul and Scott, and I left for Hawaii on a non-stop 747. My parents and my sister Alisa, followed one week later.

On one particular day we were all laying on our backs, watching the palm trees sway. It was about 83 deg. F, and not a cloud in the sky. I talked my brothers and sister into riding on an outrager. "If you watch enough of Hawaii 5.0, you know what I am talking about."

My mom said, "er, Mike, we've got a letter for you." I said, "oh really, who's it from?"

United Air Lines was my employer. I worked part-time throwing around boxes into DC-10 containers. (DAMN.)

The letter read, "Registered mail, to be opened by addressee only."
I knew what it was. Yes, it was a love letter, to speak I think in the big war WWII, they called it a dear John letter. It read:

Dear Mike,

This is to advise you that your position as a part-time Ramp Serviceman is being eliminated.

I regret this action is necessary, however you will be terminated effective Sept. 2, 1988.

And soon, and soon I knew the economy was bad. I know that no one was flying the big jets. And I knew I was going to get laid off.

But, "terminated." That sounds too science fictionous, like something that might happen in Star Wars. "Keep away from me Darth Vader, or I will terminate you."

Now, here comes the strange part. I like being laid off, as a matter of fact, I wanted to be laid-off.

Why? It's simple. My friends studied, while I worked. My friends went to concerts, while I went to work. My friends had more time to read books, other than school books, while I worked. My friends did "everything," while I worked.

Does it sound strange that I no longer make ten dollars per hour? "Did you know that I flew to Denver to see the Talking Heads in concert?" Did you know that I flew to New York City to do Christmas shopping. Did you know that I flew to Boston for a lobster dinner?

And I still like the idea of being unemployed. The main reason though is because this past summer I've read books like Jack Kerouac's "On the Road," and Ken Kesey's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." I can identify with Dean Moriarty and life on the road. As a matter of fact, next summer, a couple of friends and I will ask a few more to join us on the road, a U.S.A. tour. I can also identify with Chief Bromden, the indigent. Hey, there is someone always out there willing to take care of you, even if it's in a nuthouse.

My best friend's father already envies me. He also works for United, and is a big shot. He calls me "the indigent."

That of course means that I will have to live off of my parents. So what? I did it before, and it is a hell of a lot easier than working.

I heard some student in the cafeteria say, "I just got laid off and I can't find a job." If I could give him some advice, stay hungry. Look, if you get good grades it is easier to get money, be it loan or scholarship. And you have time to read books. And if you really want to, you can have ample time to party, and your grades won't suffer.

Most importantly, you who are laid off, are not alone. And who says you can't have a good time? Why, just this last weekend I've read three books, it's great.

I got my letter in Hawaii, or paradise. And I feel like I brought paradise back with me.

Sincerely,
Michael P. Sinkus
a.k.a. the indigent

Student trustee here to help campus

April of each year there is an election for the position of Student Trustee, probably the most important student representative on campus. This student works hand in hand with the Board of Trustees, Administration Faculty, Student Senate and students.

The Student Trustee policy is to represent the student opinion of all facets of this institution, to do this in a proper manner they need to be informed of what the student's want, and how they feel.

School policy, and procedures can be changed with a good strong student voice, always need a leader for your cause. That's my job!

Cohen 'psyched' for his students

Daniel Cohen's students never meet with ridicule when asking questions. Rather, they meet with the understanding of a person who has traveled the same road.

Early in his college career, Cohen's German teacher told him something that he's passed along to his own students. "He told the class that there's no such thing as a stupid question," Cohen said. "He gave me the understanding that kids come to college with a desire to learn. They're all from different backgrounds. They don't know everything the teacher knows and they should never be ridiculed."

Cohen, associate professor of psychology, has been teaching at Harper for 12 years. Earlier in his career, he was a psychologist for the public schools in Mt. Prospect.

Cohen graduated from the University of Utah with a Masters Degree in Psychology. He began teaching at Harper part-time before joining the staff full-time.

"I like teaching here very much. I like the diversity of the students."

When you get into the four year or graduate schools, it's different. It's guidance more than teaching. At that point because the students enter with so much knowledge already. There's no real challenge with the higher level universities.

Daniel Cohen

At Harper, there's a variety in the ages of students and that makes it more challenging.

Cohen likes psychology because there's so many areas to study so there's never any chance to get bored. "I like to study why people behave as they do and in the process, I learn more about myself." Cohen said. He is also interested in Anthropology and

Sociology

Cohen was born in Illinois so after he graduated from the University of Utah, he came back to the midwest. "The employment market for psychologists in Utah isn't as good as in the large metropolitan areas," he said. "They're more adjusted in Utah, I guess, and they don't need as much help."

Outside of teaching at Harper, Cohen gives lectures for senior citizens through the Jewish Community Services. "I get a lecture time of 100 minutes so I try to find a topic that might be of interest and then expand on it."

Cohen doesn't like exercise, except maybe bicycling. He definitely hates jogging. "In the army, we had to do double time. I hated it and that's all jogging is. Whenever I get the urge to exercise, I sit back until the urge goes away."

Cohen does like to read a lot, though. His favorite authors are Upton Sinclair and Robert Ludlum. He also enjoys science fiction. "I'd even like to experience space flight. If not to the moon or another planet, then just to orbit the earth. I'd like the feeling of seeing the earth from space and feeling the unity the oneness of our planet. The astronauts wrote about that. It was really interesting."

If Cohen could have been in a different field, he would have liked to become an artist. "Barry, the talent of painting, I would love to be an art expert. Maybe I would even have an art gallery and sell people's works, or perhaps an art curator."

Cohen is satisfied with his life and one of the things that makes him happy is "seeing positive results as a teacher by helping other people, or at least steering them in the right direction."

His goal in life is "to continue to expand my knowledge of human behavior through the study of psychology." But the weirdest thing he's ever done is to teach psychology. "Imagine standing in front of 250 people and telling them that you know everything about the way they behave," he said.

Interior Design 'comes home'; enrollment gets a big boost

by NANCY MEYER

Due to adjustments in Harper's budget, the Interior Design Program has been moved from the Wilson Park Center to the main campus. According to the Harper administration, the move was necessary for keeping college costs down.

Though no major changes have been made in the program, enrollment has increased this fall. Seven new instructors have been hired to satisfy the increase and two sections have also been added for the required freshman and sophomore courses.

Jean Pearson, program coordinator, believes the increase in enrollment is not due to the relocation of the program. Pearson states the Interior Design Program has gained a reputation from former students in the last ten years and the program's increase is due to word of mouth. "Changing the location has neither increased enrollment nor gained the program any advantages," said Pearson.

The program has stimulated more and more interest in the past few years, though no improvements have been made. The two year career program includes required interior design courses along with a liberal arts curriculum. After completing their degree, students become residential interior decorators. Other students choose a transfer program and finish at a four year college or university to become commercial interior designers.

Dr. Janet Friend, counselor for the program, believes the Interior Design Program at Harper is recognized as one of the best in the northwest suburbs. For more information on the program, students can contact Jean Pearson at ext. 362.

Former armed forces commander speaks at Harper

General William C. Westmoreland presents his views on current U.S. military strength and the Soviet invasion/occupation of Afghanistan Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. in Bldg. J143. Photo courtesy of Harper College.

General William C. Westmoreland, considered to be one of modern history's most controversial military figures, will present his views on current military activity next Wednesday evening.

The lecture, scheduled at 8 p.m. in Bldg. J143, will cover the Soviet invasion and occupation of Afghanistan, present U.S. military strength and offer a comparison of the United States forces with those of the Soviet Union.

Westmoreland held center stage as Commander of the U.S. armed forces during the Vietnam War. President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed Westmoreland Commander of the U.S. Armed Forces and Military Advisor to the Republic of Vietnam in 1964.

During his stay in Vietnam, Westmoreland faced up to the Tet Offensive, My Lai, the infeasibility of the U.S. Marines Corps and the desire of the State Department to play general.

Westmoreland holds 19 U.S. military decorations including four Distinguished Services Medals, three campaign ribbons, with 17 battle stars, eight service medals, the Combat Infantry Badge, the Master Parachutist Badge for 121 Aviator Wings. In addition, Westmoreland has been decorated by 16 foreign countries.

four hour procedure in which "complete patient care is administered," says Lisa Pavlik-Hartie, dental hygiene assistant professor. The instructor is there at all times to make sure the right procedure is taken. It is quite a long appointment but patient Rosa Snodgrass says, "They do a good careful job and what's most important they do it because they" tation by the Harper Players. While these major events are well known in much of the Harper Community, many other "every day" functions fill the catering calendar. Participants in numerous conferences and workshops on campus are served a specially-planned meal. Food Service also provide refreshments for as many as eight, ten meetings a day. Many large off-campus groups also make use of the services, especially on week-ends.

Jan Lavey, who is responsible for campus catering, will review the many details which range from planning of customized menus and room arrangements to ordering flowers and table linens and supervising the actual serving of the meal. Although the large and unique functions present a special challenge and opportunity to "show off," those planning a small event can rest assured for 10-15 people will receive the same attention to detail as is given to a dinner for 300 or up to capacity 800 guests.

An, no death stampedes at The Who movie

by MICHAEL SIMKUS
It's Friday night, will anything happen? Will I people be trampled to death? Will Harper Student Activities learn from the tragedy of a Who concert in Cincinnati? Will there be two entrances for admission to the Who movie, "The Kids Are Alright?"

Those questions kept popping into my brain while I was driving to Harper's Big J auditorium, for the Who movie. I kept reminding myself, it's far the newspaper.

As I walked from my car to Big J, I noticed a few girls standing. Perhaps listening to a walk. If this had been Chicago, and if this was some downtown movie house, I probably would have made a remark. I would have walked up to the girls, like a hockey referee skates up to the public address man, and said, "Ah, number 22, two minutes, for hooking. But this is not Chicago. It is Harper College, Big J, and girls that spend time in the penalty box are not in attendance at Harper, nor would they be at Harper on their busiest night of the week, Friday night. I felt relatively safe. I did though have some suspicions. I took a deep breath. Oh, my gosh, I detected that familiar smoke of concerts. My heart began to pound. Where is Public Safety? I thought. "It's not too late to turn around. But, it was my assignment and it was for the newspaper.

Opening the doors to Big J, I wanted to keep the door open enough so I could make a mad dash to my car, if need be. I need, no swaying bodies, I look of safe to leave my position at the door.

"How many tickets?" The guy taking my money asked. (Don't tell anybody, but I could have sworn that the guy taking my money was none other than Bill Sternberg, movie critic.) "One." What, are you seeing double, I wanted to ask. Or you, I'm meeting some friends inside, better play it cool, right? But, I did not air those feelings, and I tried to rub off the ink on my red ticket stub, it was holding it too tight.

I handed my ticket to the taker. Ah, some more faces that I recognize. And they all looked very much in control. Now, I felt dumb to be really worrying about mobs, and riots.

Kris and Michele, a couple of swell people were saving me a seat. "See the garbage can, that's your seat."

I said "thank you," and made my way to the garbage can, that was sitting on the seat. It was beginning to get crowded in there. It was the biggest crowd I have ever seen at a Harper movie. I felt my pulse beginning to increase. I know it was for the newspaper, damn, if only I would have got the assignment to cover the Board meetings.

The Program Board was handling the whole affair, admirably.

I soon began to notice that most, if not all of the seats were filled. And there were more people coming in!

I looked at the clock, it read 9:10. By the way, the clocks in Big J, are set to New York City time, or perhaps Cincinnati time, of this I am convinced. I Ten minutes later panic set in. Will the people begin to chant, "Hare Krishna Hare Krishna?"

Oh, geez, if there is anyone listening, "turn off the lights and start the movie," I thought.

Suddenly, Steve Pryor, of WIHCM, took center stage. He said, "Welcome to Harper's Film Series. I'll let my mind drift, and observe all the faces." and Dave of the "Dead, and thanks for coming."

What? What was that? I was not sure, if only I paid attention. How was I going to find out? The guy sitting next to me was angry enough, he had already screamed, "let's go, I couldn't sit him." All for the newspaper. All for the newspaper.

The movie went well. Some good footage of the early Who. And no one stood in the movie long enough to get anyone angry. Perhaps though, there was one when things were over edge. The projectionist had trouble when the time came to change projects, the audience took it well, no one barked any seats, and no one screamed obscenities.

The exit even went well. And most importantly, no one was trampled to death. And my editor Wendy, would be happy. Ah, another assignment done.

I heard though that Harper may be planning to show highlights of Pop-John Paul II recent trip to Chicago, and South America. I hope that I do not get that assignment.

British stars rock the U.S. from sea to sea

Second try. Oh, the first one wasn't that bad. I received no angry mail. My self construction was pointed out to me, and I subsequently felt like the amateur that I am. I heard this once in my sleep. "one cannot be fair and critical at the same time." Nobody told me this was going to be easy anyway, guess what? In the following paragraphs I give positive reviews of two albums.

Ian Anderson (aka Jethro

Kris Pibenberg

...ON MUSIC

Tull's has withstood years of changing the music scene. Some of his albums reflect forces into different styles. "Songs from the Wood" and "Heavy Metal" are two of his best. "The Wall" is a folkier realm, evoking forestry feelings within the listener. "Back a Brick" and "A Passion Play" were written off by some as awkward and self-indulgent pieces of boredom. But not by Yours Truly, for what that is worth.

Tull's latest is titled "A" and it is a good follow-up to last year's "Storm Watch." Anderson's lyrics look into the future through what he already sees on Earth. "Storm Watch" was deemed to be a warning about nuclear days, and contained titles like "North Sea Oil" and "Dark Ages." It was an angrier sounding Tull, relying heavily on Martin Barlow's grating guitar chording and Ian's rasping voice. "A" has yet another line-up of musicians: keyboardists John Evan and David Palmer are absent, replaced by UK and Rocky music alumnus Eric Johnson. Johnson adds a new twist with his pinnacled electric violin. Long-time drummer, Bill Bruford is gone, filled in ably by Mark Craney.

Former Fairport Convention bassist David Pegg, who supported on the "Storm Watch" tour, makes his first appearance on a Jethro Tull recording.

The new band is tight. Johnson exerts a considerable amount of influence. "Batteries Not Included" starts off with a keyboard riff that would be at home on any UK album.

The song continues in that vein, but the lyrics tell the story of a boy who wakes up and finds a new Japanese toy by his bed. The idea sounds delicate in print, but on record it certainly isn't. The kid can't find the batteries.

"Protect and Survive" might be about the arrival of a UFO and the government cover up that followed, but I'll admit that I'm not sure. An instrumental called "The Pine Marten's die" contains some excellent interplay between flute and violin.

In general, the other songs are about the pressurized business life that most of us clones lead. An eye to the future is always present, but the music is always crisp. The wedding of Johnson's style onto Anderson's is handled remarkably well. Not a bad album by my standards, they're not the Psychotic Furs, and they're certainly not The Clash. But does who said they were supposed to be?

I'll bet there are about three people on this campus who know who Peter Hamill is, and maybe two who know who Van Der Graaf Generator. That is no surprise. Hamill is a visionary who has released some 20 albums, about half solo and half with the VEGAS. Anywhere, Peter's latest release is called "Box." Sixe one is a collection of seven songs with individual titles, side two is a mini-musical epic titled "Flight."

Of the shorter songs, two caught my attention called "Another new wave." A loose definition of what John might be feeling around with synthesizers and getting really robotic while keeping it droll and somewhat dissonant. The songs are "The Jargon King" and an instrumental called "The Wipe." The former is a pattern of harsh, grating noises and rhythm loops fronted by Hamill's distinctive vocals.

Sometimes there are three or four vocal tracks going at once, all decaying the world of news media and its jargon-filled language. "The Wipe" sounds like a 23rd century street sweeper taking two minutes to pass us by.

"Fogwalking" is an outstanding piece of sensory work. The lyrical images "buildings loom up like icebergs on collision course," "fogwalking through the worm-eaten night-apple," etc. match the pulsating rhythm boxes and snarling sax beautifully. Randy Hold's David Ferguson guitar's aces the songs and are used on this cut to create a sound like that of a cat fighting a dog in the fog.

"Losing Faith in Words," "Are Spirit," and "Golden Promises" are straight-forward rockers that spotlight Hamill's piano playing and erudite but effective electric guitar.

The love component on the second side could be interpreted in countless ways in the case of an artist who is introspective, but we never really know how much Peter Hamill the Person is contained in his work. "Flight" continues this tradition of cosmic son. To find this record, go to a dealer with a good report section. Hey, maybe sometime I'll review it, but I'm not sure I have some of my mind for later.

"My Bodyguard", sensitive warm blockbuster film

by BILL STERNBERG

Written by Alan Arbus
Directed by Tony Bill

"Moody" Matt Dillon is the school bully. His routine day consists of pulling naive, unsuspecting kids into washrooms for one purpose—to extort one dollar a day from them for what he claims is protection from the school psychotic, Linderman. "He's really psycho, you know," says Moody to the new student and money bag Peach (Chris Makepeace) while trying to extort money from him.

This is a hard adjustment for Peach, since his high school days were spent in private schools he never had to face problems as ugly as these. Even after being told by one of Moody's victims that Linderman killed his brother in cold blood, he still has problems accepting these rumors. On top of that it's spread around the school that Linderman has raped and beaten teacher, after teacher, after teacher. Peach, finds out from a teacher that all of these rumors are false.

Ricky Linderman (superbly portrayed by New Trier High School's...)

Film review

rumors. This is the reason for the oath of silence that he takes. One of the reasons for his ominous six feet, four inch frame. His size is menacing, but deceptive, because underneath is a young, sensitive boy hurt by these accusations. His big sig was the reason for Peach's proposition to Linderman, to be his bodyguard in exchange for his services. Ricky would get money and help with his homework. "Not interested," was Ricky's reply. Does that sound like a weirdo to you?

Active Producer Tony Bill succeeds in his debut as a director. He brings a warm, open style with sexual humor, which never takes a stronghold on the film. He camera observes all the problems of growing up (especially around high school, where the roots of all the problems start) without ever drowning on certain details that would slow down the pace. Instead, he is concerned with the brighter sides the growing friendship between Peach and Ricky and a message which is to the punch: confront problems directly. If people fail to do so always have a part in their life.

"My Bodyguard" is a warm, honest film that grapples firmly with the issues of being a teenager, friendship, and finding a realistic resolution to problems.

Purich adds talent, maturity to lineup

by MIKE HAMBACH
 "Come on Tubby, come on!" hollers soccer coach Sander Szabo. "You're running like a girl! Come on!"
 The Hawks are trailing Triton 4-1 midway through the first half on a disputed goal. So far, the Hawks haven't been able to muster much offense.
 "Oh Tubby, run!" screams Szabo. A whistle. Offenses against the Hawks. That's the third time Tubby. What's the matter, huh?" queries Szabo.
 The Hawks left winger looks up and strugs his shoulders. "I was 1 offense coach," he calls back to Szabo.
 "Then don't look like you were and run!" snaps Szabo.
 It wasn't Mike Purich's day. He was called offenses five times and took a verbal beating from Szabo during the game, although the Hawks managed to defeat Triton 2-1.

 "I said before the season," said the 26-year-old forward, "that I would score two goals per game." He laughs. "But it hasn't worked out that way."
 Purich has scored only once this year. In fact, his lone goal was the first Harper score of the season. It came against IIT in the Hawks 3-2 win.
 But Purich has added a sense of maturity, one he temped to say age, to the Hawks. "I feel I can help the team with my experience," he says.
 Purich came to America in 1983 from Beograd, Yugoslavia. He had played for the prestigious Red Star club in the Yugoslavian League and led the league in assists with 13 over 106 games, and that at the age of 14.
 Purich played in the major league, which in Yugoslavia is much different to our concept of major league. The Yugoslavian League is divided into the minors, majors, A, and professional divisions. Purich, though, thought he had a chance to make it if the pros.

 "It was my opinion that I was good enough to make it," he said. "If we had stayed in Yugoslavia, I always dreamed about it as a kid."
 Then, in 1980, a friend persuaded his father to come to America and work for him. Purich, though, stayed behind to finish grade school.
 Purich bypassed soccer when he got to America, but played four years of football at Crown High School. In fact, he didn't touch a soccer ball until he tried out for Chicago United Serb, a semi-pro team in 1973.
 He made the team, but a few months later, he was injured. He played for the Chicago Internationals in 1976 and in 1978. Purich started his own team, CV United - at the Northwest YMCA. The team went 7-1-1 in 1980. Meanwhile, scored three goals and had 28 assists.

 Now, in 1981, Purich, who wants to be a lawyer, has ended up at Harper. He came here because of Sander Szabo. Purich's verbal beating giver. They had played together in Chicago and Szabo convinced Purich that while he was preparing for his law studies, he could also help the Hawks' soccer team.
 Purich, who will soon be 26, is the oldest Hawk with the exception of Szabo.
 "It doesn't feel different," he said of the generation gap between himself and his teammates. "At first, I felt they were put off by my experiences. They're a great bunch of guys out there."

 The adjustment to American soccer hasn't been difficult either.
 "Soccer is played on longer balls here," he said. "There are not as many ballhandlers here as in Europe."
 Purich has also taken to watching the North American Soccer League.
 "They look as exciting. But one thing really bothers me is the penalty shot," he laughs.
 "It's a popular sport. People would go wild over the game. Now, in America, hardly anyone is out there. You just play for self-satisfaction. It's not like you don't play to show people how good you are because nobody's there."

Bolt tightens screws in tennis lineup

Martha Bolt has found it. The women's tennis coach wasn't sure about her doubles' line-up after her team's 5-4 loss to Rock Valley in the season opener. "I'm still not sure where people are going to be," she said.
 But, after Monday's 5-4 win over Oakton, she is. "I've got 'em," she said.
 Pam Moyer and Jacque Anderson, JoAnn Kuzik and Cathy Centanni, and Sharon Carlson and Jane Groek are the set doubles' line-up. Bolt will use for the rest of the year.
 Against Rock Valley, Moyer teamed with Carlson to win one doubles match and Centanni teamed with Groek for Harper's other doubles win against the Trojans.

Illinois Valley Tuesday in another conference match.
 The Hawks won two of the singles matches and two of the doubles matches in the NAC opener.
 Pam Moyer and Kathy Centanni won their singles matches. Moyer by forfeit over Mary Johnson, and Centanni by a 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 verdict over RV's Jody Sollar.
 In doubles, Moyer and Sharon Carlson, who lost her singles' match to Ellen Heidenrich 6-2, 6-2, defeated Tammy Soppa and Heidenrich, 6-2, 3-6, and 6-1. In the Hawks' other doubles win, Centanni and Jane Groek defeated Soklar and Kathy Swanson, 6-4, 5-7, and 6-3.

"I was very pleased," Bolt said after the loss. "I think at first they were nervous, but they settled down and played some good tennis."
 "I was just trying combinations, but I won't be sure until later this week."
 Bolt was very optimistic after her all-freshmen squad's first match.
 "They're a fine crew. Now they know," Bolt said. "what it's like to compete."

Hawks suffer recalled TD's, 25-12 loss

The Hawks football team can take consolation in that they could've won last Saturday. But the Hawks, who had two apparent touchdowns called back on penalties while stalling on two other drives, dropped to 0-2 in the NAAC after a 25-12 loss to Thornton.

The Hawks did score the first two times they had the ball. After a Bulldogs punt, Harper moved 64 yards in 16 plays for their first TD capped by quarterback Mike Choklad's 4-yard run.

Moments later, Brian Sander blocked a punt setting up a four-yard scoring pass from Choklad to tight end Demetrius Gaines to give the Hawks a 12-0 first quarter lead. Bulldogs quarterback Doug Sheets made it 12-7 on a four-yard run early in the second quarter. Ron Burke returned the ensuing kickoff 66 yards to the Thornton 46-yard line. The Hawks drove to the Bulldogs 12, but were stopped when a fourth-down pass fell incomplete.

The Hawks missed another scoring opportunity later in the quarter when Choklad was stopped on fourth-down and got out of the Bulldogs one-yard line.

A fumble at the Hawk eight-yard line set up another Thornton touchdown early in the third quarter. Sheets hit Rich Carr with a four-yard pass on fourth down to give the Bulldogs a 13-12 lead. Casey Griffin intercepted a Choklad pass moments later which set up Eric Graas' 13-yard run for another Bulldogs touchdown.

The Hawk got a bad break when Burke went 40 yards for an apparent touchdown at the end of the third quarter. But the play was called back because of an illegal motion penalty.

The Hawks had yet another TD called back in the fourth quarter. A clip was called on receiver Jeff Jensen after Choklad hit Bob Bily for a 30-yard touchdown play.

The final insult came when Thornton's Dino Ivory intercepted a Choklad pass and returned it 22 yards for another Bulldogs TD.

Choklad, in his first start, completed 10 of 22 passes for 15 yards. Agaimi Rock Valley in the Hawks opener two weeks ago, the freshman was good on six of 10 passes for 101 yards and one touchdown.

Choklad was the No. 3 QB on the Hawks roster until No. 2 quarterback Mike Bily quit. Choklad figures to be the starter again this Saturday when the Hawks face DuPage. The Chapparrals, who are 1-0 in NAAC play, racked up over 400 yards on offense in their 25-0 over Wright while holding Wright to under 100 total yards.

Szabo's not pleased with winning team

It wasn't pretty, but the Hawks 2-1 win over Triton last Saturday didn't have to be.

"It was a very disappointing game," said coach Sander Szabo afterwards. There were so many things we did badly. They just completely forgot what they're supposed to do in certain situations. I thought we were a better team."

That's pretty harsh talk about a team that's 2-0. But the Hawks made no one forget last year's team despite their victory.

"Last year's team gave everything," said Szabo. "They all wanted to win. This year we don't have desire."

Triton took a 1-0 lead midway through the first half on a disputed goal, when the ball took a bounce off the football crossbar behind the Harper net and into the Harper goal. The ball is dead as soon as it hits the crossbar, but the referee said he didn't see the ball touch the crossbar.

The infuriated Hawks, who picked up two yellow cards in the first half alone, scored five minutes later when Marty Ponceas drilled a 25-foot shot from the right side.

John Frelz was injured late in the half when he was unintentionally elbowed in the eye while going up for a head ball. That almost set off a bench-clearing.

Another fight almost started when Rick Pulk and two Trojans got into a mix-up in front of the Triton net. All three were carded.

The Hawks went ahead for good midway through the second half when forward Mark Pistoria scored on a breakaway. For the game, the Hawks outshot Triton 22-14.

opener at IIT and made 10 saves in the Hawks 3-2 win. Todd was even awarded an assist on the winning goal—the second assist of his career.

Todd got his first shutout of the year Monday when the Hawks beat Aurora, 1-0. Szabo was duly impressed with his team's turnaround over two days between games. "They played a helluva game," he said. "They deserved to win."

Now the Hawks move on to Kewanee Thursday and then to Trinity next Monday before their home opener against DuPage next Wednesday.

The Hawks, though, have their problems. Despite holding an edge over Triton in the battle for Region IV tournament seeding, the Hawks have yet to face Wauhansee, their No. 1 rival for the No. 1 seed. Wauhansee has already tied Triton 0-0 and beaten DuPage 2-0.

The Hawks also have a problem with speed.

"We tried to slow things down to our pace," Szabo said after Saturday's win. "but we couldn't do it. We're too slow to use the skills we have. We can't find the time to put what we have into effect."

There is, however, a catch to all of this. The Hawks played Triton on astro-turf, which hasn't played on it.

"We're not used to it," Szabo said. "I don't like to play on it."

Soccer sails to 2-1 victory over Triton

As the soccer team unburied the boys last Saturday, they were met by three Triton fans.

"What's your record?" asked one of them to me.

"One-and-one," I replied rather magnanimously.

"You mean," he sneered back, "one-and-one?"

Rather flummoxed, I proceeded into the rafter's locker room.

In the room, there was a message on the blackboard: Defeat a champions Himmler. I wondered, does that mean us them?

"No matter, we were going to win anyway."

about beating Triton. It's fun as hell. Saturday was certainly no different. On the Trojans astro turf, the Hawks put it to them and won.

It wasn't easy, it wasn't pretty, it wasn't by much, but it was fun.

Midway through the first half, Triton scored the first goal of the game. It was headed, though, because it had hit the football crossbar, the net and bounced back into play. In any situation when the ball hits the uprights of a football goalpost, the play is called dead. No so, however, in this case.

Inflated, the Hawks struggled to bounce back. Finally, Marty Ponceas scored on a shot from the far right side to tie the score 1-1.

At halftime, I rushed to the locker room where I called Triton's disputed goal good. He explained to me what I already knew and then added, "I just didn't see the ball hit the crossbar."

I was tempted to point out to him that he said, "even looking at the ball when it hit the crossbar. But I thought since the better part of valor.

The game had been played as you would a Bear-Poker game, or a Yankee-Hed Sox showdown. Forward John Frelz went down with an eye injury in the first half, nearly causing a bench-clearing. A few moments later, Dan Reynolds was given a yellow card. That, too, nearly caused a riot.

The second half was just as bitter. The Hawks' Mark Pistoria finally put the game in the history books with a goal early in the half. The Trojans didn't quit, however, and came within 10 yards of scoring, but hard thought many of the players.

When the game had finally ended, three players had gone down for the count. None was seriously hurt. There were five yellow cards handed out, and many of those could have turned into ejections.

As the teams went to their opposite corners, the Hawk's Frank Binetti called out to the Trojan coach.

"Why don't you teach your players how to play soccer?" he bellowed. "This isn't boxing."

At that, five Trojans looked up as if in response to Binetti's challenge. It was, however, an empty threat—no one might

Greenhouse joint effort of Harper, District 214

There is a new greenhouse just behind Bldg. V, not filled with plants, but with pipes and cement blocks, a portable chalkboard, wooden frames and empty plant pots.

"The structure is finished, but all the controls are not in," said Ms. Sue Kowall, a District 214 high school instructor in the vocational horticultural program at Harper. The students from the heating and air conditioning class are working on them, she said.

The students learn everything possible from building and painting benches.

to repairing and cutting water pipes, to heating, training and setting plants. "Lou Sharrer and I teach the students to set up a greenhouse as realistically as they can," she said.

"We have about 60 students coming from 10 high schools in the district every day."

"We have a two-year program with the students coming into the program in their junior or senior years."

"We do floral design, landscaping, soils, tree I.D. We grow Easter lilies and poinsettias. After the plants are grown, the students have to advertise and sell their plants."

"This fall the high school students are growing poinsettias to sell at Christmas time, but until the new greenhouse is ready, the college has allowed us to keep plants in their other greenhouse."

"We expect it [the greenhouse] to be functionally operational by the end of October, and completed within a year," said Jim Narmt, Assistant Professor of Refrigeration and Air Conditioning (RAC).

The greenhouse is a cooperative project between high school District 214 and Harper, he said.

"The difficult part is controls and if [the job] has to be done in a workman-like manner."

"We have done some research and have found we have to be able to maintain a temperature range between 50 to 80 degrees for the various plants with the ability to maintain 70 degree temperature when it is 20 degrees below zero outside," said Peter Chase, a part-time instructor in RAC.

Relative humidity standards were also given so that the plants will not develop a fungus.

"In short, we had to be up on our botany," said Narmt.

"Work on the greenhouse project gives the students good practical on the job experience. Two of the students who were working on the last greenhouse are now instructors in the program."

Narmt estimated that Harper is saving about two-thirds of the cost by using Harper students. It would cost at least $100,000 if done outside the school, he said.

Pankinin named ICCSAA president

by JEFF EVERS
Jeanne Pankinin, director of student activities, was recently named president of the Illinois Community College Student Activities Association (ICCSAA).

As president, Pankinin's activities include developing the ICCSAA constitution, the study of thons (dance thons, marathons, studythons, etc.) and finalizing preparations for the fall ICCSAA leadership conference scheduled for Oct. 10-11.

Thirty-five of the 50 community colleges in Illinois are members of the ICCSAA which has been a state recognized organization for the past three years. The main thrust of the organization is the promotion of self-interest and development of students and staff members throughout the state.

"Student Activities people are doers," said Pankinin.

"The professionals involved are extremely talented, experienced, well-meaning people who are excited to work with. Together as an association, we can successfully shape our own future and the future welfare of students throughout the state."

Pankinin serves as director of student activities at Harper and is currently involved with the Cultural Arts Board.

Sssh! Safe now quiet study zone

With its constant hustle and bustle and the droning noise of pinball machines, the cafeteria seems like the last place in the world to do any quiet studying. But ask anyone at WHCM, the campus radio station, and they will tell otherwise.

Due to complaints from a few members of the campus community, WHCM shut down its speakers in the south end of the cafeteria. Thus, the "quiet zone" was born. This area was brought in line with those wishing a quiet place to study, talk or read in mind. Never mind the library or even the Bldg. A lounge, it just seemed to be the only place to get "real" work done in the cafeteria.

The Bldg. A lounge is an area where students sometimes gather to socialize. True, WHCM broadcasts can be heard there but without the constant coming and going of students and interruptions from cafeteria personnel cleaning tables it is possible to concentrate on the books. And the steady rhythm of the music isn't half as annoying as the erratic whirring of the pinball machines.

And how many times are students reminded "that this is a quiet study area" when visiting the library? With its seemingly countless rows of study carrels and numerous "couch" chairs, the library is the ideal place to do any intense studying. There are no distractions to speak of there (except for the sliding of the card catalogs and the hum of the fluorescent lights, of course.)

The cafeteria is the hub of relaxation and casual conversation. There students can meet friends for lunch, relax and even feed quarters into the pinball machines. It is possible to do homework there despite the roar of activity. In addition, the cafeteria is the common denominator between students, faculty and campus personnel. By taking music out of half of the cafeteria, student rights are violated. The radio station only broadcasts in a few campus buildings and is restricted from the library. Therefore, those wishing a quiet area have more but anyone who is forced to sit in the "quiet zone" for lack of tables in the music range forfeit their listening privileges.

Clearly, the scales are out of balance. Special areas designated for quiet study have been set aside. But now the main social center is being dissected to provide yet another quiet area. Never have so many had so much to be ungrateful about so much to lose.

Enrollment on upswing, college growing

Each semester, a report prepared at the end of registration gives current enrollment figures and comparison with previous years. This fall, the report indicates that 20,799 individuals have enrolled for classes at Harper and that 17,917 of these students are taking degree credit courses. Each of these figures is 6.8 percent above the enrollments for fall, 1979.

State aid to the College is based on a different enrollment figure known as "full-time equivalent" (FTE). This is the total that results when 12 degree credit hours is considered one full-time student's course load. This semester, the degree credit hours taken equal 6,317 full-time student loads. This represents an 8.3 percent increase in Harper's FTE over fall, 1979. Under the current formula, state aid based on this fall's enrollment will be paid to the College in 1982.

It is a pleasure to report the enrollment increase, and to wish all the new and returning students success in their work at Harper. Many of you will experience no difficulty in college studies, but there are occasions when even the best student may need a little extra help. We at Harper College care about your success. In fact, we care enough to place the responsibility on you, the student, to avail yourself of the assistance available to you at the College. Instructors post office hours during which students can schedule appointments. Tutoring service is available free of charge to all students. The Learning Skills Laboratory can assist students in developing more effective study skills for college work. Student Development faculty members can be consulted about academic career or personal problems. The many support services at Harper are intended to help every student succeed, and I encourage you to take advantage of them at the first sign of difficulty. I reported to you last month on the Fulbright Fellowship awarded to Associate Professor Kenneth Jauch, enabling him to spend a year teaching in Korea. He has agreed to correspond with college staff during the year, so that you may share his experiences through The Harbinger.

Campus activities for the semester are numerous and I encourage you to participate in the programs available to students and district residents. If you have not yet obtained a schedule of cultural activities for the fall, you can inquire about coming events at the Student Activities Office in Bldg. A. Fall athletic schedules available in Bldg. M list many intercollegiate activities you can attend free of charge. The schedule of open recreation hours is also available in Bldg. M and you are invited to take advantage of the pool, handball/racquetball courts and other activities offered in this facility.

"Challenges, Lifestyles, and Careers for the 80's" is the title of a conference scheduled for the first three Thursday evenings in November. The conference will explore the Futurist Movement, concepts of world family and global village and careers of the future that will be meaningful in contributing to solution of world problems. Questions of ecology, world politics, and human relations will be addressed. Many Harper College students share concerns in these areas, and the conference should be of great interest.

I hope you are finding the semester at Harper busy, productive and enjoyable, and will continue to find much of value at your community college.

Move over Reggie, make room for Temple

If Anthropology teacher Charles Norris had a steady bar named after him, he would call it TEMPLE. "It would be a cozy bar with a little something buried in the center of each one," Norris said. That typifies his interest in Mexico and the pyramids among other things.

Norris became interested in his field at Shimer College in Mt. Carroll, Illinois where he received his B.A. He took a class on Islamic Civilization and that turned him on to it.

"I get influenced if someone demonstrates to me that they have something beneficial to me, then I'll pursue it," Norris said. "I get interested in what people teach. If I feel weak in a certain area, I take a course in it. I want to find out what other people know."

Norris, who is Harper's only full-time Anthropology teacher speaks Spanish fluently and is presently studying German. He received his M.A. from the Universidad de Mexico de las Americas and is presently studying on weekends to earn his Doctorate from Southern Illinois University.

Besides teaching here and in Mexico, Norris has been to many different places. He worked for the Peace Corps in Peru, and also in the Amazon for the Peruvian Navy. His digs have taken him to Arizona, here in the Midwest and Mexico.

When he was in Central Mexico, he used to watch the sun rise. "I'd go at night and sleep on the pyramids. In the morning, I'd drink coffee and brandy and let it happen," Norris said. He also slept in the ruins in Mexico. "There were watchmen, but you either had to avoid them or pay them to leave you alone."

In his spare time, Norris likes gardening (pinto beans, corn, squash and sunflowers), and reading (Wallace Stevens, A.E. Housman and Edward Fitzgerald). Presently, he and his wife are rebuilding an old farmhouse they bought and live in. He doesn't consider these hobbies, "they're just things that suck hours out of the day," Norris said.

He also loves to travel. He likes new places and new people. His favorite place is Vina del Mar. "It's on the Spanish coast. It has good food, good wine and good beaches—excellent for swimming."

When it comes to Indians, though, his "core interest" is the Northwestern part of Mexico. He is very interested in European history and their first contact with the Indians. He also wants to find out "how the Indians reacted with the arrival of the Spanish and how they've changed in 500 years," said Norris. "I have old interests in the Aztec Indians, Indians in Mexico and the Mayan language."

All in all, Chuck Norris enjoys his work and teaching. "I've never considered any other profession."

WHAT COULD THE ARMY POSSIBLY OFFER A BRIGHT PERSON LIKE YOU?

Drop your guard for a minute.

Even though you're in a two-year college right now, there are many aspects of the Army you might find very attractive. Maybe even irresistible. See for yourself.

ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

If you're thinking of eventually going to a four-year college, it's not too early to start thinking about an ROTC scholarship.

There are 2-year and even 1-year ROTC scholarships available.

They cover tuition, books, and lab fees. Plus $100 a month living allowance. Naturally, they're very competitive. Because besides helping you towards your bachelor's degree, an ROTC scholarship helps you towards the gold bars of an Army Officer. It's worth looking into.

WINGS & A CHOPPER

With two years of college under your belt, you can get preferential consideration for Warrant Officer Flight Training.

If you pass all the tests and qualify, you'll go through 40 weeks of rigorous and valuable training.

You'll earn the distinctive bars of a warrant officer and the silver wings of an Army aviator. You'll have at least 175 hours of flight instruction, 40 hours with a flight simulator, 4 weeks night qualification, and enough classroom work in aerodynamics, meteorology and aerial navigation to last a lifetime.

The result is a rewarding, responsible and prestigious position as an Army helicopter pilot.

STRIPES FROM THE START

What you've learned in college has already earned you a promotion in the Army.

It's true. If you join the Army with two years of college, you can start two pay grades higher. Instead of being an E-1 with an empty sleeve, you can come in as E-3 with stripes.

It means about $60 more a month in your paycheck. And a lot more opportunity in the long run. Since you'll be literally wearing your education on your sleeve, your talents won't go unnoticed by your superiors.

And starting out right can really help you make the most of the Army.

A BONUS FOR PART-TIME WORK

You can get a $1,500 bonus just for enlisting in some Army Reserve units. Or up to $2,000 in educational benefits.

You also get paid for your Reserve duty. It comes out to about $1,000 a year for 16 hours a month and two weeks annual training.

And there's a special program that lets you fit your Army Reserve active duty around your school schedule.

It's something to consider. Because even if you went to a two-year college because it was less expensive than a four-year college, you know by now that it still isn't cheap.

A CHANCE TO GO ON WITH COLLEGE

If you're thinking you might even go further with your college education, the Army can help there, too.

A few years in the Army can help you get not only the money for tuition, but also the maturity to use it wisely.

The Army has a program in which money you save for college is matched two-for-one by the government. Then, if you qualify, generous bonuses are added to that.

So 2 years of service can get you up to $7,400 for college, 3 years up to $12,100, and 4 years up to $14,100. In addition, bonuses up to $3,000 are available for certain 4-year enlistments in selected skills.

Add in all the experience and maturity you can get, and you can see how the Army can send you back to college a richer person in more ways than one.

We hope these Army opportunities have intrigued you as well as surprised you.

Because there is indeed a lot the Army can offer a bright person like you.

Kansas cooling down, Cassidy kicking up dust

One major trait that a critic must possess is the ability to be cynical. For me, this comes naturally. While working as a clerk at Flip Side records, a typical day would include conversations like this: customer: "how is that new Kansas album?" Kris: "oh really good, it has some nice vocals work on it." The album is sold and we're both happy. I'm doing my job, and he has "fun" to listen to. I'm marketing the plastic music, and he has party albums for the whole month; until the next mass-produced piece of forgettable music arrives at my store.

Don't get me wrong, not all retail record clerks lack the quality of albums. It is a matter of taste - if I had said that the latest Kansas album was the greatest atrocity since "Corvettone," by Styx, my customer would still clutch it eagerly as I rang up his purchase. The only difference would be that he would know where his musical taste stands on my point scale: a big zero. "Big deal," you reply. "Big deal," I agree. And the latest Kansas album, "Auditions," really is a cheap package of two-cent wisdom (sooh, check out those meaningful lyrics) with music more predictable than AC/DC. Is it progressive? No. This band has relied on their "style" much i e o l n g f e r t h a t.

"Progressive" means "moving in a new direction." Kansas has been sitting still since Don Kirshner delivered them to us. The "add insult to injury department" - the biggest form of self-worship has got to be the solo album. Kerry Livgren and Steve Walsh, both of the aforementioned pretentious mob, have each tried to make a statement. Specifics aren't necessary: both albums sound the same. Both albums sound like Kansas Livgren's composition, "The Mask of the Great Deceiver," continues the embarrassing lyrical tradition.

To "create" this music, start with a Tes tape; add a pinch of King Crimson and a dash of Styx. Beat gently; add that mystery ingredient, commercial attractiveness, and then throw in a gram of Starcraft for the hell of it. When finished, disguise your product in a color of sleeve that will attract the eye of any suburban teenager, even when he isn't drugged.

OK, Kansas is a little flat. Get this: the new Shaun Cassidy album is actually listenable. Todd Rundgren produces it, so naturally it sounds like him. But so what, it's such a neat collection of songs. Shaun hasn't written any yet, so we're treated in new versions of "Once Bitten, Twice Shy" (Mott the Hoople), "The Book I Read" (Talking Heads), "Beet Beets" (David Bowie), and "It's My Life," a song recorded by Eric Burdon and the Animals in 1964. Add those to some Rundgren-penned material and, hey, Shaun is transformed. Sort of like Jilly-Pop popcorn.

Cassidy's voice isn't bad, but how much of it is real? At least half of the vocals have been treated mechanically in some way. Utopia appears on every track so it's all in the family. The new versions of the old songs are done with taste, especially "It's My Life." It's slowed down to about half the speed of the original—really moody. "Once Bitten, Twice Shy" tends to grate on the eardrums, but that is probably because it is produced to sound rather stinky. Maybe Todd's auditory range is screwed up; it seems that every recording he produces has that remarkable trebleness to it. Specter had his "wall of sound"; is this the Rundgren "wall of tin"?

The title track, "Wasp," is the standard; it is a driving song written by Todd, of course, that is a put-down of our trend-shifting lifestyle. Bravo! Death to the sacred unicorn; and didn't we all know that new wave would sell out and be cheapened? "Wasp" is complete with a semi-disc beat, but don't let that scare you away. Herein lies mean music.

Does anything affect our identities more than music? The local axisheads, spikeheads, pinheads, and hippies have their respective musical genres—and when the best new ones come along, our identities will shift again. And who is left to listen to Christopher Cross? Does anybody really like that stuff? Perhaps I should shut up for this week.

Ooh la la!

Status jean ads insults to intelligence

I am guilty. I did not about "live" in a theater, nor did I get the color of my finger licks' and send it to his computer.

I do not like designer jeans (Please to note this year, if you must send death threats be kind, my minn reads all my mail, and it wouldn't look nice in my scribbles.)

"Oh la la Season, oh la la Season, oh la la Season." Do you know what that means? I bought my box of Captain Crunch that said, "break all secret codes with mystery code breaker inside." In my box, all I got was a sheet of paper that said, "Inspected by 24." I'm pretty sure that the "oh la la," is a mating call for an Oster Mongolian Yeti, and the "Season" part, is for the insect, where the mating will take place (if only the code breaker were inside.)

"Bonjour action, Bonjour action, Bonjour action, jeans." I took German for one semester here at Harper, but I always thought that "Bonjour," was French, and that it meant hello. "Action," being a true American, I can have only one meaning for that word: Hollywood. And that is the most populous spot on Earth full of lies and phonies.

Mike Simkus
...abstract analyst

"Jordache, the Jordache look is for you." I'm sorry, but I do not wear make-up. Isn't that what "Jordache" is, make-up? "Zena, whenever you want to be a woman." I never wanted to be, nor will I ever be a woman. That commercial must have been written for the Wendy Carlos of this world, or the male tennis players who later in their careers turn into females.

"Whenever I get paid, I buy Calvin's. And whatever is leftover, I pay the rest." I really feel sorry for the girl who does this commercial. She gets paid to lay on her back, wiggle her fancy in front of the TV camera, and we never get to see her face.

What do all of the TV commercials ads go to? I'm not sure I do know however, that I will never buy a pair of designer jeans with applications on them. Probably because of the ads. If they are going to insult my intelligence, the very least they could have done was to have gotten all of the faces and phonies of Hollywood who are washed up, who have no career, to endorse designer jeans. Just like all of the dumb athletes who peddle beer.

I really wonder too, who would wear designer jeans? Some girls, wear the pants so tight that if she had a quarter in her pocket, you would be able to tell if it was heads, or tails. That look, certainly does not look comfortable.

And speaking of tails, I thought this was the "modern world," you know, equal rights. Do girls want us guys to start ogling publicly again?

And there are some people who wear designer jeans who are ten sizes too big. Aren't designer jeans for slender, sensible people? At least, that is what the TV ads say.

Hey, I don't care what you girls say about guys wearing several layers of clothing. They have always looked too pretty, if you know what I mean.

I am guilty of not liking designer jeans. Perhaps, I am not normal. Perhaps, I am not alone.

As Henry David Thoreau wrote in "Walden," "The necessaries of life for man in this climate may, accurately measured, be distributed under several heads: food, clothing, shelter and fuel; for not till we have secured these are we prepared to entertain the true problems of life with freedom and a prospect of success. . . . The grand necessity then, for our bodies, is to keep warm, to keep the vital heat in us."

DuPage buries Hawks, 40-14

John Eliask has surely seen better days.

After taking a 40-14 battering from DuPage last Saturday, the Hawks travel to Illinois Valley. And the Hawks certainly won't be mistaken for "Alice in Wonderland."

Illinois Valley is the No. 1 ranked team in Illinois and the No. 4 ranked team in the country. Said DuPage head coach Bob McDonagald, "They are awesome. I V is probably the greatest junior college team to hit the planet earth."

Heading into Saturday's game, however, the Hawks have an interesting situation at quarterback. Scott Chiodo, who took over the No. 1 QB spot over Dave Loch two weeks ago, injured his knee before the DuPage game and was replaced by Tim Tyrrell. Tyrrell did a credible job against the Chaparrals, however, and will be the probable starter against Illinois Valley.

Football

Against DuPage, Tyrrell completed four of 14 passes for 40 yards, while rushing for 17 more. "We went with Tim," said Eliask, "because of his potential. He's obviously not going to be perfect his first time out, but he showed a lot that we can be encouraged about."

Hawk running back Ron Burke gained 100 yards on 15 carries to pace Harper's rushing attack. DuPage took a 15-0 lead on a 15-yard run by Barry Riddick and a six-play, 28-yard drive. The Hawks came back with an eight play, 67-yard drive in the second quarter to narrow the Chaparral lead. 18-7. Tyrrell pitched to Burke who went 45 yards for the score.

DuPage scored again when Hank Cerkovitz hit receiver Bill Cunningham on a 25-yard pass play that set up the Chaparral TD.

Late in the first half, Dan Foley recovered a fumble at the Hawk 45. The Hawks then went the distance on six plays for their final TD capped Tyrrell's 20-yard pass to Mark Hudson.

DuPage scored three more times in the second half en route to their 40-14 win. All totaled, the Chaps amassed 500 yards, including 397 on the ground. Riddick led DuPage with 200 yards in only three quarters work.

"DuPage was the best team we've played so far," said Eliask. "They're a sophomore-laden team with big, strong running backs and linemen. They just ran the football down our throats. Penalties hurt us, too."

The most embarrassing penalty came in the third quarter when Tyrrell unloaded a school-record 76-yard punt. The play, however, was called back on an illegal motion penalty against the Hawks.

"I've got to be realistic about this year," said Eliask. "We're probably the youngest team in our conference this season. On a junior college level, the difference between a freshman and a sophomore is comparable to the difference between a sophomore and a senior at a four-year school."

The Hawks, now 6-3 in NAC play, have yet to face Illinois Valley, Triton, or Joliet. And with a freshman at quarterback, it appears Eliask may have a long season ahead of him.

Hawks' (4-0-1) struggling

Sander Szabo has struggled for much of the early season with an offensive front line that hasn't come close to its preseason hopes.

That hopes not bode well for the second-year soccer coach, whose team faces Waukesha Saturday.

The Chiefs, beaten by the Hawks twice last year, have already beaten Harper's prime rivals for the Region IV no. 1 ranking. Triton and DuPage. The Hawks have also defeated Triton, but have yet to face DuPage.

Waukesha has moved up from the No. 4 Region seed to the No. 2 spot behind the Hawks.

The Hawks 4-0-1, however, are improving. Against Trinity Monday, Rick Pulu touched his first net kick as Harper won 6-1. Fullbacks Frank Binetti and Chris Small also scored for the Hawks.

"It was a good game," said Szabo. "We are playing more together as a unit. We're starting to show our potential."

And not a moment too soon. The Hawks will face DuPage Wednesday, Waukesha Saturday, Triton this

Soccer

Wednesday), and DuPage (Oct. 8) again in the next two weeks.

"I suspect DuPage will give us a hard time," said Szabo. "If we do well against them and we're on our way to a good season."

One advantage distinctly in the Hawks favor is the fact that they will face DuPage, Waukesha and Triton at home before traveling to DuPage. The Hawks, however, have not been without their problems. The Hawks tied Kishwaukee last Thursday 1-1, but probably should've won.

"I thought this was the best team we've played so far," said Szabo. "We're getting the chances, but we just can't score."

Another trouble spot had been speed. "We're too slow to use the skills we have," Szabo said after Thursday's tie. "We can't find the time to put into effect what we have."

The return of Pulu to midfield has alleviated some of the problem.

NAC recruiting . . .

and recruiting players." The penalties for recruiting violations range from a slap on the wrist to expulsion from the conference.

Triton, for example, is on probation. All that means, however, is Triton has been given a warning. "It means," says Beholdt, "in correct the situation or sterner measures will be enforced."

Should Triton further violate the recruiting by-laws within the next year, the school would be suspended from winning the NAC championship in any sport and would not be allowed to participate in post-season play.

Any further violation would result in Triton's expulsion from the NAC.

That sounds simple. But there is yet another gray area in an athlete who chooses to attend a school other than the one in his or her district, but in the same conference, violating any re-enrolling by-laws. That depends on whether the athlete has been contacted by the school prior to the decision of which school to attend.

The recruiting philosophies of each school plays a big part in where and how vigorous to recruit. Harper, for example, does not, as a rule, recruit out-of-state athletes. Illinois Valley does.

"They do a good job of recruiting in other states," says Beholdt. "That's a matter of philosophy. Our recruiting philosophy is oriented in in-district students. We will put a majority of time recruiting in-district athletes. But that is not to say we won't recruit out-of-district athletes."

A fair cross-section of Harper's actual recruiting philosophy can be assessed by a quick check of Harper's all-man football roster. It is from in-district, six are from out-of-state, five from in-conference out-of-district, and the rest are out-of-conference out-of-district athletes.

WINGING IT. Harper quarterback Tim Tyrrell scrambles for some of his 17 yards against DuPage last Saturday. Tyrrell replaced Dave Loch, who injured a knee, at QB and completed four of 14 passes for 67 yards as the Hawks lost, 40-14. (Photo by Lori Lynn Goy.)

First there were six. . .

If volleyball coach Lynn Hitchcock ever writes a book, she might call it And Then There Were Six.

That, anyway, is how many girls Hitchcock started the 1963 volleyball season with. And her septuplets in now 0-4, 0-2 in NAC play, after Tuesday's 15-3, 15-4, and 15-3 loss to DuPage.

"We just did not serve," Hitchcock said afterwards. "We get a chance to serve and we blow it. We've never had to worry about serving."

The Hawks actually led the three game 5-0 before falling to the Chaparrals.

"We had too many common mistakes," said Hitchcock. Hitchcock took over the volleyball program in the last week of August. Only four girls came to the first practice. Since then, however Hitchcock has added six more girls. With the exception of sophomores Laura Hager and Teresa Heick, the team is made up entirely of freshman - three who have never played before.

The team, though, has steadily been improving. The Hawks lost their opening match to Wright 15-7, 15-9, and 15-6. They then lost to Miramonte Valley 15-3, 15-4, and 15-5. "They were well-organized," said Hitchcock.

Then the Hawks fell to Thornton by 15-9, 15-13, and 15-11 scores. Consider that Hitchcock had only six girls to work with through the first three matches.

Now she has 10 and a decent starting line-up of Debbie Dilks, Hager, Karen Kamradt, Terri Bauer, Ann Astrowaki, and Heick.

"We have a pretty good line-up," said Hitchcock. "By next week, we'll know all the possibilities."

Thursday, the Hawks face Kennedy-King before facing Rock Valley at home next Wednesday in a conference match.

Against Kennedy King is Hitchcock hoping for "a minimum one-game win. We've blocked the most we've ever blocked," she said after the DuPage match. I think this team has the capability.

Recruiting no small business in N4C

by MIKE BAMBACH
(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first part of a two part series looking at recruiting and eligibility problems faced by junior colleges. In part one, we analyze recruiting and its elements in the N4C.)

Recruiting athletes has never been easy for junior colleges. In particular, Harper. With the accent on athletics that many schools have taken, however, the recruitment of athletes has become a major issue in junior college athletics.

ITEM - Triton, one of Harper's rivals in the North Central Community College Conference, was put on probation for recruiting a baseball player that was in Harper's recruiting area. ITEM - University of Illinois quarterback Mike White was disallowed to play football in the Big Ten because of discrepancies in White's academic transfer from a California junior college. That decision has since been overruled and White is being allowed to play until the Big Ten sets a hearing about White's case.

The difference between the consequences of Item 1 and Item 2 are very large. But both have stemmed from a common factor: intercollegiate recruiting.

"In today's time," says Harper Athletic Coordinator Roger Bechtold, "I think it's necessary to recruit. You have to show an interest in area athletes because of the variety of two- and four-year schools.

In the N4C, there are four basic guidelines in recruiting. • The N4C "encourage" in-district recruiting. For example, Harper "owns" the district including the 14 Mid-Southwest League schools, St. Valior, and Sacred Heart. This makes up Harper's in-district.

• The N4C forbids any N4C school to recruit from another N4C school's district. For example, Wright's in-district includes the entire city of Chicago. Therefore, no N4C school can recruit an athlete in Chicago.

• The N4C does provide for a "transfer-waiver form." For example, say an athlete from Chicago wants to join Harper's football team. He would first have the Wright athletic director sign a transfer-waiver form to allow the athlete to attend Harper without violating any N4C recruiting-by-laws.

• The N4C provides a "chargeback." For example, if an athlete who was attending Harper wanted to play ice hockey in a sport Harper does not participate in, he would be granted a chargeback allowing him to play ice hockey at a school that does have that sport on its intercollegiate program.

say for instance, DuPage.

These are the restrictions put on N4C schools in regard to recruiting. There are, however, many gray areas.

Take, for instance, Oakland. Would it be a violation of N4C recruiting-by-laws to recruit an athlete from Oakland's district? No. According to the N4C by-laws, you can recruit in any school district except for the schools contained in the same conference. That includes the recruitment of out-of-state athletes. That, in turn, involves recruiting philosophy.

"What we're trying to stop," says Bechtold, "is the other schools coming into our district."

Practices fine, meets another story

Martha Bolt hasn't lost it, she's just misplaced it.

The women's tennis coach found her doubles coach found the Hawks 2-4 in a win over Oakland two Monday's again and again last Thursday when the Hawks bombed Triton 7-2.

But Tuesday, Illinois Valley buried Harper 8-1.

"It just wasn't good tennis," said Bolt. "We could've beaten them. We didn't play tennis. We were down in spirit."

The Hawks, now 1-1 in N4C play, face Thornton Monday and DuPage next Thursday in conference matches. Saturday, they will be at the Cleo Tanner Invitational in Naperville.

Against Triton, Pam Moyer, Kathy Certanino, Sharon Carlson, and Jane Groark won singles matches, and Jacque Anderson-Moyer, JoAnn Kalk-Costello, and Carlson-Groark won the three doubles matches.

"We looked real good out there," said Bolt. "The girls are really coming around."
That wasn't the case Monday.

"Somedays they come out to play tennis. Some days I wonder," she said. Every day at practice I'm very pleased,

Tennis

but every match putting into play what we've practiced. I'm disappointed.

Against Illinois Valley, only Moyer won her singles match. "I was extremely proud of Pam," said Bolt of her No. 1 singles player.

Bolt remains staunchly optimistic about her team's progress.

"We do have a very, very good chance in advance to regionals," she said. "I think they're understanding the seriousness of it."

Consistency remains the keyword.

"Against Triton," said Bolt, "we played some consistent tennis. We were just up for the match. We had fewer three set match wins, which are getting the absolute worst out of us."

Against Illinois Valley, the Hawks lost all eight matches in two sets. Moyer, the only Harper winner, won her singles match in two straight sets.

"We're just gonna have to get out there and keep trying," said Bolt.

Oh, Oh, what to name a girl?

Women's athletics are on the rise and I, considered by many to be a leading chauvinist pig, will be the first to credit the female gender for it.

I will even go so far as to suggest that women be allowed to nickname their teams, instead of taking the macho image monikers given to women's sports by schools.

But that won't do. Women's sports should be closely related to the nicknames of their male counterparts.

I do, however, have two suggestions.

Mike Bambach

...on sports

There are ways of distinguishing a woman's team from a men's team. I mean, of course, by nickname.

First, simply place a "Lady" in front of any school moniker and viola. Take, for example, the Hawks. A simple adjustment and we have Lady Hawks.

No system is fool proof, though and this is no exception. Let the Big Ten schools serve as my example.

Only Northwestern has nicknamed specifically for women's teams: Wildkitt.

What about Illinois: the Lady Fighting Illini? Or Purdue: Lady Holetmakers? Or Minnesota: Lady Gophers?

Ah. The solution is easy. Adopt the suffix ette after each of the women's nicknames and you get the same result.

Instead of saying Fighting Illini, how bout Fighting Illinette? Or Bolernakerettes? Or Hoosierettes? Or Hawkettes?

Other. Votes, quotes, and thoughts on the fourth full week of athletics.

• She, don't ask who'll win Saturday between the Hawks and Illinois Valley. (Cheer - It won't be the Hawks. If the Hawks do win, I'll try out for Homecoming Queen. There's your incentive boys, so let's go!)

• While on the subject of football, I would like to extend an apology to Hawk quarterback Scott Chokoid for calling him for the past three weeks. His name was blurred in a roster sheet and it looked like Mike to me. Besides, Mike isn't such a bad name. Anyway Scott, my apologies.

• Finally, I would like to thank all of those out there who voted for me in the recent Student Senate elections. I garnered 19 votes - not bad, considering I wasn't even running. I also finished fifth (22 more votes, and I would have got in.

Harper meets Westmoreland with mixed crowd reactions

by MICHAEL SIMEK
"Our national strength is like a three legged stool. One leg is our economic strength, a second leg is our military strength, and finally the third leg is our moral strength. A weakness in any leg will destabilize the structure. It will certainly and seriously weaken our national posture," said General William Westmoreland before a Harper audience. He continued, "unhappily, we see a splitting in our country, of all three legs."

General William Westmoreland, a graduate and superintendent of West Point, a Harvard Business School graduate, vice commander of forces in Vietnam, and once Army Chief of Staff, gave a lecture at Harper that brought some of the audience to a standing ovation, and to one Vietnam veteran a screaming exit from the lecture hall.

The focus of General Westmoreland's speech was an appraisal of the international environment, and of the military today. He spoke of the recent crisis in Iran, the Russian occupation of Afghanistan, and possible United States involvement in future foreign affairs.

Gen Westmoreland talked of a United States' wish list. He said, "On this list, I would say number one is to avoid war, number two to protect our political democracy, three to achieve domestic and international tranquility, four to protect our physical environment, five to improve our standard of living and to bring those less fortunate than us. Unfortunately there are forces at work that make our progress with an unreality during our lifetime, our children's lifetime, and our children's children's lifetime.

One dominant force at work, according to Gen Westmoreland, is the Soviet Union. The General said, "The Soviets are preparing for the long run. Soviet self-interest voided to communist ideology is the driving force behind their actions. In their force for world leadership, they view the contest as a life or death struggle between two markedly different systems. They perceive the United States as their only natural obstacle."

Westmoreland went on to say that the recent SALT II agreement will cancel the nuclear war possibility from reality. He went on to say,

"Such development enhances the importance and potential of Soviet conventional forces, which are vastly superior to ours, in areas and along routes essential to our economic well being. And it is one of those commodities that the Soviet Union will not be self-sufficient at this decade's end, they will have to begin importing oil soon, they too, also need oil."

"We are ill-prepared to deal with the situation, despite the fact that the oil from that area is vital in the foreseeable future. The Soviets are standing by to exploit any disruption in that area," said Westmoreland speaking of the current Iraq-Iranian conflict.

Westmoreland pointed out that United States expenditures on the Armed Forces are down quite drastically, while the Soviets have increased their spending by 3% to 5% annually. He said, "It seems our society wants to avoid expenditures on armament, because it believes they conflict with social services. Our people must not forget that the most important social service a Government can provide for its people is to keep them alive, and to keep them free." At that statement applause filled the lecture hall.

"America must provide the leadership," said Westmoreland speaking of the overall picture of today's world. He said, "The best deterrent to us is the best military possible."

According to Westmoreland, every American has a duty for every right we have. If we do not do our duty for every right we have, we may lose those rights.

"The police and fire departments want to prevent crime and fires, but they have to be prepared to fight them. Our [Pacine turns to page 5]

Trustee Board renews president's contract

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
The Board of Trustees passed a proposal which extends the contract of James McGrath, Harper College president, to June 1982 at the September meeting.

McGrath's current contract was due to expire in July 1981. The new contract adds another two years to McGrath's term and an 18.3 percent salary increase. The increase will mean $55,000 per academic year for McGrath.

In his time at Harper, he (McGrath) has done an outstanding job. I am impressed with his performance," said board member Jan Bone, who moved to extend the contract.

Although still strong in her support of McGrath, Joan Kussman, board member, voted against the extension. "I feel it is a bit high to go at this time, higher than the other staff members at school," she commented concerning the increase brought about by the extension.

Other issues dealt with by the board:

• A lease agreement with Wheeling School District 21 which will provide a new off-campus instructional facility in the northwest sector of the college district. The need for this additional instructional space was brought about by the closing of Willow Park Center and the fall enrollment increase.

Space in Hawthorne School, 200 Glendale Avenue, Wheeling, will be available during both the fall and spring semesters. This will allow Harper to offer credit, adult basic education and non-credit offerings in a location convenient to residents of the area.

• According to the Public Community College Act, the board of trustees of each community college district must establish an academic calendar for the district.

The new calendar includes 76 instructional days in during the fall semester and 78 instructional days in the spring semester. The change from the existing calendar is that a single eight week summer session rather than two staggered eight week sessions was initiated.

• After having been reviewed by both legal counsel and the college, the Facilities Coordination Manual was approved by the Board of trustees.

The manual, prepared during the past year with input from various areas of the college, will be an aid in assigning space for community and college sponsored activities. Also included in the manual are fees for use of the facilities by organizations not affiliated with the college.

• In a preliminary report of final fall enrollments, it appears that the credit Full Time Equivalent (FTE) for the fall semester has met with a nine percent increase over the fall 1979 semester and a seven and a half percent increase over budget projections. Increases are attributed to current economic conditions and are considered temporary. Enrollment is expected to stabilize in a long term outlook.

Traditional credit programs absorbed most of the increases. However, the largest increase occurred in the Education, Food Service, Health Continuing Education, German, Electrics, Political Science, Material Management, Marketing, Mathematics, Music, Refrigeration/Air Conditioning, Speech, Data Processing, History, Philosophy and Legal/Technology areas.

• A 218 member committee representing 29 career programs was approved to assist the college in additional development and improvement of career education. These appointments have been made for the 1980-81 academic year. Board policy requires such a committee to be set up on an annual basis.

Board OK's faculty contract

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
The Board of Trustees ratified a collective bargaining agreement with the faculty, senate marking an 11 percent total package increase for Harper faculty members.

The agreement included a 7.75 percent salary adjustment schedule plus overloads pay adjustment and promotion costs representing the 11 percent increase.

"What we got was an 11 percent increase. That does not mean an 11 percent salary increase," said Karen Kern, faculty senate president.

Added to the seniority section of current contract is a clause stating that seniority is a determinative in the functioning of the college and is appropriate in the assignment of classes, selection of overloads, non- and summer session teaching assignments.

In addition, every full time faculty member may enroll in courses offered at Harper with no tuition charges. It doesn't cover the selection of students anything," commented Kern.

Faculty reimbursements for courses taken at other institutions have also been increased. Presently, faculty members were allowed a $100 reimbursement per semester for any courses taken. Under the new contract, faculty members are allowed a $100 reimbursement per semester.

"Each of what we got in the contract was an 80 percent equitable way to distribute money that was already stated in Kern's

During the 1980-81 academic year, the senate hopes to address broad issues such as academic standing, keeping up a quality level of education." (Pacine turns to page 5)

Paying your taxes doesn't grant censor rights

No one can please all of the people all of the time. And Harper College is no exception to this rule.

Finally, students can see contemporary films at a reasonable price on campus. Formerly, the films have met with remarkable success thus far this semester. Not only was every seat filled at the recent showing of "The Kids Are All Right," a film documenting the career of the rock group The Who, people were overflowing into the aisles and standing as well. But even before they have been shown on campus, "Up In Smoke and 'Reeler Madness'" has caused more of a stir in the community than few other events over the years.

Members of the general community have lodged complaints regarding the showing of these films. They argue that tax dollars should not be spent on such "trash" but that films with more cultural value should be shown. Following that line of reasoning, every person in the State should have a voice in the operations of the college state wide and at receipt of White tax dollars do support the college. It is ridiculous to assume that taxpayers have anything to do with the nitpicky daily operations of the college.

Pleats of seminars, workshops and lectures are planned throughout the semester which attempt to broaden student scope of interest. These are not geared to a specific audience and usually satisfy a general need for information of those attending.

Not only are those films geared toward a certain audience, but they deal with subjects familiar to the student. For example, 300 students attended the "Who" film. Obviously, it is time that the college books films that students not only attend but that provide a satirical look at many of the social activities that students engage in.

The tax dollar argument employed here is one which is losing its effect. This reasoning has been used to try and deny traffic tickets, interfere in high school activities and even result in law enforcement agencies where their salary comes from. Community input is vital to the survival of any community college, but community members dictating what can and can not be shown on the local campus. Perhaps the best way to show their disapproval is to simply not attend the film. Community members should exercise their right to become involved in college activities, use the recreational facilities available to them and visit the campus. Administrators should be open to community suggestions and opinions but must remember not to take every suggestion seriously. Students should not feel threatened by this outside involvement in program planning. Films are not only supported through tax dollars but through student activity fees.

Sometime during the course of my 13 years of service with Harper College, I recognize that my favorite season here is autumn. Harper's campus of 300 acres is especially lovely during the fall. Its landscape is still dotted with flowers, its landscape area provides a pleasant backdrop for a casual stroll, its trees present a kaleidoscope of color. It's an exciting time for our students, bustling off to their classes, to the library, and to meetings with friends and faculty members.

In between classes and rendezvous, I hope that our students take time for participation in all that the College has to offer. Harper College celebrates the arrival of fall this week during its Fall Festival. Many activities have already occurred earlier this week, but several more are planned for students' enjoyment. Jazz pianist Ramsey Lewis will perform in concert tomorrow evening. (October 2), as usual, tickets are very reasonably priced for our students and their guests. The home football game at 1 p.m. on Saturday will be an exciting contest against Joliet Junior College. Special half-time activities have been planned, including performances by Harper's Pom Pom Squad and Cheerleaders, as well as the announcement and presentation of our Fall Festival Queen. This winner will have been selected through an interview process to represent the College. All Harper students, their families and friends are invited to support Harper and enjoy the crisp beauty of the outdoors at the same time.

From the desk of . . .

Saturday evening will feature a special country swing dance with Jump to the Saddle Band, starting at 8 p.m. With its low admission price, this concert/dance can be an affordable choice right in the neighborhood.

Most of our students are at a turning point in their lives, and Harper cares. We provide not only a sound classroom education, but also a rich array of cultural, social, and recreational activities appealing to a variety of lifestyles and ages. During your time with us, avail yourself of the programs, services, and professional staff assistance provided. Make "going back to college" mean more than just going to classes.

Letter to the Editor

Students count days. . . not classes

It's just about that time when you notice that more students can rattle off how many more days there are until semester break, than they could recite what they've just learned in Accounting one hour ago. We can surely all recall the excitement when we were young, as each big "X" through the calendar day, drew us a whole fun-packed day closer to our "more than deserved" Christmas vacation. Just the simple saying of the words "Christmas vacation" and all of the warm thoughts associated with it, was motivation enough to carry us through the fall term and those "never-ending" hours of homework, skiing, swimming, visiting with relatives and friends, or simply a time known as "Harper Recuperation" for some, all alike as being synonymous with that of the semester break. But do you suppose that someone would actually be caught with a school book in his or her possession, doing something known to us as "studying"-which immediately upon completion of your fall classes, somehow becomes eliminated from your vocabulary. To study, or not to study?

Harper gives us every opportunity to "leave off our classes during the day and night, as well as in the summer time, in an attempt to better accommodate its students and our schedules. In fact, the only time when the "learning doors" are closed to us in the semester break. I propose, that we should start utilizing this time by being offered a chance to take courses in this period. On many occasions I've heard of students who fall short of the required credits (due to failing a course, etc.) in their fall term, and then must remain for the spring semester. This previous example is both costly and time consuming-two very influential factors of equal weight, which makes my suggestion that much more important for serious consideration. Many people say now even if such a proposal would be put to effect, nothing would make for their true relaxation. Let's say this then, if the situation I mentioned, or anything similar in nature, relates to you, well then once you do graduate, I don't think your activities over that break (if you can even remember what you did) will be carried along with you, as much as those extra months you could gain, if you were to decide to take a crash course session in a course or two during intercession. By no means am I trying to persuade the entire student population in taking a course during the vacation. I merely feel this would greatly benefit those people who later on can find themselves at this unfavorable roadblock. I'm speaking from experience (having taken a course during semester break at another college), observation and those opinions expressed by the professors from schools which do offer such a program. They said that they very much enjoy teaching classes then because of the combined special interest and willingness to learn on behalf of the students attending the college at this time. In adopting an innovation such as this, Harper would then help in the struggle, as far as the "good guys" (finishing or graduating) first."

Upcoming

Justice Club

The Criminal Justice Club will meet Thursday, October 2 at 11:30 a.m. in Bldg. H23. Anyone interested in the criminal justice field is welcome to attend. The meeting will focus on upcoming events including a Sunday Brunch (October 5, 11 a.m. at The Forest Restaurant, Gold and Roselle Roads), Contact Mr. Stewart, ext. 463 or Mr. Evans, ext. 239 for further information.

The pleasure of popcorn isn't new. Five thousand year-old popcorn ears have been discovered in New Mexico. Just as many Americans prefer popcorn, popcorn appears to prefer America. Attempts to grow it in Europe and North Africa have failed to produce a product as excellent as ours.

To help ensure that popcorn is properly popped, the Popcorn Institute recommends using popcorn that has qualified for its Seal of Quality Performance.

Popcorn has no sugar additives or preservatives. It's economical... a quart of popped popcorn costs pennies per serving... it's high in fiber and low in calories... only 25 to 35 calories in a cup of substituted popcorn. Popcorn's popularity will continue to grow, especially in October... it's Popcorn Popcorn Month.

Self-defense

Do you know how to protect yourself when attacked? What natural weapons can women use for self defense and rape prevention? These and other questions will be addressed in a demonstration of self-defense and rape prevention given by Detectives Gary Kuehnel and Michael Severns of the Elk Grove Police Department.

The program, sponsored by the Harper Health Service, will be presented on Oct. 8 at 12:30 p.m. in the fireplace area of Building 4. Members of the audience will be shown the basics of self-defense and how they can protect themselves from an attacker.

On Thursday, Oct. 9, Detective Kuehnel will also be at Harper to show the film, "How to Say No to a Rapist and Survive." The film, narrated by Frederick Sturanka on a college campus, will be shown at 11:30 a.m. in Bldg. A 241. Detective Kuehnel will also be available to answer questions at the conclusion of the film.

Graduation

Students who qualify for a degree or certificate for the Fall 1980 semester must petition for graduation by mid-term, Oct. 17, 1980. Graduation petitions can be obtained in the registrar's office in Bldg. A 211.

Forum

The Political Science Club and the League of Women Voters is sponsoring a candidates night featuring candidates from the second and third legislative districts and U.S. congressional representatives. The forum will be held Oct. 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the Bldg. A lounge. Question cards will be available for the public.

Westmoreland offers views on military status

military must do the same. I call on every man here to restore the tall towers, we have to rebuild those tall towers," said Westmoreland.

Just as he was finishing his lecture, a young man who identified himself later as a Vietnam Veteran, said, "You're going to have a hard time convincing or rebuilding, all you can talk about is one aggressor, there are two, what about the Shah of Iran, he was backed to the hilt by the U.S."

Westmoreland remained calm, and asked if the young man would like the podium. He would listen to an answer and questions pertaining to anything he liked.

Westmoreland, speaking of Vietnam, said, "The Vietnam War was fought for a principle, the Truman Doctrine. The American public overwhelmingly backed this doctrine in Korea. President Kennedy said, 'We will pay any price, bare any burden, we will support any friend, oppose any foe, for the survival of liberty.' That became our policy."

The young man broke in again, he said, "You don't know what you're talking about. Tell them that all the US policy was to take over for the

New York; survive there, survive anywhere

"I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip," I continually screamed in the big apple this past weekend. If you had been there you too, would have been screaming. "I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip."

Walking through Newark airport my adventurous weekend began. Would you believe a 35-year old gay screaming at his parents, "get away from me, I'm in New York now, I'm free, I'm free, I don't want to see your bluish face again, I'm free, I'm free."

Okay, that may not seem too abnormal, but try this: I took my TVJ bus to the Port Transit Authority depot in Manhattan's west side. There was a guy sitting on the floor, looking out into the street. He reached down into his pockets, and without any regard for the authorities, he cracked a vial of white powder and sniffed it into his nose. He looked happy, perhaps serene is a better word.

"I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip." I continued my magical mystery tour of the big apple. I had to wait from 4:15 to 6:45, I could have taken a cab, but that was too safe. I had to wait.

On Fifth Ave there must have been the largest assortment of cool artists than I have ever seen in my life. They play their cards, two black aces, and one red ace, your typical deck of playing cards, it's similar to guessing which shell has the ball in it. In this game you guess which card is the red ace. I saw two guys drop $100 in a mere two minutes.

abstract analysis

Besides buying a shirt at Saks, or a stuffed animal at FAO Schwarz, you can buy a large assortment of watches, purses, girls sweaters, all on Fifth Ave. how nice

My buddy Mark and I, did justice to Ramon's Lewis's version of the "in crowd." We went to Elaine's, we went to Hurtons. We even went to Dangerfield and saw the master of no respect.

I was surprised how many people were doing the "royal scam." The "royal scam" is not a new dance sensation, but sleeping on park benches. One particular scammer was a genius. He took the big boxes which refrigerators come in, and scanned it inside, purely an act worthy of a genius.

"I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip." Then there was the cab ride. You wouldn't believe it if I told you, but I'll try. The driver drove no more than two inches from the bumper of the car in front of us, and at 50 mph.

You know how you have always heard that anyone who appears to be an actor or actress goes to New York City to be discovered works as a waiter or waitress? Well, from my contact, I would have to say that it is true. Stacy Hall, from this, gave us the performance of her life, all over my corned beef sandwich. She recited the lines of Romeo and Juliet, did imitations of John Wayne, Kate Hepburn, and Jimmy Fallon. I would say her rate of success will be not very great, as a matter of fact, I wouldn't be surprised if she went home next week.

Then there was the game show in Central Park. Three Americans a little down on their luck, drilled questions concerning philosophy into each other. They sat while one succeeded. The once held a telephone receiver and passed the receiver around to other contestants. Though there were no prizes, the winner was apparent. He got to be the emcee of the next game show, and drilled questions into the remaining Americans.

"I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip." Can I say just a word about new wave? I was wearing a rugby shirt to look dirty, I wasn't dressed properly to get into the record stores, I wasn't wearing a leopard skin shirt, or I didn't have on a show-bus, what I was wearing was a plain white t-shirt and blue jeans. I was wearing a "I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip" t-shirt.

I saw two dead bodies. I have no idea how they died, all I saw were the white sheets. That is a rode the subway. That is a cellular shock if there ever was one. I was scared once, when the lights went out for about 45 seconds. I thought that "The Apocypsaye" was now.

I saw the new Woody Allen film "Stardust Memories," and that was a real trip. This guy Norman tried to convince me that he was the anti-Christ before I saw the movie. He was with his girlfriend and said she was an apostle, but that's not all. This couple next to me in the show kept talking and burping. I wanted to hand him a jar of Alka-Seltzer, and put my fist in his mouth.

People is what makes New York, and since there are so many people it's little wonder that they still survives.

To top it all, on the plane waiting to be pushed back towards the runway, I heard a song familiar to my ears. It was that hard rock classic by Cream, "Sunkhairs Of Your Love." But, it wasn't by Cream, it was brought to me by the great folks at Muzak.

"I'm hip, I'm hip, I'm hip."

What ever has happened to New Wave?

Wow, I thought the commercialization of new wave was bad in Chicago. As I entered the Harbinger office Monday morning, the first thing I saw was a greasing Michael Simkus. Freshly befringed from a weekend in New York City, I greeted the wavy traveler and asked what he had seen, what he had felt in the sprawling land of the cranes. The story unraveled and I decided to scrap the column I had previously written.

New Wave is really getting hot in hand in New York. It had its beginnings out there in 1976 with the likes of Television and Fast Smith. New it has mushroomed like radioactive fungus. Record stores carry on what is popular in new wave discos, they have new wave clothing sections - anyone can enjoy the music, but dress right for the occasion - leopard paints, leathers wrap-around sunglasses, "I killed Sid" t-shirts, everything you could possibly wear to let others know that yes, you too, are a "new wave".

They don't look new but someone is making a lot of money off of this. Sort of arrives to mind the rise and fall of the disco identity. When it arrived in our culture, it swept across the nation and was fed into the people intransigently. Hey, it got exposure: radio, TV, magazines and newspapers. Then, it was IN. But no sooner did we become aware of it, did we watch it die. Overdosages of rhythm, overage, and over-reaction. What else could incite sixty thousand people to rally in Comiskey Park? "Let us blow up disco, fellow idiots, and put on Judas Priest armor and complete the mission."

The cork has been pulled from the new wave bathtub. New York has been stamped and Chicago is getting the runoff. The new wave identity is complete and ready to die.

The first indication of rigor mortis was the large festival recently held in Toronto. Everyone was there, from Talking Heads, the B-52's, all of the house-hold names. A rumored appearance by the Clash failed in materialize. Large-scale commercialization was running rampant. Follow the trail of fashions, pins, "skinny ties, and other trendy items. Simkus got sneered at in a new wave club in New York. He wasn't properly attired. His hair wasn't right. He was dressed as a normal Illinoisan. Freddy Frickey was not! So, let us blow up new wave, fellow idiots. I mean, if you are sick of all of the phonemes, blow it up. It is the music that matters, not the appearance. Does it have any real spirit, or is it an obvious attempt at crapping in on the latest trend? Is it danceable because that's how it is?

The future of popular music seems bleak. What is next? Hey, I've got this group together, it's called "The Mechanical Bulls." We do high-speed cover versions of Johnny Paycheck tunes. Our guitarist hits the influences as Keith Levine, Robert Fripp, and Lester Flatt. Our haircuts are really short, but we wear neither of a different style. We are the urban cowpunks with the accent on backskin.

"Sunkhairs Of Your Love." But, it wasn't by Cream, it was brought to me by the great folks at Muzak.

AC/DC gives 'shining' performance

by KITT KAMRATH

So Angus Young pulled down his school boy shorts in Iowa the other night. No such luck at Rosemont Horizon last Saturday evening.

From the opening of "Hell's Bells," Angus was rocking out the riffs that are AC/DC's instantly recognizable style. The rhythm accumulated to his feet and the manic drives that vibrated his body kept him on top. Not only that, he adds a waddy strip tease to "Bad Boy Boogie."

From Australia, AC/DC had just released "Highway To Hell" last year when lead singer Bon Scott, 33, once a chameleon for other bands, was found dead Feb. 19 in the back seat of a friend's car after a night of drinking in London. Brian Johnson, 21, is the new singer who's once heard on AC/DC's sixth and recent album, "Back in Black."

Johnson has a tendency to scream as Scott had the compulsion to growl. Minus Scott's abundance of latona and grained vocals, Johnson resembled his stage alter with sinister and sexual antics, wearing a light green t-shirt, jeans, and gym shoes.

Getting over "The Jack," Scott's baby, Johnson had to tackle the one song that most typified the former singer's persona, "Highway To Hell." He couldn't have done better.

Coming to the "Back in Black" songs Johnson had it in his pocket. "You Shook Me All "Night Long" and "What Do You Do For Money Honey" were all his own and although he seemed to enjoy pulling off the older tracks, his own satisfaction shone here.

"Whole Lotta Rosie," a favorite from 1977's "Let There Be Rock," gave Angus the chance to be handled through the crowd while playing guitar on a roadie's shoulders. What touched heart most was when Johnson lifted Angus onto his shoulders as Scott had done the previous concerts. Johnson's determination to be himself and keep the band intact as it was before, qualifies him as much as the best of his vocals.

Have a drink on them.

We need consistency: Bolt

Tennis

The buzzword for women's tennis is, for the second straight week, consistency - or the lack of it.

After a decent showing in the Civo Tanner Invite, the Hawks were blown away by Thornton 5-1 in a conference match Monday.

"It was a total disaster," said coach Martha Bolt. "There was a lack of desire to go out and do what they had to do was extremely disappointed."

Only Jacquie Anderson, Sharon Carlson, and Jan Groark carried their matches to the full three sets.

It was quite a contrast to last Saturday's showing in the Civo Tanner Invite. The Hawks finished fourth or fifth out of eight teams - all of which were four-year schools.

The doubles pair of Moyer-Anderson reached the second round but were eliminated by the tourney's No. 1 seeded doubles team, JoAnn Kalka-Cathy Centanni, the Hawks No. 2 doubles team, advanced all the way to the consolation final.

"It was a good learning experience," said Bolt. "They played some very good tennis. We played some more polished teams and I thought we represented ourselves very well."

With Sectional play to begin in one week (Oct. 10), the Hawks biggest foe has been themselves. They have not played well consistently.

A reason may be the fact that the team is freshman-oriented, "I can't expect the fact," said Bolt, "we're a young team. We are a young team but in actual playing time we're not that young because of our six girls played in high school."

The Hawks, now 3-3 in NAC play, face DuPage Thursday, Illinois Central Friday, Elgin Monday and Wauaubesa next Thursday before opening sectional play next Friday.

"We have got to play good, hard tennis," said Bolt. "We should've leveled off at Thornton. I've got a lot of confidence in the team, but they're the ones that have to do it. We haven't been playing the way we should but that doesn't mean we won't. And if they don't, soon, it will be too late."

Jr. college eligibility

began Tuesday.

Tim Lottis, former basketball star at Harper, The University of Minnesota was interested in Lottis. But Lottis did not have sufficient hours in his major field of study. His problems stem from the fact that he had not reached Junior status.

HE STARTED at the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, but dropped out after his first quarter there. He then came to Harper for three semesters, but did not accumulate the total hours needed for graduation from Harper.

Lottis had transferred to Harper without enough hours to reach sophomore status, and when he finished at Harper, he had not reached Junior status. Hence Minnesota, because of Big Ten eligibility rules, bypassed Lottis. To have played at Minnesota, Lottis would have to sit out for an entire year, but he would be eligible to play to two full years under NCAA rules that say a player has five years to compete for four years.

Lottis has since accepted a scholarship from Lewis University in the National Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics (NATA). Lewis requires an athlete to have a minimum of 24 academic hours after two years to compete in intercollegiate athletics, much more lenient than the NCAA's requirement of 33. By 1982, Lottis senior year, Lewis will be competing in the NCAA Division II. By then Lottis will have completed his junior requirements under NCAA eligibility rules and will be a senior under NCAA rules.

IN COMPARISON, Harper's eligibility requirements are relatively simple. To compete in inter-collegiate athletics, an athlete must complete a minimum of 18 academic hours with a minimum 1.5 graduation average in the semester prior to the beginning of a sport's season. And even this isn't black-and-white.

For example, an athlete who has completed the spring semester with say, seven academic hours cannot go to summer school and complete hours and then compete in football. He must complete 18 academic hours in summer school in order to be eligible for the following football season.

"Most of our problems that occur (with eligibility)," said

Chargebacks redefined

Chargebacks which have "no effect whatsoever on athletics," said Steve Catlin, director of academic affairs.

It was erroneously reported last week that the NAC provides for a chargeback giving an athlete the opportunity to go to another school other than the home district, when that school has an inter-collegiate sport not a part of the home-district's school.

Actually, chargebacks have no bearing on athletics.

Roger Bechold, director of sports at athletics, are because most athletes have fallen under 18 hours.

THE MOSTS complicating situations with eligibility arise in the winter sports between the fall and spring semester. Men's basketball, for example, begins in late November and ends in March. And as head coach last year, Bechold had two players declared academically ineligible for the spring semester because they had not completed 10 academic hours in the fall semester.

THERE HAS also been much fuss made over the last year about "Mickey-Mouse" courses, more commonly known as physical education courses. "That's not fair," said Bechold. "Today, there are a lot of people coming back to "A chargeback," said Catlin "is a partial sport of tuition" in one's words, "community college not offered by the home-district school."

The amount of tuition paid by the home-district school is the difference between the in-district and out-district tuition. The community college will offer a chargeback only for two-year programs not courses.

college taking physical education courses for the importance of physical and mental health. I don't think physical education courses are "Mickey-Mouse."

"We want our athletes to carry a full load," he continued. "Academics are more important than athletics, but even if it takes academically and depends on sports to carry him through college. He finishes school and can get a degree."

THE most basic problem that arises in intercollegiate eligibility is simply the student-athlete's unawareness of the factors influencing eligibility. "MOST ATHLETES don't really know," said Bechold, "what eligibility involves. If they knew we wouldn't be having these problems."

Hawks tie

halfback Jimmy Meadows. "It's not that we played bad. We just didn't get any breaks today."

The Hawks have a rematch against Triton Wednesday. The Hawks beat the Triton in the third game of the year, 2-1. The Triton, now 0-2, lost to DuPage 5-1 and Bellevue 4-0 last week. The Hawks then moved on to play Lincoln this Saturday and a rematch with DuPage next Wednesday.

Harper walloped DuPage, 6-0, last Wednesday in their home opener. Rick Puls, Mark Mata, and John Prell scored twice for the Hawks.

"I was very surprised by the score," said Szabo afterwards. "It was an enjoyable victory. I was very proud of this team. They hustled and pulled for each other until the end."

THE KEY to the Hawks uncharacteristic high scoring game, was the return of Mota and Puls from injuries. Szabo is 100% yet, which gives Szabo a lot to look forward to.

Only one Hawk, midfielder Mike Purich, is seriously hurt. Purich injured his groin against Triton and aggravated the pull against Kincaid.

He played briefly against DuPage and Wauaubesa. His return to full strength is important.

"I'd be healthy," said Szabo, "I can really help us. He can handle the ball and score. We need him 100%."

'No!' I told him

There is a friend of mine at Harper (yes, I do have a friend) who holds the opinion that major intercollegiate sports should be cut out of Harper's budget. This friend, who is a Harbinger columnist, and rather firmly, that Harper should "redirect its sporting priorities" to include all intramurals and no intercollegiate sports.

I won't reveal my friend's name - he has the uncanny ability of drawing death threats at the mere hint of expressing his opinion openly. My friend's point is to put more emphasis on academics and take the current emphasis of funding, as he sees it, away from athletics.

I will be the first to disagree with my colleague. It is a narrow-minded approach to what he sees as a problem.

One must be able to understand why is he so distressed with athletics. His favorite football teams - Harper, Northwestern and our beloved Bears - have won a combined total of one game. So can see why my friend is such an angry young man.

Why he thinks we should lop off the entire athletics program, though, is way beyond my comprehension. I will, however, as he did with me, present a few of his points.

The main purpose of a community college is to stretch and open the mind to new educational levels. My comment: Poppycock! Go to a four-year school or have a schedule such that community college is the only place for them to go to school.

Most athletes take "Mickey-Mouse" courses that only cost the taxpayer's money. Cut out athletics, and you cut out these Mickey-tapayers money. My comment: I am tempted to point out that athletes at four-year schools take "Mickey-Mouse" courses, but that "Mickey-Mouse" courses is a fact, or not is another question. And what does a "Mickey-Mouse" course consist of? There is too much emphasis on athletics today. The emphasis should be put on academics. My comment: I will agree that to some schools, there is a great emphasis on athletics. I also agree the emphasis of a school should be on academics. Whether Harper is guilty regarding an emphasis on athletics I doubt. And does my friend realize that Harper is ranked in the top 10 of community college nation-wide in academics?

What my friend has overlooked is the fact that athletics serve as a recruiting tool as well as an important publicity tool. He thinks, though, that if academics were the selling point, that you wouldn't need any better advertising.

He sees the example of the University of Chicago: The U of C has cut back, rather extensively, on its football program. It has put more of an emphasis on its academic program. Well good for the U of C. But the facts my friend is overlooking is that the U of C is a private school, not public like community college, and did not fully cut out its athletic program.

Despite their narrow-mindedness, my friend's points are worth considering if only for one reason. He has brought to light two very important points: "Mickey-Mouse" courses and the emphasis on legs and four-year schools across the nation. I doubt, however, that my friend, who is rather well-traveled, has taken the time to consider how important athletics are to a community college.

I'm sure if we were an athlete, none of this would have come up.

Classroom and the playing field

by MIKE BAMBACH
EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second part of a two-part series analyzing the ambiguities of recruiting and eligibility in junior college athletics. In part two, we analyze the factors in the complicating process of junior college athletic eligibility and post-junco athletic eligibility.

The word eligibility is defined by the Random House dictionary as, "the quality or state of being eligible."

That is a basic, oversimplified definition of a concept that has become, in today's world of high-powered recruiting, ambiguous and abstract concepts. To follow the complications involved in the eligibility of collegiate athletes, consider these two examples:

• Dave Wilson, University of Illinois quarterback Wilson, a transfer from Fullerton (Calif.) Community College, has appealed a Big Ten conference's ruling declaring Wilson ineligible to play for the Illini. The Big Ten claims that Wilson does not have the 78 academic hours to be able to claim senior status, hence Wilson cannot play.

WILSON CONTENDS he is a junior and has enough credits to play. The Big Ten, however, considers Wilson a senior and Wilson doesn't have the Big Ten's requirement of 78 academic hours to achieve senior status.

Wilson's problem stems from his first game at Fullerton in 1977. He broke his arm and had to leave school without attending a class or participating in another game that semester. He did take eight academic hours in his second semester at Fullerton. He also played football at Fullerton in 1978 and 1979, then transferred to Illinois.

The Big Ten, considering 1977 Wilson's freshman year, and he did not have the hours needed to play ball in 1980.

At that point, Wilson applied for and got, a "waiver" for his injured season giving the quarterback eligibility for the 1980 from the Big Ten's eligibility committee, providing he had earned 51 credit hours to achieve junior status (which he had). But the Big Ten's faculty representatives, in review of Wilson's request, changed its mind and decided Wilson instead needed senior status to be eligible for the 1980 season.

AN ILLINOIS Circuit Court Judge then ruled granted Wilson a Preliminary injunction allowing him to play in 1980 saying the faculty representatives could not overturn the eligibility committee's decision.

Then, the Big Ten eligibility committee cited new evidence and declared Wilson ineligible because Illinois had received the high school transcript of David B. Wilson, another student who attended Wilson's high school.

The same Circuit Court Judge dissolved the preliminary injunction. Then the 6th District Appellate court in Springfield, reinstated the original injunction making Wilson eligible again. The Big Ten appealed that decision and now Wilson's eligibility lies at the foot of the Illinois State Supreme Court. Those hearings please turn to page 7.

Hawks tie Waubensee, 1-1

Soccer

by MIKE BAMBACH
 There wasn't much soccer coach Sander Szabo could say after his team's 1-1 tie with Waubensee Saturday.

"I know we can play better," he said. "We should've blown this team away."

Yes, the Hawks should've blown this team away. Harper dominated the first half of play, getting 15 shots on goal and three corner kicks as opposed to five shots on goal and one corner kick for the Chiefs.

The Hawks missed five golden chances at goals. Forward Andy Bobowski even had a goal nullified late in the half when he headed in a ball past Waubensee goalie Ron Reinhart. A Waubensee defender hustled to clear the ball out of the goal, and the referee's missed the score because they were not at an angle to see the ball cross the Chief goal line. The Chiefs, now 7-3-1, scored midway through the second half, but the Hawks Rick Puls scored with only five minutes left in the game to give Harper a 1-1 tie.

"I'm not disappointed," said Szabo, "because we played well today. I'm disappointed because we're not where I want to be. They play well, but they turn around and admire themselves."

"I hate days like this," said Puls. "Please turn to page 7."

Hawks fall, 47-14

When the football Hawks host Joliet Saturday, they will be trying to break a four-game losing streak.

"They're very big and very strong," said head coach John Eliask. "I don't think they have the overall team speed we've seen in other teams."

"The Hawks will be aiming for improvement in their passing offense and rushing defense."

Against Illinois Valley last Saturday, the Hawks defense surrendered 385 rushing yards and 559 total yards.

Quarterback Tim Tyrrell, the third Hawk QB used this year, completed only three of 18 passes for 67 yards and was intercepted three times in his two starts. Tyrrell has completed seven of 32 passes for 136 yards and one touchdown.

"We need improvement in our passing game," said Eliask. "Tim was a little off against Illinois Valley. Sometimes he'd overthrow or underthrow his receivers."

Another problem at QB has been the lack of one permanent starter. Dave Loch opened the season as the No. 1 signal-caller but was replaced by Scott Chuland in the second game. Eliask then went with Tyrrell.

"It hurts your consistency," said Eliask of the musical quarterback situation. "But I think they're settling in with Tyrrell."

One very encouraging sign offensively has been the running of Ron Burke. Against IV, Burke got his second straight 100-yard game with 132 yards on 26 carries including a 44-yard TD run in the Hawks' 67-34 loss to the third-ranked Apaches.

"He's our outside threat," said Eliask.

Another sign Eliask can point to is the fact that nine freshmen started offensively. "I've never had a team this young," said Eliask. "Not even in our first year."

The Hawks weren't expected to beat Illinois Valley, but did better than anticipated. The Apaches, the No. 1 ranked team in the state, took a 20-0 lead over the Hawks at halftime. Burke then scored on his 44-yard romp and Mark Dabke later added a two-yard run for the Hawks' other TD.

"I was pleased," said Eliask, "with our effort. It was the first game we've had a 60-minute effort. Irrespective of the result, we had the effort. I'm encouraged by what I saw."

The Hawks now 8-4 in conference play, have yet to face 10th-ranked Triton, Wright and non-conference opponent Illinois Benedictine.

"I think," said Eliask, "we have a good chance to finish the season strong."

Right now, one win wouldn't look bad.

Futuristics conference set for November

by JEFF EVERS
Harper College will host a futuristics conference as a means of studying the worldwide futurist movement and discussing the basic issues affecting the future of the world.

of 3 sessions held on three consecutive Thursdays in November from 7 to 10 p.m. in Bldg. E, 1st floor, at the University of Michigan, Northern Illinois University and Harper will be featured.

"Futuristics is a race against time," explained Dr. Richard Lockwood, professor of humanities and coordinator of the conference. "The futurist is slow-moving in an international network of individuals and organizations committed to effecting constructive change in today's world to assume a better future for all."

Futurists are looking for ways to influence the future such that it will be more rather than less humane. Futurists are optimistic caught between hope and despair.

Topics covered at the conference include changes in work patterns and life styles, use of the world's resources, retention of control of the future to the people, relationship of man to the environment, the world family versus rationalism, the balance between humanity and technology, careers that help to resolve human problems and independence of all people.

Project on hold; lack of funds

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Project has been put on hold due to a lack in local funding.

Before the federal government will grant any allocations, the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee must have an equal amount of local support to that of the allocation. The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Cook County must take the responsibility for the purchase of land and the architectural design. The Palatine Park District and surrounding communities must share the financial responsibilities for the recreational features of the facility.

Financial appeals have been made to several land development firms and surrounding communities. The Village of Palatine and the Palatine Park District have both made tentative offers but support from Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg seem doubtful at this point.

"The requested funds from Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg but that doesn't mean that will get it," said Margaret Reimer co-chairman of the Salt Creek Steering Committee.

The committee is working under a December deadline for raising the required funds with approximately $64,000 of the $260,000 needed to complete the project secured.

The first of the structures completed was Base Woods. With the exception of comfort stations currently being completed, the area is not only part of the flood control system but a fully functioning recreation area for the community.

Other structure sites include the proposed Harper site, an area near the Saint Michael Cemetery and the St. Anthony on Palatine and Quentin Hds. and one on the north side of Palatine at Plum Grove Rd. and Smith St.

Other areas with recreational facilities include the Thomas Hamilton and Margaret Reimer sites. The Thomas Hamilton site Plum Grove Rd. and Smith St. offers football, baseball and soccer fields. The area is expected to be complete by the end of the year. The Margaret Reimer facility will open sled hills and picnic grounds to the public in 1982. Provided the proper amount of funding is secured, the Harper facility will offer picnic grounds and boating to the public.

The Board of Trustees gave the Metropolitan District permission to build the reservoir in August of 1979. The structure would cover approximately 16 acres. Permission was also granted to allow the Village of Palatine access to the perimeter roads and parking lots 11 and 12 so that the area can be used as a recreation center.

To reduce Harper liability, a rider would be attached to the policies of the Palatine Park District. Since the area would be visible from the road, the Palatine Police Department will police the area.

It is necessary to use the Harper parking lots since the land east of Quentin Rd. has already been zoned for the construction of condominiums. The land on which the reservoir is to be constructed had also been zoned for condominiums but the land had to be given up by the developer.

The construction of the entire basin system was first approached in 1969.

Women's program hosts workshop

This workshop explores the myths, guils, conflicts and affirmations of a complex relationship. It will be offered by the Harper College Women's Program on Thursday, Oct. 16 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. in Bldg. A241. Tuition of $14 includes lunch. The fee for residents is $9.

Workshop leaders are Rita Michalski and Mary Halpin Tures. They will lead exercises in exercising guilt and effective problem solving.

Ms. Tures, a psychotherapist in private practice, will help participants develop skills strengthening relationships. Harper instructor Rita Michalski will examine the myth, contemporary research, literature and films depicting the mother-daughter bond. To enroll, call ext. 410, 412 or 301.

Donald D'Argento, traffic manager of CEO Corporation, and Eugene L. Magad, coordinator of our material management program.

Tuition is $75 which includes materials, coffee and lunch. There is a group rate of $60 per participant if three or more are registered from the same company. To register, call ext. 410, 412 or 301.

Foundation grant advances program

The Harper College Educational Foundation has approved a grant to the College's music departments which will underwrite costs of providing computer-based individual instruction for students in nine of Harper's music courses.

The system of instruction was devised by department chairman George Makas who has been experimenting at Harper for several years with the possible application of computerized instruction to music education. Makas is currently authoring several programs to be used in music classrooms across the country. The system to be provided by the foundation grant uses the mathematical capacity of the computer to produce selected tones, chords, rhythms and other elements of musical composition. The system can be used for initial instruction, student review, assignments and quizzes. Computer-based instruction will be used in all levels of music theory and ear training classes, and may be applicable to class piano instruction.

"The use of the computer for basic skill instruction will allow the faculty to concentrate on helping students master the higher skills in music," Makas said.

The grant from the Educational Foundation will provide equipment and software to initiate the program in the classrooms at a cost of approximately $1,000. "The beauty of this whole system is that we can individualize any of the commercial packages that are available to us, or we can create our own program," Makas stated.

The Educational Foundation decided to underwrite the project immediately in order to make the system available to music students as quickly as possible. The expended funds will be replaced through future gifts and grants received by the foundation on behalf of the College.

In announcing the grant, Educational Foundation President Norval Stephens noted, "Harper College has an exceptional music department, one of only 17 community college departments associated with the National Association of Schools of Music. Among the more than 86 colleges and universities affiliated with this prestigious association are the New England Conservatory, Eastman School of Music, and major universities across the nation.

"This project is an innovative program that demonstrates Harper's leadership among community colleges. Since it could not be funded through usual financial sources available to the College, the Foundation elected to support this excellent resource for Harper students."

All day seminar slated Saturday

An all-day seminar that offers new insights into the traditional concept of the secretarial position, will be offered Saturday, Oct. 11 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Bldg. D, Rm. 116. Tuition is $18 and includes lunch. The fee for residents is $9.

Elvire Peters, career development and management instructor in the program, will conduct the seminar. Methods of improving communication, assertiveness, moving up the career ladder, and information on obtaining the Certified Professional Secretary designation are among the topics of discussion. To enroll, call the Continuing Education Admissions Office, ext. 410, 412, or 301.

CLOWNING AROUND. Members of an intermediate swim class break away from the traditional classroom and claim activity just long enough to have some fun. The Bldg. M facilities have been open classes since September after a delayed opening. The delay was caused by faulty construction of the pool and racquetball courts. The pool is also open to the community at specific times throughout the week. For open swim times call ext. 466. (Photo by Rick Kohaner)

Editorial Salt Creek Watershed project drying up

Without proper funding, the Upper Salt Creek Watershed Project could turn into just another hole in the ground rather than a quality outdoor recreation center for the community.

Working under a December deadline, the Salt Creek Steering Committee must raise $188,000 to complete the project. The committee has raised $64,000 to date but there is still a long way to go. No federal assistance can be received until an amount equal to the amount requested is secured. Fiddlers from surrounding communities are vital to the construction of the combination flood control unit and community recreation center.

Not only will the project form a huge water retention basin at the branch of Salt Creek running through the Harper Campus and provide a community boating and picnic area right in Harper's backyard, it will bring members of the general community to the campus in addition serving a purpose for the community as a whole, the project could generate more interest in the college.

Thus, no one loses. Harper gains from the sale of land and increased community interest, residents gain another quality recreation center and contributing villages receive less of a threat of possible flooding and can boast of the cooperation and support received from the students.

If those still holding out need concrete evidence before taking the plunge and lending their support, take a look at the Busse Woods area in Palatine or Lake Opeka in Des Plaines.

Conceived as a flood control basin, Lake Opeka has been a boon to the overall economy of the fair city of Des Plaines. While providing a quality outdoor recreation center for the community, additional revenue has been generated through boat rentals and charges for use of the adjoining golf course.

Busse Woods, the first structure of the intricate overall Salt Creek Plan disguises itself as a campground, hiking and picnicking area.

Upon closer inspection, it is discovered that the project has virtually eliminated flooding in the surrounding area.

Therefore, local support is vital to the survival of the project. Without this support, a project whose advantages far outweigh its disadvantages could just dry up and die.

Unlike Autumn, fruition hasn't set in yet

The music of this "season of mists and mellow fruitfulness" seems so out of tune with the disheartening of the mid-semester classroom. While Nature is swelling "all fruit with ripeness to the core," you students are just starting your college education. The beginning can be a messy, boggy thing indeed.

For example, some students are only now beginning to read away at their studies. I think of many of you, finally learning not to wander about in your papers, learning to develop thesis statements out of which ideas grow. You're beginning in English. Just as you're beginning in Chemistry, calculus, and criminal justice. Concepts which were "foggy" are now solid, concrete. But you get frustrated. I think of one of you in my class who finally understood the difference between "to lie" and "to lay" and

From the desk of...

Karen Rees
Faculty Student President

If I may strain for a pun here, reverted to an almost virginal confusion the next class. Unlike Autumn, fruition hasn't set in yet.

Some of you abandon your studies. It truly pains your teachers when you drop a class and we don't know why. Sure, we can guess. Job demands, too many hours, work too difficult, boredom unto death, the ubiquitous too many hassles. But before you lose it, think a bit of the natural courses of things. As you begin college, you have ideas, notions of how it ought to be, how we ought to be, how you ought to be. But there's a natural course to learning, despite all these "oughts." I remember despairing of ever learning the Krebs cycle, that hideous beast I had no bearing on my major, it was too involved, and I would rather have read more Keats or gone drinking, or just slept more than hours that haze of nonsense. Weighing the alternative - flunking - I plunged into the cycle of respiration and it became a genuine breath of life to me in college. My learning, it taught me two things. One, I could learn things I didn't like or would never like, and I could, despite the dire predictions of my first test, pass a science course. Two, that although I never would use the facts of the Krebs cycle again as long as I lived, I would use the general theoretical and structural concepts in the study of literature, as I learned more about the ways in which to perceive things. It was a dry time indeed, that Krebs cycle period of my life, but learning it kept my education from being a shallow rill. So, while you students may think we suddenly ripened into teachers, and somewhat parthenogenetically at that, what we really want you to know is that knowing is a process. Even though it's splendid! Autumn outside, we all must accept the processes by which fruition comes about. Don't abandon a difficult class, because it's difficult. If you're in a draught, talk to the teacher - we've had our dry times too. If you feel flooded with too much - again, while we can't dam the stream, we might pitch in and help you row or at least throw you an oar. To be a student is to go through processes. And to be a teacher is to recognize those processes you are going through. We both have the same aim.

Letter to the Editor

Fatigue is not necessarily bad

What immediately comes to mind when you think of "complete exhaustion"? I guess we should first distinguish between what kind of "exhaustion" I'm actually referring to here. NOT the kind you experience when you decide to leave your studying until the night before a final exam, as you, your textbook and good 'ol reliable Mr. Coffee make watch the sun come up. And NOT by running the dangerous risk to chowing to make what should be a four day car trip, into an overnight ride. BUT, a beautifully inspiring form of exhaustion that I feel only can be gained by helping other people with all that you know, and as a result of this, be internally rewarded through their new accomplishments. To those of you who can identify with this, you should be able to also identify with the "great high" that this "exhaustion" in fact gives you. I only recently started volunteer work at the Little City Foundation's special education center, not even a mile west of Harper City. Involvement in helping mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed people came about in a rather unusual way. In the midst of researching "Genetic Disorders and Premature Aging" for a term paper, I thought nothing I could read would be as informative as a chance to talk with them. Even though that in mind, I then proceeded to interview Ms. Dunning, a divisional staff member at the Little City Foundation. Subsequent to the interview, I knew from what I saw and heard that I wanted to be a part, in anyway that I could help. I fell so sure from my readings in my psychology class, that people properly educated in this field would undoubtedly receive the greatest results. From talking with others, I realized many people had that same misconception. This, I later discovered, had prevented a few people I know to volunteer their services, or even possibly apply for a full paying job, at the Little City Foundation. Kirk Center and those like them. Even though I have only just begun, in the way of my volunteer work, the incredibly friendly staff members, as well as those students placed there. Love, patience and understanding. We may be helping these people, but in return, they give us back so much more. Like a fatherly appreciation for everything we're constantly doing for granted, and more importantly, knowing that you are helping in every way you can. So if you can scrape together even a few hours a week, to know that those hours are benefiting others in quite a remarkable feeling, and as the saying goes, "Experience is the best teacher." Try it out. Be a volunteer and experience what I believe to be one of the greatest feelings in the world.

History as exciting as students make it

If you've ever met anyone who is completely happy and content with their life, then take a course with Larry King, professor of history. "I'm probably one of the few people anyone will ever meet who is really happy," King said.

King, who graduated from Roosevelt University with a masters degree in history, loves teaching history. "I've been doing it for 28 years and it hasn't lost anything. It's a lot better working with the past because the present and the future are so unpleasant. We're too materialistic. You can fantasize more with what the past was like. Life wasn't as complicated then as it is now. The future is boring because we've got it all."

His interest in the history field really came about unexpectedly. When he was a freshman in college, King took a history course which he received an "A" in. "It was the only 'A' I received that semester so I decided to major in it." Yet he told his mother he was going to be a lawyer, "because at that time, that's what every mother wanted their son to be."

King objects to student complaints that history is boring. "You just have to make it come alive," King said. "I don't believe in dates but I have a great ability to retain trivia. Ten years from now, students of mine are going to remember the sex life of Thomas Jefferson and that the third vice-president, Aaron Burr, used opium."

From King's own college days, he remembers a favorite history teacher, Paul Johnson. "He was a major influence on my life," King said. "He was older. He had the ability even if you were dumb, even if you answered a question absurdly, to get all excited and say over and over, 'That's wonderful.' He always respected students and I learned to respect that."

King, who thinks Harper has a super faculty, taught a history course one year using Hollywood movies. He tried to relate the movies to history "which wasn't easy," he said. He used movies such as "The Grapes of Wrath," "The Westerner" and "Birth of a Nation." "It was a fun course," King said.

When he's not teaching, King likes to read mysteries, eat barbecued ribs, attend plays, play basketball and spend time at his summer home in Michigan, now closed for the winter.

All in all, Professor King is very content with his life. His wife, his two children and his job make him happy and he would like to be as good a history teacher as he can. "What else would I want to be—the worst!"

LARRY KING, professor of history, could have been just about anything. But he received an "A" in a college history course and decided to pursue that line of interest. Photo by Jim Davis

Fall Fest

Well, it's that time of year. There is a nip in the air and the leaves are donning their flaming coats to make the area come alive with color. And once again Harper celebrated Homecoming with a variety of activities throughout the week. Whether interested in the careful, measured paces of a karate demonstration or the careful strides of a runner or even the ageless dignity of a watermelon seed spitting contest, there was something for everyone.

Requipping over the football game and country swing dance, was queen Trudy Malaise while seventh degree blackbelt karate master Hyung Kim presided over the karate demonstration which kicked off the entire week. Despite a 22-30 loss, the Harper Hawks were cheered on by a slightly chilled but happy crowd. Totally forgetting manners, Walter Hill puckerup and let go to win the watermelon seed spitting contest. Then Ramsey Lewis cast his magical, musical spell over his audience at the first concert held in Bigg M.

Participants in the annual Harper-a-thon, 3 mile faculty run, included Ron Aubberley, fifth place; Jim Heisler, fourth place; and Roger Mansell, third place. Winners were Peter Scherer and Sue Thompson (not pictured). Winners in the student three mile race were Scott Kurka and Sue Konesch.

Good music just keeps coming

I must have been slightly feverish last week, certainly popular music isn't a corpse. When music is left to stand by itself, it is an enjoyable art form. When music is tied to fashion, money and media, it becomes secondary. The purpose of the music is lost. A musician's message or technical ability is overlooked and his commercial accessibility prized. What is heard isn't as important as what is sold.

They weren't selling tickets at the Ramsey Lewis concert last Friday. There were no lasers. I only saw a few groups. It was perfectly clear that the music was the message. OK, I'll shut up. It's time to review albums.

Yes, Tangerine Dream makes some of the best space-rock in all worlds. Their latest release, "Tangram," includes leader Edgar Froese on synths and electric guitar. Chris Franke and new addition Johannes Schmoelling also play synthesizers. The album

Kris Piepenburg

consists of only one composition; it is somewhat classical in feel, but never gets bogged down in repetition. At certain points it sounds like "Echobee," by Pink Floyd. Froese's guitar style is somewhat like David Gilmore's but he uses more effects.

Listening to this album can be a jumping-off point to explorations of other states of mind. Some music gets a person high, other styles demand that the listener get high. "Tangram" fits into the first description. The price of this record is somewhat high; it is an import well worth the extra money.

Tangerine Dream is one of the premier German electronic groups. Since their beginnings in 1970, they have continually been a progressive force in this area of music. Down through the years, their sound has changed. Their first few albums (Zeit, especially) were extremely repetitive, the textured synthesizers and cello weaved together to form a type of hypnotic drone — great for watching ants carry crumbs back to their nests.

Ultravox is another group that relies heavily on electronics. Gary Numan's fascination with synthesizers began when he saw this band.

Ultravox toured last year with a new line-up, but without having a new record on the market. Original lead singer and visionary John Foxx had left to pursue weirder realms, and the guitarist had gotten married. Midge Ure, formerly of Thin Lizzy and other British aggregations, came in to handle both roles. Touring without a new album may seem rather stupid, not so in this case. The tour helped the new band lighten musically, and get new material together. "Vienna" is the result. Christy released it a few weeks ago, and is it good.

Guitars are used sparingly; the lead melodic instrument is Billy Currie's electric violin. All four members play synthesizers, but this isn't technopop. The first three tracks on side two are reminiscent of another great electronic group, Kraftwerk. "Mr. X" is melodically sparse, but very haunting. The echoed vocals and electronic percussion create an excellent sound, very European. "Western Promise" has a disco beat, but has a stronger melody than "Mr. X."

The lyrics deal with Western cultures versus Eastern. This theme also crops up on the first side in "New Europeans."

Ultravox rocks, too. "Sleepwalk" is a strong rock song that has been getting some radio exposure, and "All Blood Still" is as sinister as anything put out by Bowie or Gary Numan.

I don't care to over-describe or over-review because all of this writing gets terribly redundant. Ultravox and Tangerine Dream represent two different sides of electronic music and both are equally interesting. Neither have particularly "strong" messages, which is probably an asset. And they don't fit easily into the music classifications that burden us today.

Time wrong for right swing

Mike Simkus
...abstract analyses

I'm feeling it. Are you feeling it? People who are in the know say that this big country is in a pendulum in a Grandfather clock. The country's point view swings like the pendulum to the left, the market, the risk and back again to the left, a cycle that repeats itself every other decade.

This big country is swinging to the right, the conservative point of view. Not that the conservative is good or bad. I'm just thankful that we're moving. Or, are we?

You can easily see this conservatism in the popular fashions of today. Men are wearing traditional clothes. Clothes like pleated pants, Harrington tweeds, and on up that ever existing "top hat." Women's fashion too, is still the conservative ballet. Women today no longer expose their thighs like a decade or so ago. Mini-skirts, nor is the no-look fashionable. The women's fashion of today is traditional and safe.

You can also see this conservative attitude in our politicians. Two presidential candidates swear that we must conserve our energy resources that there truly is an energy problem. The third presidential candidate says that there is an energy crisis and that the answer to conserve is a subterfuge. And yet, this same candidate would like for us — Warren Harding did-to refer to his "Normancy."

I read recently that the voters to the two major candidates, advised them to pound on their conservative policies. Why? Because polls said the American electorate is swinging towards conservatism. (It is easy to see why the candidates don't issue, because the polls they don't have to, whatever the polls say, the candidates do.)

What I think the polls do realize, is that we can't rest to the old days, no matter how hard we try. No American believes we can, only the do. We can't bring back the days, no matter how progressive, no matter how conservative our football team game plan is, no matter many reruns of the 1950s movies we watch, the "old days" ain't a gonna happen, no matter how hard we try.

Now, if only the polls we start feeling it, then the tide will start to feel it.

She's tough... but she sides with the little guy.

And she's out to beat the mob at their own game.

Quality not quantity for cross country runners

By WAYNE RIENDEAU
A lack of runners didn't discourage cross country head coach Joe Vitton last year, and this season the song remains the same.

With only four runners last year, one short of the required five to officially field a team in the NAC, Vitton is hoping of placing anywhere in the conference at least first or second west with the team before the season even started.

There are only five runners this year, the bare minimum the Hawks need to technically have a shot at the title. One slip on some wet grass, one pulled muscle, and the official season could well be over for the Hawks.

Vitton however, isn't crying over the situation. In fact, he seems to enjoy the whole state.

"No, I'm not disappointed at the turnout," he said. "If you have five tough guys, you don't want anything else," he said.

"Maybe it's impressive to athletic directors, but say that to or 50 kids have come out for a team, but if 45 of them are dropouts, injuries, or flops, then what good are they?"

One thing Vitton doesn't need to worry about is having flops on the cross country team. The men practice some 18-20 miles a day and often run on their own.

"This is one dedicated group of kids. They're just plain hooked on running," notes Vitton.

"They're about the most dedicated group of kids I have coached in 15 years, and they have the attitude to match."

Indeed, attitude has been one of the key factors as the season gets underway for the Hawks. In the DuPage Invitational held two weeks ago, Saturday the team finished 4th out of 14 schools, with Tom Placek of the Hawks (Schaumburg High School) leading the team with a 27:21 time in the 5-mile run.

The Hawks placed 12th-20th-30th and 35th in the 10-mile and have been improving with each successive contest.

In the seasonal opener at Danville (4 mile), the Hawks experienced what Vitton terms "an eye-opener" in the way of tough competition.

The top two runners were of All-American caliber and the Hawks wound up 9th out of 13 schools participating. Vitton, however, felt the experience was well-worth the trip.

"Sure, we can't hammer our heads against the wall all the time, but you can only be as tough as the competition you run against."

"I could schedule us to run against a team like Oakton every Saturday, but what does that do for the Harper College Cross Country team?"

The following Saturday the Hawks went up against a field of 15 in the Waukesha meet and came out of it with a 9th place finish. Tom Placek paced the Hawks in finishing 15th, Greg Casper was 17th, and Bill Bingham 24th in the Oakton Invitational last Saturday. Placek finished first.

Roundout the team is Ed Joyner and newcomer, Paul Wills, who has been improving with each meet. Wills recently knocked 2 1/2 minutes off his 5-mile time in the DuPage Invite.

Vitton continues to emphasize the team's attitude - it's positive, and more importantly, it works to the Hawk's advantage.

In fact, Vitton sees this mental asset to be a third place or better on paper in the NAC Conference, possibly behind Wright and Triton Colleges.

The Hawks haven't competed against Wright this year but will get their chance this Saturday.

As for Triton, the Hawks have finished behind them in two meets, although in the Waukesha meet they improved while Triton virtually stayed the same.

Vitton figures DuPage to be another threat to the Hawks, but he feels confident that his men will do the job when the time calls for it. He feels that small numbers add up to a closer, more competitive team.

"There are a lot of advantages to dealing with a small number of kids," Vitton stressed. "I can deal with them on a one-on-one basis."

It's easier to discuss track philosophy, and the kids are mature enough to understand it.

"Also, the meets are scheduled every Saturday, which gives us the proper time to train and to train properly."

One of Vitton's pet peeves concerns high school track and cross country, where events are scheduled at all different times during the year.

Vitton, a coach of some 13 years at the high school level must recently Belling Meadows High School, tired of the varied schedule dates and feels that the college system is set up quite well.

However, there are some disadvantages to the junior college level of coaching. In this, his second year at Harper, Vitton regrets the fact that some runners leave the campus before he gets a chance to watch them reach their full potential.

He is not adverse to runners leaving the school to move on to 4-year universities. In fact, Vitton says that he would cut his own throat in order to get one of his top runners a track scholarship if he could.

"I think that the purpose of a junior college is to academically prepare a kid, not to athletically prepare him. Some coaches may hold different viewpoints, but that's my own personal philosophy."

Personal philosophy, yes, but it's a philosophy that seems to be working for the Hawks at this stage of the season.

Hawks shell Lincoln

Lincoln College was supposed to give soccer coach Sander Szabo an indication of how good the Hawks are. Well, either the Hawks are really good, or Lincoln is really bad.

Mark Mota scored four times, Mark Pratoro scored three times, Rick Puls and Mike Purich each scored twice, and Frank Binetti scored once to lead the Hawks to a 12-2 win over Lincoln last Saturday.

Purich was doubtful for the match, but played when Szabo pulled his first string at the end of the first half when the Hawks had taken an 8-0 lead.

"Either things went very well," said Szabo afterwards, "for us, or they're just not that good."

Soccer

Lincoln got off only one shot in the entire first half.

The win gave the Hawks a 7-0-3 record. They beat Triton last Wednesday for the second time this year, 5-0. Puls and Mota scored twice, and Marty Poncrak scored once for Harper.

The Hawks will face Wheaton Saturday and Waukesha Wednesday. Earlier in the year, the Hawks tied Waukesha 1-1. Wednesday's match will probably decide the Region IV North division champion.

Football, Soccer 'midterm' reports

Wait 'till next year . . .

by JOE KOEST
The Harper football Hawks have completed 5 of their 7 regular season games and have come up on the short end of the stick each time.

The Hawks though, unlike their opponents, are basically a team consisting of freshmen. And freshmen are known to make mistakes.

Against Rock Valley, Thornton and Joliet, Harper gave the games away with penalties and turnovers.

One position in particular is being hurt by the lack of experience and that is the quarterback.

Tim Tyrrell was converted to the position from a running back spot. That explains his 114 yards last week against Joliet and his ability to scramble better than pass.

In the passing department, Scott Choklad walks away hands down, well maybe, if it's knees down. Choklad is still suffering from a knee injury that had kept him sidelined for most of the season.

Dave Loch isn't throwing the ball too well but he can run for good yardage.

In the Hawks' backfield, most of their yardage is coming from their speed demons, Ron Burke, Burke is an excellent player and has been gaining momentum throughout the year.

Jim Vaccarello and Bob Block are also steadily improving as time goes on. Both freshmen, Harper should see an outstanding backfield next season if they return.

Harper's offensive line is not very young and they're very on top of it. That means at times the runners can run and at times they can't. Against Joliet however, the team's line looked very sharp and allowed 354 yards rushing to the backs.

In the receivers, Harper has some of the best invested in Mark Hudson and tight end Demetrius Gaines. Both run excellent patterns and have hands like glue. Gaines is currently nursing an injury but should be back in top form soon.

On defense, the Hawks line seemed a bit shaky in the early part of the season, but they've been working their way back. Against Joliet, Thornton and Rock Valley, the defensive line put a greater run on the team and seemed to show improvement.

Harper's linebackers are probably some of the best in the league. Jeff Anderson, along with help from Todd Murande and Shaun Deran, are some of the best against the pass. Against Joliet, Anderson and Melissa both had outstanding performances.

Harper's defensive backs aren't really putting the pressure on the receivers that they need.

With 2 games of experience under their belts, look for Harper to be a power team in the future. Hopefully, the freshmen have grown up. If they have, they're going to be playing pretty rough football.

Hawks' 7(0-2) on roll

by MIKE BAMBACH
The soccer Hawks are 6-0-2. They have scored 17 times in their last two games. That's not too shabby.

The Hawks, however, still have three basic problems:

- Inconsistency
- Injuries
- They just don't know how good they really are

The injuries are starting to come around. Mike Purich, Mark Mota, Rick Pala, Mark Pistorio, and Steve Crane have been coming off physical problems. Frank Binetti, Chris Small and Steve Todd have also been hurt for some of the year. Todd, who has only been forced to make 10 saves in his last two games, is coming off knee surgery.

Inconsistency has also been nagging the Hawks. Before scoring 17 times against Triton and Lincoln, the Hawks tied Waubesa 1-1. Before that match, they shelled DuPage 4-0.

"We're playing better every time," said coach Sandor Szabo. "We're making mistakes that against better opposition would be costly. We're making mistakes that I thought would have eliminated us."

The Hawks have beaten Region IV North division rivals DuPage (4-0), Triton (two 2-1 and 3-0), and tied Waubesa (1-1). Against Kishwaukee, not considered to be as good as DuPage, Triton, or Waubesa, the Hawks tied 1-1. Against Lincoln, considered to be one of the top three teams from downstate, the Hawks won 12-2. So difficult, as Szabo points out to tell how good the Hawks are.

The Hawks have six games remaining, including rematches with Kishwaukee and Waubesa. This is how they shape up to the final month of the season.

STRENGTHS — Defense. In nine games, the Hawks have given up only eight goals. Todd has three shut outs this year. Defenders Small, Crane are, in Szabo's words, "the most consistent players on the team." Todd, in fact, has only had to make 13 saves in his last three games, an indication that opponents aren't getting much chance to score.

Forwards John Prell, Rick Pala, Mota, Pistorio, and Andy Botowski have scored 30 of the Hawks' 38 goals this year. Pala has nine goals and one assist this year. Mota has eight goals and one assist this year.

WEAKNESSES — Halfback. This position is still unsettled. Jimmy Malowren and Marty Ponczak have started here most of the season. "They handle the ball well offensively," said Szabo. "If they lose the ball, they can't back on defense." Szabo will experiment with this position until he finds a better defensive combination.

OUTLOOK — The Hawks are just starting to meet as a unit. They were sluggish in their first three games, all wins, scoring only seven times. Since then, the Hawks have scored 1, 6, 6, 1, 3, and 12 goals. Szabo would like to see more 5-0 and 6-0 than 1-1.

Until the Hawks play some better opposition, like the kind they will if they reach nationals, it is very hard to tell just how good the Hawks are. They will face Wheaton and Lake Forest Colleges. That may give Szabo an indication of how good his team is.

Right now, the Hawks look like they could go undefeated.

Hawks fall short to Joliet 32-20

by JOE KOEST
It was as if two games were played last Saturday between the Hawks and Joliet.

The first game, or first half, was won by Joliet, 20-0.

The second game, belonged to Harper as the Hawks shut out the Wolves 20-0.

The final, however, was a disappointing 32-20 loss to Joliet. The big factor in this game was turnovers.

The Hawks turned the ball over seven times, three by interceptions and four by fumbles. Joliet scored their first touchdowns off Hawk turnovers.

Joliet's Jon Kro picked off a

Dave Loch pass and returned it 29-yards for a touchdown to give the Wolves a quick 7-0 lead.

"We're such a young team," said head coach John Eliask, "that the first interception affected them longer than it should have."

The Hawks drove to the Joliet

30-yard line on their next series highlighted by Ron Burke's 53-yard run. Dave Whitt's fiddly shot attempt, however, was blocked by the Wolves' Joe West.

After Hawk fumble set up a Joliet score early in the second quarter, the Wolves' Arthur Addison went 18-yards pushing Joliet's lead to 21-0.

The Wolves added a 22-yard field goal at the end of the first half for the 33-0 lead.

Hawk quarterback Tim Tyrrell, who had not started the game because of a hip-exacerbated knee, threw a 38-yard TD pass to Mark Hudson on the third play of the second half.

Tyrrell, who rushed for 99 yards on the day, had back-to-back runs of 38 and 34-yards to give the Hawks their second touchdown.

"We know Ron was good," says head football coach John Eliask, "but we didn't know how good he was. We are really happy with what he is doing. He's exceptionally better than an average player and his strength is speed."

Burke, a freshman at Harper, is academically a sophomore. He spent his first year of college at Iowa Eastern community college playing baseball. At Iowa, he led for the team in home runs.

"Right now," says Burke, "I'm undecided about either sport. But I do know that I'll take what ever one helps pay for my education."

"I'm pretty much satisfied with the way I've been playing," he continues, "although my blocking needs a little work."

Burke, understandably, has a great deal of respect for his offensive line. "I don't care what it looks like out there," he says, "the back doesn't go it all by himself!"

Offensive guard Dan Tobin is very pleased of the job Burke is doing. "Even when there are no holes," Tobin says, "Ron will find ways to pick up yardage. We're all very proud of him."

After Hawk fumble set up a Joliet score early in the second quarter, the Wolves' Arthur Addison went 18-yards pushing Joliet's lead to 21-0.

The Wolves added a 22-yard field goal at the end of the first half for the 33-0 lead.

Hawk quarterback Tim Tyrrell, who had not started the game because of a hip-exacerbated knee, threw a 38-yard TD pass to Mark Hudson on the third play of the second half.

Tyrrell, who rushed for 99 yards on the day, had back-to-back runs of 38 and 34-yards to give the Hawks their second touchdown.

"We know Ron was good," says head football coach John Eliask, "but we didn't know how good he was. We are really happy with what he is doing. He's exceptionally better than an average player and his strength is speed."

Burke, a freshman at Harper, is academically a sophomore. He spent his first year of college at Iowa Eastern community college playing baseball. At Iowa, he led for the team in home runs.

"Right now," says Burke, "I'm undecided about either sport. But I do know that I'll take what ever one helps pay for my education."

"I'm pretty much satisfied with the way I've been playing," he continues, "although my blocking needs a little work."

Burke, understandably, has a great deal of respect for his offensive line. "I don't care what it looks like out there," he says, "the back doesn't go it all by himself!"

Offensive guard Dan Tobin is very pleased of the job Burke is doing. "Even when there are no holes," Tobin says, "Ron will find ways to pick up yardage. We're all very proud of him."

Hawks' Burke running wild

On any given Saturday afternoon, Ron Burke can be found out on the football field doing a number of things:

One of those things might be punting head on into a linebacker to gain a mere three or four yards, the hard way.

Or he'll be found cheering his teammates on and giving them encouragement.

Still another thing Burke does quite often, is get into the open field and use his dazzling speed to pick up a 50 or 60 yard run.

But one thing you will never see Ron Burke do is give up.

Burke, a graduate of Fremd High School, set a new school record in the Hawks 32-20 loss to Joliet last Saturday by rushing for his third straight 100-yard game.

Burke's 172 pound running back, is quite accustomed to receiving honors for his performances. In 1979, he led his team into the state playoffs and set a record. He was named All-Mid-Suburban Conference all-star, All-Area, Chicagoan, and honorable mention All-State. Burke is also the second-leading total offensive player in Fremd's history.

Fremd isn't Burke's only talent. In his senior year in Fremd, Burke was named All-MSL, and All-Area in baseball. He also led the area in stolen base.

"We know Ron was good," says head football coach John Eliask, "but we didn't know how good he was. We are really happy with what he is doing. He's exceptionally better than an average player and his strength is speed."

Senate elects officers; Kern president

by WENDY WINKELHAKE
Student Senate elected officers to head the organizational activities for the 1980-81 academic year. Elected to the office of president was Charles Kern with Sophie Hatz elected vice president.

Due to unfamiliarity with various procedures and duties of the job, both are unsure of their major goals while in office. "It's difficult to say what my major goal will be," Kern said.

However, Hatz did express the senate's interest in setting one major goal for the year in addition to several smaller scale goals. But again, due to the fact that the senate isn't quite "settled in," that goal has not yet been decided upon.

"We would like to work toward a big goal but we haven't decided on it yet," explained Hatz. But as for her goal as vice president, Hatz would like to generate more student involvement in campus activities.

At its meeting last Wednesday, the senate addressed itself to the issues of constructing a better lounge area for students, more protection in the parking lots and a cleaner cafeteria. The problems will be investigated by senate committees before any action is taken. The senate also appointed representatives from several areas to fulfill seats designated to that area. Appointed as peer counseling representative was Daniela Stanovic; with Rick Belanger serving as representative of the arts fall to this committee.

As vice president, Hatz' main duties are to oversee the committees within the senate and act as a liaison between other campus organizations and the senate. Thirteen committees fall under Hatz' scrutiny.

These committees include Academic Calendar Committee - This group reviews and makes recommendations to the vice-president of academic affairs concerning the scheduling of classes.

Admissions Committee - The purpose of this group is to organize, coordinate and evaluate the admissions process for both the college and various academic programs. Committee on Interscholastic and Intramural Athletics - This committee reviews and makes recommendations concerning proposals for adoption and revision of varsity sports and intramural programs.

Copyright and Patent Committee - Those serving on this committee handle lease procedures which govern ownership equity and use of materials and equipment originating with college personnel.

Cultural Arts Committee - The scheduling of college/community programs representative of the arts fall to this committee.

Curriculum Committee - This body serves as an advisory board to the vice president of academic affairs and review new program concepts, recommends approval of new courses, changes in existing courses, changes in existing consolidation of course offerings.

Environmental Health and Safety Committee - The purpose of this group is to identify and enumerate safety, health, and environmental hazards which affect the campus community.

Faculty Evaluation System Committee - This group reviews and evaluates the Faculty Evaluation System.

Graduation Committee. This group plans and executes the graduation ceremony held in the spring. Learning Resources Center Advisory Committee - This committee advises the dean of learning resources and the staff on the center's procedures and practices which affect the instructional program, faculty and students.

Student Conduct Committee - This committee hears serious cases of violations of the student conduct code and recommends disciplinary action to the vice-president of student affairs.

Student Publications Committee - Guidelines for all student publications are set by this committee. In addition to serving as a hearing board for grievances concerning the publications, the committee also appoints the editor-in-chief of the Harbinger.

Vice-President of Academic Affairs Advisory Council - The purpose of the council is to serve as the communication network between the vice-president of academic affairs and constituent groups in academic affairs.

Although he basically serves as a liaison between the Board of Trustees and the senate, John Malowski, student trustee, stresses the importance of recognition to the senate. He explained that the senate will have to do good things in order to get recoged and generate more involvement. "I definitely feel that the senate will make the campus a better place to live. I hope, in terms of a senate, that we will be known to students," he said. "They (the senate) are in a learning process and it will take awhile."

As student trustee Malowski is expected to serve on one of two senate committees. Unless the president requests him to participate in other activities, the main function of the student trustee is to serve as a liaison between the senate and the Board of Trustees.

"I have the opinion of a senate seat. I'm not automatically on the senate upon election of student trustee," he said.

"In the same sense I am a senator. If there is a complaint made about the senate I am one of the people. If there is a complaint I am also one of the people."

Malowski pointed that several good ideas were brought out at last week's senate meeting (protection, better lounges, cleaner cafeteria) and by the end of the month work should be going on the projects.

The senate holds regular meetings every Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Student Activities Office, Bldg. A338.

Where are the senators?

Ah, yes? They are a quiet bunch aren't they? Student senators were elected several weeks ago and the campus still awaits a peep from their nest.

Now, it need not be an earth shattering roar venting from the senate office and plans to overthrow the campus administration need not be on the drawing board to grab attention. But a general introduction to the campus could do the trick in plasters after plasters, such candidate needed to get out and meet the student, to really understand where the student was coming from and get their opinions on the issues.

But where is all this activity taking place? In some obscure nook of the campus? Perhaps on the rooftops? Or is it taking place at all?

It is entirely up to the senate as to the image they wish to present the student body. They have a choice of becoming an entirely new student senate and breaking the mold cast in previous years or of just conforming to that mold.

Year after year, the same old gripe has been heard the student senate doesn't do anything. With an entirely new senate and fresh ideas these gripe could be dispelled once and for all. And there needs to be any new issues, plenty of issues were tabled throughout the last few semesters. Several such as the bike path proposal and funding for the reopening of the bldg. A snack bar could be reinvestigated. Who knows, with the new blood in the office, maybe a solution to the "unmovable issues" could be found or how about working out a compromise on the proposals?

True, the senators have only held office for a few weeks. But the most important thing to any newly elected officer should be to become familiar with the body that he is governing.

Before any effective decisions can be issued on any proposal, new or old, student input is vital.

After all it is the student senate and there are plenty of students on campus to get input from. All it takes is a little legwork and patience. Legwork to get out there and meet with students, and the patience to listen to all of their almost endless complaints, a few outrageous ideas and maybe even a few rare compliments.

If the long held image of an unaring student senate is to be broken, it must be done now. It is essential for the senate to begin on the right foot, to get out and become visible to the student body and demonstrate their willingness to work in the student's favor.

The choice is yours, senate. Either follow the same old path and hit the same deadends or carve a new path and overcome the obstacles.

Biologist quits in face of cloning furor

SAN DIEGO, CA (CP) — In the first test of federal guidelines governing highly-controversial university DNA experiments, a University of California, San Diego biologist has resigned his academic position.

Ian Kennedy allegedly cloned a virus that was banned by federal environmental guidelines. Kennedy quit last week, some nine months after supposedly cloning something called the "semiki forest virus." He cited "irreconcilable differences" with university officials who were investigating the charges against him. He denied any wrongdoing, saying his leaving was necessary "in light of certain things I want to do in science."

DNA experiments themselves have long been the object of furor. Opponents worry that the risks of creating hazardous new life forms are

Students pay for faculty raise

Students has set in within this person. On September 24 the Board of Trustees passed a salary increase of 15.1 percent for the faculty on campus.

This increase will cost some approximately $40,000. I am not in disagreement with the increase. As a matter of fact, I voted in favor of it. I feel that we have an outstanding

John Malkowski from the desk of staff here at Harper, and considering he is paying for the raise, give it to them! Last May the projected Full-Time Enrollment (FTE) was about 6800 students and in May tuition was raised from $18 per semester hour to $19.

At that time, the board figured the tuition increase would generate about $60,000. Well, that was long before it was known that enrollment was going to increase about 10 percent.

Tuition was raised and the faculty got a raise.

From my point of view you get what you pay for, so why be up in arms about the faculty being high paid? If it keeps Harper in the top 10 category in the country, and students need the community pays for it, leave the faculty alone.

Testing Your Intelligence. . Are You "Smart"?

Will a Masters degree always run out over the Bachelor's degree when seeking permanent employment? Is it safe to assume that the more "glamorous" jobs should unquestionably be given to those people with the greater knowledge, seen by society as the higher rung on the "degree ladder"? Are certain degrees the key to the better job, the better lifestyle, and the richer opportunities? What is needed in obtaining that degree?

"Degree," as defined by one source is the extent to which you want to expand your knowledge. And yet to another, it is regarded as the measure of intellect, or the motivation to learn. To me this document simply represents being "book smart." At the same time you may be "book smart," and yet "socially boring or dumb." Have you ever thrown a party and invited a couple of highly educated guests, in hopes of an exhilarating evening, only to discover that these people had the same effect on you, as if you had taken a couple of "sleepers"? What went wrong? Many people are guilty of making a very common mistake, looking upon "smartness" in the pure academic sense. Smartness, can also be thought of in terms of social smartness, emotional smartness, rationalization smartness and street smartness, and the list can go on.

People who only recently become manipulative minded commonly know as "street smart." Unfortunately this form has only strengthened over the years, instead of hopefully tapering off. Constant users of this method are continually being reinforced or encouraged by it, because of its great turnout in producing just the right results. In some instances, the calculating mind can perhaps outrun the book smart person. You see, at times being book smart shouldn't and doesn't always ensure you that immediate success. For too often is that job, promotion, or the more rewarding opportunities, missed out heavily on academic standings alone, with little or no influence of other such levels of intelligence. Not always does the "school smart" person hold the same amount of smartness when dealing with the outside world. It doesn't automatically go hand in hand with the territory, as several people are inclined to believe. More attention should begin being focused on the people showing "worldly smartness," whether it be emotional, social, manipulative, etc. I am in no way condoning manipulation, as a matter of fact, I find it very distasteful. It's just that it does exist and we should be more aware of it. We live in a "people pleasing" world, and I feel it's of utmost importance to be well-rounded in all areas (including the ones I've already mentioned) of smartness. To have the art, and skill of being able to interact well with those around us, is what I see as the key which opens that special door to the richer and more meaningful life.

Signed,

high, and that the moral ambiguity of creating and perhaps selling life forms are legally impossible.

Scientists, who disagreeing about the safety of the research, have coded to federal guidelines for recombinant DNA experiments as a means of quelling objections to the experiments.

The federal government, moreover, funds most of the DNA research. The government's National Institutes of Health (NIH) guidelines forbade the cloning of semliki forest virus until questions about its safety could be answered.

Last January, however, four UCSD graduate students reported that Kennedy was cloning the banned virus. The university's Biosafety Committee ordered the cloning stopped, and confiscated the material.

The committee has since hypothesized that either Dr. Kennedy had known the source and identity of the material used to clone DNA copies of the semliki forest virus, or Dr. Kennedy, due to poor record keeping or lapse of memory, cloned the virus by mistake.

In its report, released in early September, the committee ordered Kennedy not to perform any more cloning, until the situation is resolved.

But since January, the National Institutes of Health have liberalized cloning restrictions

The ban on semliki virus was lifted in the process.

"That's the ironic part of all this," says Dr. William Garland, director of NIH's Office of Recombinant DNA. "But since it was against the guidelines when he did it, then he would have to face the penalties."

Dr. Garland says the biologists could be permanently cut off from NIH research subsidies. But Garland says the penalty probably wouldn't be that harsh, in light of the virus' new legal status.

The committee will make its decision on the Kennedy case next month. Among its options is a moratorium on NIH grants (AUCSD)

Bone corrects story; doesn't support hike

Dear Editor:

I read with interest your story on President McGrath's contract in the Oct. 2 issue of the Harbinger. You mentioned in the story that Board Member John Klusmann voted against the contract extension.

This is not accurate. There were two motions regarding President McGrath's contract. The first motion, which I made, called for extending the contract through June 30, 1982. The vote on that motion was seven yes with student trustee John Malkowski abstaining.

The second motion called for a total salary package including contributions to the Board to a retirement plan of $65,000. This salary amount is the motion on which both Mr.

in bars. I also know of several "houses of ill repute" in the New York survive there, survive anywhere."

After reading the article, I feel that Mike is a real jerk to be polite. He used up half a page and wrote nothing of value. It seems as though Mike never left his back yard because his experiences were nothing out of the ordinary. You can go to any big city and see the exact same things going on.

As a matter of fact, a lot of the same things go on right here in the suburbs. I have seen people "crack a vial of white powder and sniff it into their noses" out on the streets, at the forest preserves and frequently Klusmann and I voted no. Student trustee John Malkowski abstained.

I feel strongly that President McGrath has done an outstanding job at Harper and I am impressed with his performance. My reason for a no vote on the salary issue, a reason shared by Mrs. Klusmann, is the feeling that $65,000 is higher than I would have preferred, especially when one considers the increases received by other Harper staff persons and the salaries of surrounding community college presidents who have schools similar in size to Harper.

LaValle embodies French charm, flair

"You can take the woman out of the country, but you can't take the country out of the woman."

That could be Irene Lavelle's philosophy. Mme. Lavelle, assistant professor of French, resided in France for 24 years before she met an American and moved to the states.

"I like it here. I like the Midwest," Lavelle said. She especially enjoys the students. "I like the variety of students we have here. We have returning mothers, and students just out of high school, there's a wide range of students. I like the variety from semester to semester. Students change. The quality changes, the attitudes change. Students are there's an outstanding crop, other years just table wine. But every time the semester ends, I hate to lose them."

This year, according to Lavelle, is a vintage year. "They have a sparkle. Their attitudes are great."

Mme. Lavelle may love her students, but she also enjoys and needs time alone. "It's good to be alone sometimes. I close all the doors, take the phone off the hook, have a glass of wine and listen to my french records," she said. "I get homesick, but it gets it out of my system."

"But I can't listen to my records (anyone is around or if the phone's ringing I have to be alone). Afterwards, I'm ready to face anything, maybe it's the wine. Though, not the music," she said with a smile.

Lavelle, who was studying for a career in law at Faculte de Droit in France, had to change her major when she teacher

feature

moved to the States. "I would miss that part of it over again. Everything is different in the United States. The Penal code, the cases and so on. I would've had to learn everything I'd learned. I was disappointed because I planned my whole future in law. I bought a lot of prepaid in school and had to work harder to be accepted because I was the only girl in my class."

But she loves teaching French. "The important thing in a language class is to lose inhibitions, lose the self-consciousness one has."

"The marvelous part about a language is that you can be anything you want to be. All my students have french names that can change their whole personality. Someone named Sharon could become Brigitte, an exciting french name."

But names can be "funny," too. One of Mme. Lavelle's daughters is named Nancy. Her husband wanted to name her Nancy Lorraine, but Lavelle is from Nancy which is the capital of Lorraine, east of Paris. "To my family, it would be like someone in the Midwest naming their child Chicago, Illinois."

When Lavelle left France, she not only had to adjust to a new country and a new marriage, but to the food as well. "Corn was quite a surprise. In Europe, corn is raised for the animals. The first time it was put in front of me, I didn't know if I should eat it with a fork or not."

Mme. Lavelle also tried fried racoon and turtle meat when she was in Wisconsin. "It was good. It didn't bother me because I didn't even know what a racoon was. The food I miss most, though, is the cheese. Whenever I'm back home, they ask me what I want for dinner and I tell them, soup and cheese. There's such an endless variety of French cheeses," she said.

Lavelle may love her country and her teaching and her marriage, but it's traveling that comes second nature to her. "Traveling is my number one interest. Even the smell of fuel at the airport excites me."

Although Lavelle has been to many cities in Europe and the states, "I think it's one place I want to see before I die. It seems like it would answer all my dreams, the sea, the weather, the atmosphere. But I have to see it before it becomes too touristy," she said.

Without cover versions what can you do?

It has come to my attention that we have many young rock 'n' rollers on the Harper campus. After receiving many invitations to "come see our band," I am confused. Why are so many of these bands still playing in garages or basements? Why are they not playing in the local club scene?

One group in particular, Quaternary practice in a makeshift studio that they have created in the basement of the house they are renting. Quaternary, one of the best bands I have seen, will probably not make it out of the basement unless attitude change.

With most every band not in the clubs scurrying to catch on the new wave, it is disappointing that Quaternary still plays in a supervised rag that hangs in their basement. Here is a band doing something creative, but not getting attention from the right people. Where is their talent? What makes the band so specialized is the presence of Dave Olson. Dave plays clarinet, flute, keyboards and bassoon. Yet a bassoon?

abstract analysis

At first, when the group approached me and said, "come see our band," I was apprehensive. I mean, a bassoon player in a rock 'n' roll band? It sounds so, perhaps, gimmicky.

From the first chord, to the last drum beat, the group played their hearts out. Each song was meticulously played. The group had demonstrated themselves to be very tight, and very together.

I'll refrain from telling you who influenced them and who they sound like, because I wouldn't want to prejudice your opinion of seeing them. But I will say that they are very competent and deserve to be heard.

Their originals are quite good, and I requested that they give me a tape of some that became a favorite of mine. The cover versions that they do are kind of obscure. How many groups do Joni Mitchell's "I'll be your man" or Gill Breadway's "Showdown" in the same set (off Broadway doesn't even do Showdown anymore)?

But, this group would rather not play cover versions at all. As a matter of fact, this group likes to play their own material. What artist does?

I deplore people at night clubs that scream out, "Hey, do 'Whole Lotta Love,'" or "Do some A.C./D.C.," or "How about some Genesis?" Why do some people insist that the group playing must be a live juke box?

Why can't they be happy listening to something that a group has created? Would you ask Andy Warhol to paint the Mona Lisa?

And here's the rub. I would like to say "Go see Quaternary." But I can't. No agent will book Quaternary. Because the group does not do enough cover versions, and because they refuse to do the cover versions that the booking agents have suggested, the group has not been hired.

It's not the booking agents' fault. Bob Brantley, drummer, said "The booking agents want to make money. They are in this business for profit. We are a high risk if we're to do the copy they want, we would be less of a risk, and more likely to make a profit for them." Brian McCall, guitarist, and Frank Colletti, bassist, agree that the agents reflect the audience.

And the audience wants to hear cover versions, not originals. And since the real world revolves around that happy medium the dollar, I wonder how many groups are out there refusing to bend?

Maybe, this naive attitude of "you must play cover versions," will stop and music will progress, like all things should. I mean, aren't you tired of hearing some guy sing "baby, baby," or the same trite guitar lead for the hundredth time?

Someday, Quaternary will make it, and not have to play cover versions. But it's too bad that they aren't given the chance to perform their music, and not some other artists' music today. Because of that attitude, the group loses and people who want to see rock 'n' roll progress lose too. I'm sure Quaternary will resolve this situation, and be in the nightclub and concert halls where they belong soon.

"New wave" music has arrived

"New wave" music has clearly arrived, in terms of American acceptance and marketability. When I began working at Flip Side Records - about fourteen months ago - the amount of new-wave product getting in store play was minimal. Things have changed. One by one, new-wave acts cracked into the Billboard top twenty list.

Joe Jackson, Elvis Costello, The Pretenders, Gary Numan, Pat Benatar, Talk, for immediate success. Good musicianship. They fit this great style.

Gary Numan seems to have gotten trapped. I just hearing his latest, "Telekon." I muttered a few mild expletives and shoved the vinyl back into its sleeve. This is depression rock which is great for everyone at one time or another. If you want to kill a whole party, throw in any side of Numan's last two albums. This isn't a crack at his music. I like it, but it is getting redundant.

More fun in early November. The Pretenders, fronted by the versatile Chrissy Hynde, grabbed us by the epiboles and landed. Here, she is that woman

"I'm too precious." Chrissy can swear really well, which indicates her chances for being listened to. This group rocks without abandon. It is a very tight bunch of musicians with a good front person. Radio programs have their critics. I know everyone that this is "new wave." Great. It just made room for a streamlined come package. The Pat Benatar to make it really go. No offense, but she always bores me.

Talking Heads are already coming out into new ways. The one I've heard from their new album is one of the strongest I've heard in months. They are supposed to have funk-ed out, fantastic new funk. The label, as a "new wave" band. The Heels are truly a progressive act rock and free from the trappings of musical classification when the little amount of what is separated from the hippie type of stuff, we'll see Talking Heads in the future grouping.

The Police have just released their third album, titled "Zenyatta M. Mendatta." This band has real chemistry. Sing is a first class band and has one of the more unique vocal styles in popular music. It is a very tight bunch of musicians with a good front person. Radio programs have their critics. interesting instrumental reminiscent of "The Rock's" Van Big Without You." In their second release. These display the fine musicianship that is missing from so much other new wave music. Some may argue that the spirit of new wave lies in roughness and inexperienced playing. I advise them to try and argue with the Police.

The risk has left this style of music. The acceptance has been quick, the profile large. What was considered unsafe two years ago is considered highly commercial now with repetition and familiarity, the human consciousness will accept more and more. New wave is normal, so it is rather hard to ignore. Or easy, depending on your perspective.

Next week, I'll be reviewing "Roman in Light," the new effort from Talking Heads. How I have to get Simkus to enlighten me on dadman.

"The Boss" proves it all night

by BILL KELLY
It was a rock 'n' roll heaven then Bruce Springsteen in the headlining act.

I am admittedly lacking in any real objectivity on the subject, but had any doubts existed concerning the Springsteen legacy, they were immediately put to death on Oct. 10 (opening night concert). In the first of two sold out shows at the Flip Side, Bruce Springsteen and the East Street Band put out three and a half hours of high energy, musical euphoria.

The trend today among alleged "superstars" is to arrogantly stroll out hours after some lukewarm, warm-up band and dribble forth forty-five minutes of self-glorifying pulp. Springsteen however, gave his audience only what they came for, himself.

Without the aid of smoke bombs, laser beams and other colorful crutches, the boss opened with a charging rendition of "Born to Run," followed with "The Promised Land" and "Tenth Avenue Freeze-Out." From there on, I could only wonder why the crowd had to pay for the use of their seats.

Point blank "Independence Day" and "Cherry Bomb" were just a few of the songs Springsteen played, along with the title track from his just released double live album, "The River."

Equally well-covered were songs from Springsteen's previous two albums, "Darkness On The Edge of Town" and "Born To Run."

All too often the concert press is subjected to the all-consuming "see these well-indulgent displays of individuality." In this case, I would be surprised, I cannot suggest a more likely candidate.

French entertainer Maurice Chevalier continued to star in movies in his 70's.

At the end of the concert, Springsteen announced that he'd be returning to Chicago sometime before the end of the tour.

This article is obviously only another small contribution to the countless accolades showered upon Springsteen, but should the campaign for the paragon saint of rock 'n' roll be proposed, I cannot suggest a more likely candidate.

Women fall twice at tournament

The Harper Women's Volleyball team fell to defeat twice over the past weekend at the Lake County College Tournament.

The Hawks dropped their games to Lake County and Rock Valley. DuPage College was the other team that round out the tournament of four.

Lake County pounded the Hawks, 3 games to 1, by scores of 15-9, 15-8 and 15-4.

Rock Valley, after losing to DuPage, took three straight from the Hawks, 15-9, 15-8 and 15-13.

"We just don't play with consistency," commented first year volleyball Coach Lynn Hiltbeck. "The girls have to learn how everyone else is playing the game and then use all their ability.

Good performances on part of the Hawks were Ann Astrowski, Terri Bauer, Karen Kamrad, Theresa Husak and Laura Haeger.

The Hawks have eight games remaining and then the sectionals of which they are looking forward to.

"We've got eight games coming against teams that are equally matched," said Coach Hiltbeck. "We're really looking forward to sectionals cause that will give us a rematch with some of the teams we've already played."

What A Difference A Year Makes

What a difference a year makes.

Last season, the women's tennis team placed ninth in the NCAA's nationals. A year later, the Hawks can't even get out of the Region IV sectionals.

The Hawks, who placed fourth out of five teams, were buoyed by the play of Pam Meyer and Jacquie Anderson. Meyer reached the finals but was eliminated by Thornton's No. 1 singles player, Thornton, meanwhile, won the sectional and now advances to national play.

In the doubles, Meyer and Anderson again reached the finals only to be turned back by Thornton's No. 1 pair.

"We had nothing to be ashamed of," said coach Martha Bell. "Where they play fundamentally polished tennis, we make mistakes. That was the difference. It was a tough one to handle."

The season isn't over just yet. The Hawks, 2-3 in NAC play, play DuPage Thursday in a make-up of an earlier match that was postponed because of rain. The Hawks then are in the NAC meet this weekend.

"I think it's going to be one of those days," said Bell. "where our team is going to have to play its best tennis."

All that's left now is pride.

Harper's chance for victory Saturday

Harper's chances for their first victory of the season in football never looked better than this upcoming weekend.

Saturday afternoon Harper will host Wright College at home in their second to last home game of the season. Wright has a fine quarterback and running team, however, they don't possess many points a game.

"If we play good and don't make the turnovers, I think we can win this one," commented Coach John Eliazak.

Tom Tyrrell will be the probable starting quarterback for the Hawks, while Scott Chaskid looks on with his knee injury.

Chaskid played only 1 1/2 games so far this season because of the injury he suffered early in the season.

Demetrius Gaines, Harper's 6'7", 210 lbs. tight end, will be back on the offensive squad this week. During the Juleid game two weeks ago, Demetrius suffered a twisted shoulder and previous to that, Gaines was moved to defensive end. Demetrius has one of the best instincts for catching the ball on the team, however Mark Hudson, wide receiver, is another big play man.

"Along with Gaines and Hudson, Bob Blyth and Jeff Brown add even more depth to Harper's receivers."

With all this talent, Harper's only problem looms bigger than ever.

"Their quarterbacks aren't the best passers and can't always get the ball into the open field."

"The coaches do an excellent job in getting us prepared for the games," states sophomore Gaines, "but our own mental mistakes on the field hurt us."

"We make things harder on ourselves that it should be."

Saturday afternoon the Hawks should have an easy time of it, and they should be able to pass their way up and down the field. The only problem is getting the ball there.

The game kicks off at 1 p.m.

Placek No. 1 Cross Country

By MIKE BAMBACH

Often lost in the maze of team sport athletes, major sports scholarship, recruiting, and eligibility violations are the individual team sport athletes. Tom Placek is hardly an exception.

Placek, a sophomore at Harper after spending a year at Western Illinois, is the Hawks' No. 1 cross-country runner and has a legitimate shot at All-American.

"He's got a good communication approach to running," says Cross Country coach Jim Vitton. "He's a good kid to have around. He has talent."

Placek started running as a freshman in Virginia. Then, before his sophomore year, he moved to Schaumburg. He had an uneventful freshman season, but as a senior, Placek was All-Mid-Suburban League, All-District, was undefeated in dual meets, and set the school record at Schaumburg's former course.

From advice of his coach at Schaumburg, Placek went to Western Western, however, didn't have a cross country team. Now, after a year away from competitive running, Placek is at Harper.

Placek has had a decent year. He started the season with a 10th place finish in Danville. He then followed with 13th, 12th, 4th, and 3th place finishes at Waubesa, DuPage, Oakton, and the Milwaukee Invite. His best performance of the year was at the Oakton Helder League where he was first in his division and fourth overall. He finished the

"I love it, I wish I loved it as much in high school as I do now. In high school, you practice, practice, practice. In college, it's more individual . . . it's up to you."

four mile course in 20 minutes. This Saturday, Placek will take the Hawks into the conference meet at DuPage Regional, a week from Saturday, followed by the Carthage Open, and then the N.A.A. trials, where he needs to finish in the top 15 to be All-American.

Placek was turned onto running by his older brother. "He tricked me into it," says Placek. "He told me, 'Why not be the only freshman to walk out four years of cross country?' so I went out for the team. So did 12 or 13 other freshmen."

Beyond this season and his next two years in college, Placek has set no immediate running goals. "If you're really talented, you can try out for the Olympics. There's always marathoning. After college, though, you run mainly to keep in shape."

What drives an individual, like Placek, who runs 15-20 miles a day to stay in peak shape, to compete in a sport where recognition is sparse, if that? "Personal goals more than anything," says Placek. "It would be nice to get a scholarship to a four-year school."

Your friends keep you going too. "You want to run as hard as them, because you don't want to let them down."

There is more strategy to running than conditioning, although conditioning is the key to running. "You can't go out too fast or you'll burn yourself out. You have to pace yourself. You try to get the runner in front of you," says Placek.

Most of running, though, is mental. It takes endurance and determination to finish a five-mile course as it does conditioning. "If you're thinking well," says Placek, "you're running well."

Despite the lack of recognition, the continual training, running is what keeps the unassuming Placek going. "I love it," he says. "I wish I loved it more in high school as I do now. Not a whole lot of people do it. It's a habit. You feel guilty if you don't run, or you get out of shape. It's nice to have the feeling of being in shape."

Right now, Placek is aiming for two things: All-American and a scholarship to a four-year school. If he does both, he will have accomplished another goal. "I like to see my parents some money, too. He probably will."

Tie is symbolic of Hawks

It wasn't that the Hawks tied DuPage 1-1 last Wednesday that bothered coach Sanford Szabo. It was the way the Hawks wound up tying.

"I don't know what we're thinking about," said Szabo after Stu Thompson's own goal gave the Chapparral a 1-1 tie with the Hawks. "It wasn't Stu's fault," Szabo added. "It was a fumble steal. Todd's fault. He's just not taking charge like he should be."

The Hawks then went out and lost Wheaton, 2-2. The Hawks aren't 7-4.

The loss to DuPage was a big blow to the Hawks in a must-win situation against Waubesa for the No. 1 seeding in the Region IV playoffs in three weeks. The Hawks tied Waubesa earlier, 1-1.

The tie is symbolic of the Hawks after scoring 17 goals in two wins two weeks ago, 5-0 over Triton and 1-2 over Wheaton. The Hawks have managed only three goals in their last two games — both and that, does not thrill Szabo.

"I think we think consistently throughout the game," said Szabo. "We should be better than that," he added. "Their brains are just out there. They think we're good, but we're not. We can't always score but when we do, we stand around and admire ourselves."

The Hawks are, of course, better than the team that got to the N.C.A.A. Midwest Regionals last year before falling, 3-0. What Szabo means, however, is that compared with the caliber of national play, the Hawks aren't that good. Miami Dade South, which won last year's N.C.A.A. title, recruits players from other countries. That is the difference.

It has, though, still been a tough year for the Hawks

Another tie would most likely knock them out of the No. 1 Region IV North playoffs because Waubesa, 3-2-2, has more wins and fewer ties. A win over Waubesa and Knikwaukee, another Region IV North rival, would give the Hawks a better Region IV North record.

"If we beat Waubesa and Knikwaukee," said Szabo, "we'll be back No. 1. But if we play like we did against DuPage, forget it."

At last! Scholarship for "open" students

Applause, applause! At last there is a scholarship specifically designed for second year students. But the big news is that they do not have to be children of veterans. In desperate need of financial aid or even enrolled in a certain program.

The Harper College Educational Foundation has established an Awards for Excellence program designed to assist students having completed their first year of education at Harper.

There are still several standards that have to be met, a 3.0 grade point average must be maintained and some sort of involvement in co-curricular activity or community service must be performed.

But the best feature of the award is the fact that the scholarship is totally based on the academic standing of the applicants. Financial need and enrollment in a certain program are required no more than last season's squads at a Harper football game.

All too many times students are overlooked or bypassed when the backs are being doled out simply because they can't afford school or they are not enrolled in a certain program, not pursuing a certain area of work or simply do not meet ethnic codes set by the scholarship sponsors.

Sponsors should bear in mind that while a student is in school it does not necessarily mean that he is not having trouble meeting the financial obligations involved.

There are a number of other organizations to offer those of a certain heritage assistance and it is equally important for each career area to offer its own form of financial aid. But above all, it is important that everyone be considered equally to at least one form of assistance offered.

The grade point average and service requirements may knock some out right off the bat. But those that qualify should take advantage of the opportunity and apply for the scholarship. Obviously, they make absolutely nothing to lose. And if they gain, tuition, book, supply and graduation fees for the spring semester will be met by the foundation. The foundation is quite sincere in its efforts, in order to avoid "cheating" one Harper class out of the chance for the scholarship.

A special award was established for those wrapping up 43 semester hours of credit at the end of the fall semester. And the scholarship is not some false in the pan idea that will be here today and not tomorrow, it will be an annual award.

While there is still a long way to go in financially assisting "open" students (those not involved in a certain program, etc.), this is a small step for the foundation and a giant leap for those struggling to make ends meet in the tuition battle.

Groups make accreditation evaluations

This week is a particularly busy and important one for Harper College. Three groups of visitors have come to the campus to make accreditation evaluations.

The evaluation team from the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools was on campus from Monday through Wednesday for a re-accreditation visit. Harper College was the first two-year institution in Illinois to receive unqualified full accreditation in 1971, only six years after its founding. North Central Association accreditation is given to the institution as a whole, and attests to a high level of performance in all areas of operation. The importance to the student of Harper's designation as a fully accredited college is reflected in transferability of credit to four-year institutions and the high regard given the certificate of associate degrees earned here.

From the desk of . . . James McGrath, Harper President

Crowder, President of West Virginia Northern Community College; Dr. Charles McDowell, Department Head, Cahoyoga Community College; Dr. Robert Elcher, President, Southeast Community College; Dr. Dent V. DiIago, Vice President, Macomb County Community College; and Mr. Raymond J. Smith, Executive Dean, Pima County Community College.

The team met with the Board of Trustees, administrators and representatives of various areas of the College. The preliminary report of the team will be completed and sent to the college by Dec. 1.

The second group, a team of five persons from the Illinois Community College Board

ICCB in Springfield, arrived on Wednesday for a two-day Recognition Visit. The ICCB evaluation is traditionally scheduled concurrently with the North Central Association visit, since both agencies are reviewing the College as a whole. Members of the ICCB are Kenia Krenn, Executive Recognition Officer; C. William Coons, Finance and Audit; Charles A. Henspend, Site and Construction and Student Services; Dennis W. Howland, Instruction and Pennington A. Wallhaus, MIS and Institutional Studies.

In addition to general accreditation of the College, several of Harper's programs are eligible to seek accreditation from professional associations. The third evaluation team, on campus from Monday through Thursday, represents the National League of Nursing. Evaluation team members are Sylvia Edge and Dolores Var.

They have been observing student clinical experiences and meeting with students, representatives of the Nursing Program and faculty members from the various divisions.

The Nursing Program is seeking accreditation for the first time. As more nurses plan to continue study at four-year institutions, accreditation becomes important in assuring transferability of credits earned in the first two years.

This week also marked the start of the second eight-week session of classes. Late enrollment for the second half of the semester continues through this week of particular interest this session are the many eight-week physical education classes available in Building M. Students may also wish to find out about hours set aside for recreational use of the fine facilities.

There are many interesting programs, lectures, and films coming to the campus during the remaining weeks of the semester, and intercollegiate athletic matches are underway in several sports. I hope you will continue to enjoy the variety of activities available to you at Harper.

Excuses - road of life detours

Excuses, excuses, excuses. The word itself is seldom overused but rather it is the individual meaning that gets pulverized into the ground. I've yet to hear a student wagger his way out of taking an exam by explaining "well sir, my excuse is that . . ."

Excuses, excuses, excuses - those well-created detours in that daily game of life.

I'm sure a day doesn't go by at Harper when somebody is pivoted into the ground. I wonder if so & so could lecture on campus "or" Gee, it would be great if that group could perform here also "or even," could taking weekly visits to that complex be incorporated into my course?" In most cases, those ideas will remain exactly that - "private thoughts." You don't reserve the right to complain about such matters until you openly admit to yourself that you have tried everything in your power to put such a suggestion into "being," instead of lingering on to it in the conversational sense.

I have thus far written four consecutive "letters to the editor." I obviously had something I wished to share - that being expressed in words

I had also opted to pass along a message, which was presented through a constant flow of letters or "between the lines" you might say. We should all learn to take advantage of any avenue opened to us. In this instance, being the campus newspaper. This is the ideal place to write about that experience, idea or observation you had just last week.

If you have something on your mind which you feel is important enough to put in print, well then let's hear it. This is your school newspaper - an extended voice of voices. Most excuses, no matter what form they take are cheap. You may wish a poor English student you are just can't seem to formulate your ideas on paper. Uh, so you don't have the time. If it's important enough to you, make the time. Many a time, you'll notice that the same feeling has crossed at least a dozen other minds, but nothing was said, and as a result, nothing could be done.

We should start using the energy which is so wastefully spent on "excusing ourselves" and use it productively by working towards making things happen.

Trees, canoes, mushrooms - all part of Davis

Gemini II, Gemini II, Super-tree and Half-Dead are just a few of the trees that surround John Davis' house.

Davis, associate professor of Spanish, owns more than 10 acres of wooded land in Lake Villa. "It was easier to name the trees when talking about them with my wife or the contractor," he said. While traveling to Wisconsin one day to look for some land to build on, Davis and his wife, Diane, came across a parcel of land which someone was selling at a low price so they decided to buy it.

"The land was excellent. It worked out for the best because a contractor was going to bulldoze all the trees down and put in a row of A-frames," Davis said.

Davis, who has built many things around his home, found the plans for his house in a magazine and modified them to preserve the trees. Then a contractor built the house.

Their pool in the back was dug and filled by Davis. "I love to dig," he said. The pool measured 16 x 32 x 7. "It was my Spring-Summer project this year."

He also built the warming house by the pool, two decks one around the pool and the other around a hot tub he built several years ago, and wooden reedbed gutters for the house.

But away from his home, Davis' heart is also in his teaching. He has been at Harper since 1967, after graduating from Loyola with a masters in Spanish. "Harper's fun. I enjoy the classes. There

Karin Johnson teacher

are proud and cons on all levels, but I think a community college is the place to be."

Davis became interested in Spanish in his senior year in high school. "My mother sent me to a St. Louis College Prep school. There were some Latinus taking courses who would speak in Spanish among themselves and I wanted to find out what they were saying. At the end of his senior year, Davis spent three weeks in Mexico and then went back every summer during his college years.

Now, though, he doesn't like to travel, except to Wisconsin occasionally. "In college, I enjoyed traveling because I didn't have any ties. Now, I'm happy at home with the animals, the trees and the water."

When he takes walks through the forested area, he sees deer, raccoons, and owls. And as a hobby, he finds, picks and eats various kinds of mushrooms. "I have 12 boxes on mushrooms, so I can tell if they're poisonous or not."

Overall, Davis enjoys his wife's teaching and his lifestyle. "I love being able to chop wood, build things, go ice skating in the winter, canoeing in the summer and hunting for mushrooms."

NEWS OF ENERGY

VIEWS OF RISK

Americans believe that the risks associated with energy sources are greater today than they were 20 years ago, but they are willing to accept these risks, according to a landmark study, "Risk in a Complex Society."

The survey, conducted by Louis Harris Associates for Marsh & McLennan, incorporated, the world's largest insurance brokerage firm, included the public, members of Congress, federal regulators, scientists, leaders and corporate executives.

The survey found, for example, that while 73 percent of the public believes that there is no guarantee against a catastrophic nuclear accident, more than 77 percent feel that nuclear energy is far less important to the solution of the United States' energy crisis. Most of all groups surveyed agree that an acceptable way can be found for disposing of nuclear wastes. Majorities of each group also favored increasing the use of coal and said that they would be willing to explore for minerals in ecologically sensitive areas, despite the environmental risks.

Taking Heads - Brian Eno music

Last winter I saw an interview with Talking Heads on one of the TV human interest shows. I recall hearing Chris Frantz, their drummer, saying something like "we don't want people to think that we don't think about this." I don't know where anyone got the idea that the Talking Heads aren't thinkers. The lyrics of progressive musical styles, the general aura around T. Head music is one of thought, although rhythm is probably the biggest element involved in the actual structure.

Has producer Brian Eno recently returned from Africa? This album "Here Comes the Light," could almost be called an Eno-David Byrne collaboration. They share writing credits on most songs, with two compositions featuring without contribution from keyboardist

on music

Jerry Harrison.
Has anyone heard of Eno? For those of you that are missing out, he is a synthesizer wizard without intense musical training that started out with heavy music and progressed in to being the most active electronic experimenter today. His influence can be heard on "He-man in Light."

Eno isn't the only additional player-Adrian Belew "played with them" lends support on electric guitar and avant-garde brassman Jun Hassell plays on one. Extra Puritan soundists include Robert Palmer. Vocals are handled by Byrne, Eno, and Vozes Hendryx. The three singers create something akin to tribal chants, occasionally using a call-and-response lyrical order. The core of the group is Harrison, Byrne, Frantz and Hassell/Tina Weymouth.

This album took time to get into. There is quite a bit of soul contained within these grooves, along with a heavy dosage of funkiness. After my ears became accustomed to the constant chugging, I really enjoyed listening to this. On an escape to Florida and back in a friend's car, we heard "The Great Curve" twice. The power of this song at any volume is apparent. Byrne lends in an frantic guitar solo that I am still somewhat unable to describe.

The lyrics call poetically for women to move the world, but don't look for cute song poems here. Byrne's writing is relevant to the world today, they speak socially, of alienation and politics. A particularly thrilling song is "The Overhead," which contains lines about "terrible signals too weak to even recognize" and "the gentle collapsing of every surface... Doomsday." An evolution in the human condition: "The end of a relationship? If you are intrigued, the best idea I can offer is to buy the record and check it out for yourself. Hey, least me. I quit Flip Side a few weeks ago.

The presence of art and the Heads' perseverance in pursuing it are evident in the lyrics of "Houses in Motion." For a long time I felt without style or grace wearing shoes with no socks in cold weather. I knew my heart was in the right place! I know I'd be able to do these things." Art rock is back and it ain't boring like ELP.

For those interested in seeing and hearing an unusual performer, check out Wayne Narz. His voice has got to be the most variable voice in the record; the Waz appears frequently at clubs around the Chicago area (one such club is Harry Hopes', out in Cary). They don't do cover versions, but the backup band "The Cleaning Ladies" did a rock "Honey." Highly original things are happening all around before this turns into an imitation of that wonderful piece of journalism, "Ma Nugent's Mail." I'll shut up. Oh, by the way, I heard tickets are all sold out for "God's" appearance at the Rosemont Horizon... a false prophet, I'm sure. Sounds like a lot of "B.S."

Involved? So what; where's everybody else?

A phone call.
"I said you write something about the football team."
"Well, I... don't know sports writers do a good enough job."

Yes, but, you should write something. You seem to have opinions on just about everything.

"Well, what's the problem?"
"The guys on the football team seem to think somebody really cares. They want the waste school to lose down and lick their boots."

"Come on, they don't want that."
"Well, write something about them. I'd like to hear what you think." "Click."

I care.
I care that the guys on the football team are out there giving their best. I care that they give up three hours a day to practice. I care that they are out there playing, while risking personal injury.

I care, too about the soccer team, the cross country team, women's tennis, the production of "Charley's Aunt," the Harper Orchestra, the choir, even the DJs at WHCM. Get the picture? I care about anyone who is involved at Harper.

I respect their involvement. I respect that they give up spare time to make Harper a better place.

All of the people who are involved make Harper a better place to attend. With all of the activities going on, it's fun to take a break from the books and enjoy... that, if no one would have got involved, there wouldn't be any activities to enjoy.

At times, some students say "well the football team loses, the cross-country is a joke, the guys at WHCM are jerks. Why bother with any of the activities at Harper?" None of us are perfect. If we were, we wouldn't be here. But we keep on trying.

At times though, it gets quite hard to go on. It seems no one pays any attention to our efforts. No more than a hundred people attend a Harper football game. About twenty at a soccer match, five at a women's tennis match and one or none at Student Senate meetings.

All of us who are involved at Harper, feel at times that "no one cares." And maybe that's true but I disagree.

If you can not attend a game, and a football or soccer player if they wear next time you see them. If you can't attend a recital by the choir, next time you see a member, ask how it went. If you hear something you like or dislike on WHCM give them a call. If you read something in the paper you don't like, write us.

Those of us involved would like to hear from you. We can learn best from the criticism of our peers. We'll make mistakes, and we'll try to correct them.

If you've got the time, get involved. Get to know someone else besides your close friends. And getting involved is the best way to meet new people. But, you don't have to get involved, nor do you have to show up at every Harper function. You don't even have to like what we are doing, just care! Is that asking too much?

Hawks clinch top spot

by MIKE BAMBACH
New the fun begins.

After 3-0 and 4-0 wins over Waukegan and Kishwaukee last week, the soccer team clinched the No. 1 seed in next week's Region IV North playoffs.

The wins avenged earlier 1-1 ties against both teams. "This was without a doubt the best performance from everybody this year," said coach Sandoz Szabo. "Overall, it was our finest performance as a team. It shows us what we can really do when the chips are down."

Andy Botowiski, Steve Crane, and Mark Pistorio scored for the Hawks.

Against Kishwaukee, Botowiski and Mick Puls each scored two goals in the Hawks' 4-0 win. "I thought we played an excellent game," said Szabo. "We were the much better team."

Kishwaukee, now 9-5, will face Waukegan, now 8-2, Wednesday for the No. 7 seed in the playoffs, which Harper hosts.

The Hawks, meanwhile, close out their regular-season Wednesday against Lake Forest. They won't start their post-season play until Nov. 1.

Hawks 4th in N4C

The women's tennis team closed out their 1968 season with 3-3 ties to DuPage and fourth-place finish at the N4C meet last week.

Pam Meyer was second in the No. 1 singles competition. Jacquie Anderson was fourth in second singles, and Sharon Carlson took fourth place honors in the No. 3 singles.

In doubles, Meyer-Anderson finished fourth in the No. 1 doubles. Johna Korik and Kathy Centanni were fourth in second doubles, and Carlson-Jane Greary were third in the No. 3 doubles.

"We played some good tennis," said coach Martha Bolt. "It was terribly difficult. It was windy and cold, not very good playing conditions."

because they received a bye in the playoffs.

Sunday's victory over Kishwaukee was clouded by an injury to Cougar goalie Rick Carlson. Carlson, who made eight saves in the game, sustained a concussion after a collision with Puls, as the two were going for a loose ball, late in the second half.

Kishwaukee coach Dick Schell kept Carlson in for the rest of the match, but afterwards Carlson was admitted to Northwestern Community Hospital. He was released after treatment late Sunday afternoon.

A bench-clearing melee also occurred in the final minutes of the game when defender Frank Binetti was shoved by a Cougar forward. Binetti pushed back, and the Cougar countered with a punch. Binetti punched back igniting the brawl. No one was hurt in the fight.

Assuming the Hawks win the Region IV North playoffs, they would then advance to the Region IV (or state) tournament. The N4CAA regional will be next for the Hawks, now 9-4.

The Hawks finish the year with a 2-3 conference record, and a 3-5 overall mark. "These girls never gave up," said Bolt. "We kept running into Thornton. They're No. 1 all the way through. We were down after sectionals, so it was tough getting going for us conference match."

Thornton, which beat the Hawks 9-0 in their conference match this year, won both the sectional and N4C meet.

Looking ahead to next year, Johna Korik and Jacquie Anderson, the Hawks' team captain, will be coming back next year. Meyer is a questionable returner. "We're going to build from here," said Bolt.

The kids are all right. That is for this weekend's Region IV cross-country meet.

The Hawks, led by Tom Placek and Bill Bingham, will be aiming for at least a fifth-place finish at the state meet, which will be at the Schuller Park Woods. Placek and Bingham will also be trying to qualify individually for the N4CAA national meet.

I would like to think the kids would be shooting for the top five," said coach Joe Vitton. "Anything lower than that would be a disappointment."

Placek and Bingham finished third and ninth respectively at last weekend's N4C conference meet at DuPage. Both won All-N4C honors. Placek finished the five-mile course in 17:52, while Bingham finished with a time of 20:02.

Placek, said Vitton, "has a realistic shot" at a berth for the national meet, which will be held at Cour de Alvaene Idaho, in two weeks. Bingham, meanwhile, "has a realistic shot."

Cross Country

"I would be disappointed if we don't get Tom in," said Vitton. "If Bill qualifies, I wouldn't be surprised. But I wouldn't be upset if he didn't."

Bingham has been the mystery man for the Hawks this year. "He was a nobody when he came here," said Vitton. "I think he was an underachiever in high school. Maybe he was lazy, or maybe he had an attitude problem. He has talent, if he just puts his nose to the wheel. He's blossomed this year."

Ed Joyce, Greg Cizek, and track man Paul Wallis round out the Hawks' line-up.

Wallis, who finished sixth at the N4C meet, could be considered the "weak link" in the Hawks' line-up. "He's an outstanding track man," said Vitton. "But he doesn't have all the tools to be a good cross-country runner."

Joyner and Cizek, meanwhile, finished a respective 16th and 17th at the conference meet.

Spoon River, Danville, N4C champion Triton, and Wright are expected to fight it out for the two team berths to the national meet. "Realistically," said Vitton, "I don't think we'll finish higher than fifth."

The Hawks chances as qualifying as a team to the national meet would have been boosted if transfer Ron Theberg was eligible to run. Theberg transferred into Harper from Arizona State, but had only nine credit hours - one hour short of the N4C's eligibility requirement.

The Hawks have a final meet scheduled at the Carriage Inn in Kenosha, Wisconsin, but that is pending on how well the Hawks do Saturday.

Hawks down Oakton

by JOE KOST

"We can beat them, I know we can," commented Lynn Hitchcock, the first year volleyball coach here at Harper.

Fortunately, that's exactly what her team did last Monday when the girls topped Oakton three games to four by scores of 15-12, 15-9 and 17-15 in their second contest of the season.

The Hawks, who have improved nearly 70% since their season opener, had no real problem in controlling the game over Oakton.

Harper was lead by freshman Teri Bauer who served for 10 points, 7 of those which were aces and collected 6 spikes throughout the afternoon.

"I think the girls learned much about themselves," stated Coach Hitchcock. "They really wanted to win and they went out and won it."

Harper couldn't manage to get a handle on things in the first game and lost by a score of 15-11.

In the second game, Harper took an 8-4 lead on Bauer's serves and spikes by Darlene Kubinski.

Oakton fought back and took a 12-11 lead but consistently good serving by Theresa Hudok gave the Hawks a 15-13 victory.

In the second game Bauer served for five consecutive points, of which three were aces, to give Harper a 9-6 lead.

Hawks got the call once again and served Harper to their second win, 15-11.

In the final game Harper took a 7-0 lead on spikes by Bauer and Ann Astruzski.

Oakton staged a comeback and took the lead late in the game by a score of 15-14.

Three aces by Karen Kamradt however, gave the Hawks the final victory, 17-15.

Excellent performances turned in for the Hawks were by Teri Bauer, Ann Astruzski, Darlene Kubinski, Theresa Hudok, Karen Kamradt, and Laura Heger.

The Hawks travel to Illinois Valley tomorrow for yet another tough match.

"We're going to have to stay very consistent to beat them and we can't make as many mistakes as we sometimes do," said Coach Hitchcock concerning the Illinois Valley game.

Harper beats Lakton three out of four

The women's volleyball team here at Harper college can pride themselves on three things so far this season. The first thing is that they have topped last year's record by winning their second game of the season last Monday over Dakota.

Second is that since day one of practice, the girls have improved their playing ability nearly 70%.

Third, and probably the most rewarding of these accomplishments is that these girls have played together, learned a great deal, and have had very much fun throughout it all.

This year Harper has no returning players from last year's team and lack of experience and inconsistency seem to have gotten their best yet.

Despite their 2-0 record, the female Hawks are still a happy team.

"We have so much fun in practices and everything else when we're together," commented freshman star Teri Baser.

Teri attended Fremd High School last year and was selected as the co-captain on the volleyball team.

Teri, who also plans on playing softball at Harper, thinks that the team has much more talent than their record shows.

"We have lots more than we've been showing," commented the physical education major. "We've never played together, but I finally think we're learning how everyone else plays and what they're capable of."

According to Head Coach Lynn Hitchcock, "Teri is a fantastic player. She is a powerful spiker and she has a very deadly serve."

Darlene Kubinski, a sophomore from Schaumburg High School, is another key player in the Harper attack.

Everyone pretty much understands each other and as we do that, we can help each other out," stated Darlene concerning the team's feelings about each other.

Darlene, an accountant major in one of the top spikers on the team, however, she is plagued with knee injuries.

"I've got cartilage damage in my left knee and it gives out all the time," said Darlene. "It can really affect my playing ability at times. I can't jump as high as I usually do and I can't put total power into my spikes."

Three of Harper's other players on the squad all come from Central High School: Karo Kamrad, Ann Astroki, and Laura Heeger are all freshmen on this year's team.

Ann Astroki, one of the fastest players, has the hardest and fastest spike on the team.

According to Ann, "We all get along great and we're always laughing, trying to keep our spirits up."

"I'm definitely going to return for next season. I love the game too much to give it up," stated Ann.

Astroki can best state the friendship value of the team as saying, "The friendship and the closeness of the team really helps in the games, because we know that we'll all be trying to help each other no matter what the score is."

The player that keeps the team's spirit sailing high is Laura Heeger, one of the best bumpers on the squad.

According to Coach Hitchcock, Laura is one of the top prospects for next season. Besides her bumping talent, Laura could possibly be one of the team's top spikers.

Despite Laura's playing talent, she also has a very valuable talent that keeps the team playing hard. Her talent to make the team happy.

"I try to get them up during the games especially," says Laura. "If the team is upset during a game, it's much harder for them to shake off a mistake than it is when they're happy."

"I'm basically determined to make the team winners, and if it can't be done in score then I'll try to make them winners in themselves."

Other players that add to the happy crew include Theresa Hines, Judy Abernathy, and Trudi Maliste.

There's a 10 p server for the Hawks and helped them on to their last victory.

Both Judy and Trudy are in their first years of volleyball and are improving rapidly.

Teri Bauer says this about the team's attitude, "We're all very close and we try our best as even if we lose, it still feels good to know that you did your best."

Coach Hitchcock, who is very proud of her team, tells her players to go by this bit, "If you don't win but you gave your best, then actually you did win."

If that statement is true, then despite their poor record, those girls have been winners all season.

Hawks 30-6 win was grrreat!

Call it a rout. Call it domination. Call it a slaughter. Because it was. But the football team's 30-6 win over Wright Saturday is more significant than the fact that it was the Hawks' first win of this season.

Mike Bambach

...on sports

Consider this:

Quarterback Tim Tyrrell played only 1 1/4 quarters against the Rams. He completed three of six passes for 33 yards and one touchdown. He also had another TD pass called back because of a mauling penalty.

Running back Ron Burke also played just 1 1/4 quarters of the game. In that time, he rushed for 105 yards on 18 carries and set a new school record for rushing yards in a game.

Also consider the fact that Wright didn't crack midfield until the third quarter. The Hawks held All-NC candidate Reggie Taylor to four yards on five carries in the first half, and minus four yards on five carries in the second half for a total of zero yards on 18 carries. That's impressive.

Yes, the score could've been more than the 30-6 it was. But one can only lick his (or her) chops in speculation about what might have happened if head coach John Elnash had left the first string in for the entire first half.

The Hawks gained 218 yards total in the first half and the first stringers scored each time they had the ball. The second team was able to move the ball also, but was unable to score.

The win marked the Hawks' second conference win in two seasons. The Hawks shut out Rock Valley, 29-0, in their lone NAC win of 1979.

It has been a frustrating season for the Hawks, who are now 1-3 in conference play. But it was inevitable that the Hawks, with as much young talent as they have, would find an opponent they could punt around.

Young talent have been Harper's buzzwords all season. Yes, the talent is there. But it belongs mostly to freshmen. And freshmen make mistakes. That is Mother Nature's first law of athletics.

And there were mistakes in the Hawks' win. There were 14 fumbles, seven on both sides, and 21 penalties. The Hawks were hit with 16 penalties for 158 yards. That hurts.

But this was Wright, not DuPage or Illinois Valley or Triton, which would bury a team that fumbled seven times and was penalized 16 more times in the same game. This was Wright, a team that had surrendered 1961 in four conference losses.

And yet, the mistakes didn't matter. To paraphrase a time-worn expression, "It's not how you play the game, it's whether you win or lose."

And the Hawks won - big. So big, in fact, that one official asked the scorekeeper to let the scoreboard clock tick off a few extra seconds after the whistle had been blown - "This is a rout," he said. "This isn't even close. They 'Wright' haven't done anything yet."

That was the same ref that gave the Rams' Chris Borker a touchdown with 28 seconds left in the game. The Hawks had stopped Wright on two consecutive plays at their one-yard line before Borker went over for the carry. Not even that mattered.

When the first gun sounded, there was no jumping up and down, no hugging, and no carrying Elnash off the field. There were just a lot of smiles.

"This is only the beginning," said kicker Dave Whitt. "It was a total team effort to win a win we deserved."

"The first win is always big," said Elnash afterwards. "It makes practice more fun."

Fun. That's what really mattered. And this football team had more fun Saturday than they've had all season.

Hawks roll over Wright

Football

by JOE KOST
The Harper Hawks will pack up their footballs and travel to North Park College next Monday to tackle the Vikings in a non-conference game.

The Vikings are a very solid and sound football team since North Park is a four year school, Harper should see their freshmen or junior varsity squad.

The Hawks will be flying high going into Monday's game, especially after the beating the Hawks gave to the Wright Rams last week.

Harper completely dominated the game over the Rams and strolled away with a 30-6 victory, the first of the season for the Hawks.

The Hawks had chances to put several more points up on the board but two of Harper's touchdowns were called back due to penalties.

Harper took control of the game from the start. On the second play of the game, Hawk defensive back Brian Sander intercepted a Ram pass at the 39 yard line which led to a 17 yard touchdown run by Ron Burke. Dave Lock kicked the extra point to give Harper their first lead of the game, 7-0.

Minutes later Lock added another three points to Harper's lead with a 33 yard field goal.

The Hawks recovered a fumble two plays later and scored again on a 27 yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tim Tyrrell to wide receiver Mark Hinton to make the score 16-0 in favor of the Hawks.

With less than one minute remaining in the quarter, Ron Burke's 30 yard run and Mark Dahlke's 11 yard run and 10 yard touchdown run gave Harper a 23-0 lead going into the second quarter of play.

Three plays into the second quarter, Jim Vaccarino got the call and scored on a 12 yard touchdown run to finish Harper's scoring at 30-0.

Later in the second quarter Ron Burke had a 26 yard run that put him over 100 yards in the game. Burke increased his own record of consecutive 10 yard games to four in a row by picking up 105 yards on 10 carries.

Burke along with Tim Tyrrell, watched the rest of the game from the sidelines while the second string players look over.

Throughout the rest of the game several fine performances were turned in by different Harper players.

Hawk defensive backs Dan Groce, Brian Sander, and Dave Ledford played an excellent game and prevented the Rams from scoring any touchdowns by air.

Harper had the ball at the two yard line with a first down but outstanding defensive work on behalf of the Hawks prevented them from scoring.

The Rams scored their only score with time remaining in the fourth quarter to make the final score 30-6 with the Hawks up 30-0.

This was Harper's second game in a row that the running game compiled over 200 yards and had a total offense of over 400 yards. Harper's going to have to do more of the same in order to top the Vikings next Monday.

As far as the quarterback situation goes, it looked better last week but it's still up in the air.

In Harbinger poll

Carter: slim campus lead

Although he would win by a slim margin, if the preferences were held today, Jimmy Carter would be the winner. On the Harper campus, that is. In a straw poll conducted by the Harbinger, Carter garnered 32 percent of the vote with Republican candidate Ronald Reagan and independent candidate John Anderson each receiving 31 percent. In a combined total, Libertarian Ed Clark and Citizen's Party candidate Barry Commoner netted six percent of the vote.

Harbinger staff members polled only students registered to vote and who plan to vote in Tuesday's election. Students were asked "if the elections were held today who would you vote for?" Choices were Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John Anderson or the other major party candidates. One hundred eighty five students were polled.

Those voting for Carter cited his energy plus and past performance as reasons for casting their ballots for him. "I like what he has done and what he's going to do. If elected he won't have to start campaigning again in a few years," said Bill Cooley, a 19 year old sophomore at Harper.

"I think that President Carter has a good energy policy. It's better than Reagan's and Mr. Anderson doesn't have one," said Jim Weisley, 18, and in his freshman year at Harper.

Other factors influencing those voting for Carter were Reagan's opinions on the issues and Anderson's party affiliation.

"I'd be against Anderson because of his party and I disagree with most of Reagan's opinions so Carter is the only one left," commented Debbie Batzick, a 19 year old sophomore who resides in Mount Prospect.

Dina Sebastian, 18, said, "I don't want a total nobody like Anderson who I don't know anything about and Reagan was a lousy actor so he'll probably make a lousy president. Frankly Reagan scares me and he says a lot of things that could be bad in a crisis situation," said Chris Coffman, 19.

"It seems like he has done pretty good," commented Kimberly Allena, an 18 year old freshman.

Factors influencing Anderson voters were his financial plans, environmental platform and closer balanced budget.

"Carter is incompetent, Reagan is an unqualified manager and Anderson is the most qualified for the job. In top of that he's the only one with a strong environmental platform," said Kevin Botterman, 19.

"Reagan and Carter's financial plans don't make any sense. They'll just make the federal government float more loans and push up the interest rate," said 21 year old Bernie Laczansky.

"I am not voting for Reagan.

His economic ideas are not structured. They're from the '60s. I want Bush. Let's just knock off Reagan," commented Susan Rotach, a 16 year old sophomore at Harper.

Others voting for Anderson cite their dislike for the other candidates as their reason for supporting Anderson.

"Considering the choices, Anderson would be the only logical outlet," explained Curt Ackman, 20.

"Reagan is too old and I don't think that Carter is doing a good enough job," said Karen Haucha, 18.

"I like Anderson a little but I can't stand Reagan and Carter. We'll have a closer balanced budget with Anderson," Rick Veez, 19, said.

"If he drops out of the race, I will vote for the Libertarian candidate Ed Clark," explained John Malkowick, 21.

"A vote for Anderson is not a vote for Carter," commented Caron Turpin, 25.

"I hate Carter and Reagan just scares me," summed up Scott Lorenz.

Reagan supporters are turning to him in hopes of a better economy and constant foreign policy.

"Carter has had his chance. His foreign policies are not consistent," stated 21 year old Jim Walt.

"Hopefully, he will make the economy better," said Gummy Warmack, 19.

"My only reason that Carter has screwed up in the past and Anderson is too liberal," explained Tracee Gilen, 18.

"He's the best of the bad choices," said Debi Menzel, 21. Harper voters are in agreement with voters in Chicago, the suburbs and downstate. In a recent straw poll conducted by the Chicago Sun Times (Tuesday, Oct. 28) Carter was in the lead with 46.1 percent of the vote. Reagan was in command of 41.9 percent on the vote and Anderson trailed with 12.7 percent.

CARTER
Harper 32.0 percent
Suburbs 38.0 percent
Chicago 72.1 percent
Downstate 38.3 percent

REAGAN
Harper 31.0 percent
Suburbs 47.9 percent
Chicago 19.6 percent
Downstate 47.7 percent

ANDERSON
Harper 31.0 percent
Suburbs 14.1 percent
Chicago 4.3 percent
Downstate 14.9 percent

On a national scale, Carter is in the lead with 42 percent of the vote. Reagan netted 41 percent and Anderson trailed with 17 percent. Five percent of those polled with undecided. "This is according to a straw poll conducted by Time magazine, Nov. 3 issue. The poll was conducted Oct. 14-18."

However, Time pointed out that in order to win the election, a candidate must win at least 270 electoral votes. At the time the Time poll was taken, Reagan was ahead in electoral votes with 246 to Carter's 129.

"But many of the losses are so slim that Republican pollster Robert Teeter estimates that a mere swing of three percent in the National popular vote could switch states with 200 electoral votes a remarkable number.

Essentially the election is turning out exactly the way many political pros always thought it would: so close that almost anything could decide the outcome at the last minute." George J. Church, Time, "Baiting Down the Stretch," Nov. 3.

Editor's Note: Harbinger staff members Mike Stankus, Mike Bannack, Lori Lynn Guy, Rick Kohme, Bill Harberg, Mike McCarthy, Karin Johnson, Daniela Stojanovic, Kim Kamruch and Bill Kelly polled Harper students. The information was compiled by Wendy M. Wisniewski. Harbinger Editor-in-Chief.

Candidates views on higher education

(CPS)

If the education policies of a Reagan presidency followed those of the Reagan candidacy, the next four years would feature less federal intervention in school policies, less federal aid to schools and students, and more state and local control. The most visible effect would be the dismantling of the Department of Education.

Though the Washington, D.C. education community was by no means united in its approval of the new department, which was officially born last year, there are now seems to be a general concurrence that destroying the department would be at least a symbolic defeat for education.

"I think that statement promoting to dismantle the department struck a nerve in a lot of people," proffers Tom Daily, president of the American Student Association (NSA), which was perhaps the most insistent advocate of the new department, but sure he'd want to keep the agency if Reagan won. "An education department under a President Reagan is something we'd have to think twice about," he says.

"It might be easier to let the department go," he adds.

The campaign's education views on key points:
Funding: Reagan's January policy statement on education asserted he wanted to "maximize control of school policy" by parents, teachers and local school boards; by transferring responsibility for funding back to the states in other words, explains Reagan deputy press aide Ken Towrey, "alikes that wanted to continue federal programs would have to raise taxes locally."

"A good deal" of the federal financial aid, hands-off student aid, affirmative action programs "would probably continue," Towrey adds. But Reagan would probably convert some of the money spent on them to "block grants," which would go to communities, which would spend them as they feel like it.

Financial aid: The Republican platform pledges "to enact tuition tax credits" as an aid program that was rejected in 1979 in favor of President Carter's plan to expand grants to middle-income students.

Quality of education: Reagan and the 11-page section of the Republican platform that deals with education agree that the federal government is responsible for low-quality learning. As Reagan's January policy statement put it: "Since 1962, when federal aid to education began, pre-student costs have increased and test scores have fallen virtually in proportion to the rise in federal spending for and control over education."

Reagan fails to note, though, that the largest single aid to education program in American history was begun in June, 1944, when President Roosevelt signed the G.I. Bill. It gave aid to millions of veterans attending college. Standardized test scores peaked in 1963, some 18 years after

For your own good vote Tuesday

Well, it is just around the corner. The long awaited presidential election.

For some it will be the first time to the polls while for others it will be another trip. No matter if it is the first trip or the one-hundredth trip, the important thing is to make the trip.

A citizen's loudest voice with any political candidate is his vote. Without votes, the candidate cannot survive. But, to not listening to the voter while in election, the politician will commit political suicide. The strongest threat to any candidate is that of putting away votes. That, the vote serves as club with which to hammer a citizen's fears and opinions.

But, while it serves as a club, it is also the loudest voice a citizen has. However, there aren't many people who use it effectively.

Effective use of voting privileges begins with voter registration. This simple process takes only a few moments but enables those who participate to have a direct voice in the government. Through direct participation in the government, voters are more likely to become involved politically and form their own opinion on the issues.

But there are those content to sit at home and think "everyone else is voting, so it won't matter if I don't." These people automatically meet with great disappointment on election day when the candidate they identified with loses.

Then there is the old excuse of "well I really don't know who to vote for or who stands where on what issues." Well, as a citizen of the United States, it could be considered a duty to know who the candidates are and where they stand on current issues.

And where are the college voters? It is all well and good to pledge one's loyalty before the election, but those exams and term papers start piling up causing those extra minutes that should be set aside for voting to be forgotten.

With a new presidential term just around the corner, voters have their chance to begin a "new term." They could become aware of the political activity going on around them and start voting intelligently based on their own fears and ideas. All too often voters reach for the Democratic or Republican button on party name signs without even knowing the candidates. Or they give in to parental or peer pressure and vote to satisfy others, not themselves.

Speaking is an opportunity to speak one's mind to the loudest of voices. There is an old saying that goes something like, "Do not criticize the neighbors until walking a mile in their shoes." Well, do not criticize the government unless you actively understand the "proper two cents" on election day.

Technology could be ultimate destruction

"The Frankenstein Age—So Far Off!"

The recent explanation of "genetic engineering" gives us users the most powerful set of tools to work with, while simultaneously causing them a deadly weapon, deadly enough to perhaps "kill off" its experimenters in the very process.

In the October 22nd issue of the Harbinger, an article dealt with a long list of both medical and environmental outgrowths because of newly made genetic advances. This great host of technological oriented affects (whether it be cleaning up oil spills and garbage, by means of enzymes, human insulin for diabetics, the production of human growth hormones, the rise of a new wonder drug called interferon which attacks a great variety of viruses and might also induce some types of cancer, or a better stand with regard to birth defects and genetically related diseases) is indeed slowly coming upon us. We might even be said as seeing ourselves starting in our own science fiction movie.

I feel that it's downright imperative that we immediately examine the dangerous side effects which are the result of genetic manipulation. We must take the proper precautions now before we paint our own picture of living in, what could be a disastrous world. As to be expected, the Supreme Court is in the very process of attempting to establish rigid limitations, so qualified "users" will not become "abusers" of this highly delicate area.

Unfortunately there will always be people who are compelled to go against the "system" and will be found experimenting with genetic manipulation in ways that it will be harmful to the user and his surroundings. With this unrestrained experimentation of gene-splicing, can come frankenstein like mutations, as we could then control what form our offspring would take on. Almost like a robot in nature, we would be able to "compute" information with regard to our child's IQ, physical appearance, or any other "order" we had wanted to fill.

As foreign as this may sound, we would also be able to take on features characteristic of other animals, etc. by recombinant DNA (David Suzuki). This would, in addition, enable us to produce more sophisticated weapons, bombs, and the like. Which can help those whom whose fallopian tubes are blocked, especially if combined with genetic engineering measures. A woman not wanting to go through pregnancy might choose to pay another woman to be a surrogate mother. To whom then, does this baby rightfully and legally belong? What about if research involving the development of an artificial placenta is occurred, will we be delisted so that some of the bottle babies would be born as workers, others as soldiers, and yet others as thinkers? All in all, this manipulation of genes, is in fact, the manipulation of life. Where cloning and related areas are concerned, are we permuting this right to tangle with our environment? Genetic development has skyrocketed to the point that it has produced a wide range of recent findings, to hopefully "proning" life. I still remain wary as to the life we're trying to prolong, if genetic engineering gets in the hands of the wrong people.

Early registration lessens hassles

Harper offers currently enrolled students an opportunity to choose their classes for next semester and register before the Christmas break. This gives people the first choice of all courses and enables students to avoid the confusion and long lines at open registration.

The print-outs of all the class offerings will be posted Nov. 10 in the corridors adjacent to the Student Development Centers in Buildings I, D, and A. Beginning Nov. 12, counselors will be available in the halls outside the Student Development Centers to advise students on the appropriate course selections, graduation requirements, etc. They can also answer questions about specific programs or help with transfer information. They will have all the necessary forms.

After visiting with the counselors and selecting courses, appointment cards for registration at the computer terminals can be picked up in the Registrar's Office, Bldg. 413.

Take advantage of this early registration period and have all your decisions made before Christmas. Then you can really enjoy the holiday.

Strong, unbendable leadership called for

What America needs is a strong president, someone to lead us out of the darkness, and someone who can make all the right decisions without conflicting with anyone's interest. Presidential candidates pledge their faith to almost every living soul who can vote in America. From farmers to businessmen, social groups to ethnic groups and conservatives to liberals, the presidential candidate swings his view from one side to another to capture millions of votes as he sweeps across the country, not remembering a name or face. When do all these supportive gestures stop? Most likely on inauguration day when he will begin the next four years of his life being president.

As we may have already widely guessed, the president's job is not a simple task. There are no straight forward simple answers to the nation problems. The problems of our nation are large and complex.

Several years need to be spent to implement any long-run major policies that will direct the majority of our varied interests as Americans. But, there is a catch to all these policies which are supposed to be guiding our national interests. At the end of three years of hard work these policies have only slightly been implemented. Many Americans have not seen many of the beneficial results from them, and it is election time—a great time for changes and new policies. People open their ears and eyes again to what is offered only to shut them again after election day and all false promises of the elected candidate are realized. But there is even hope for false promises—next election year—new candidates.

I really feel it is a shame that our society is left down after each election year. If we could only get someone running for president who would speak honestly and not let us down after he is elected. Someone who, during their campaign, will say they will do their best for America without making false promises. Someone who will say he will try different means toward a hopeful solution. Someone who will not promise every living person in America the best solution which will not conflict with their interests, and then, fall back on their promise after they are elected.

Anderson rep, Jeb Busch what's the difference?

Sometime during the early part of September, I got involved in an election campaign. That election campaign was to get John Anderson elected into the White House. I felt that it would be great to have Anderson or an Anderson representative come speak at Harper. I felt this would be good, not just for Anderson but for the students as well.

I found out that the proper way to do this was to go to the student activities office and talk to Jess, what her name I did this and explained that the speaker would not necessarily be pro-Anderson, but would speak on the topic that we should not be scared into voting the traditional two party system. That an independent vote is not wasted. What I got was a big fat no.

When I asked why not, I was told that Harper was a conservative school and would not condone anything like it. I was also told that I could go to one of the school groups and maybe they might be able to do it, but that she did not think so. When I asked her if the radio station could sponsor it, I was again told no. When I talked to a person at the radio station (whose name I won't mention about it, they told me they would be glad to) I asked the radio station because I felt that the station in a way is the voice of the students, after all it is funded with our student dollars, if I'm right. So I left things as they were and did not raise a big fuss about it.

Around a month later I found out that Jeb Bush was to speak at Harper. Jeb Bush is the son of George Bush, yes that's right, the same George Bush that is running for vice-president on the Republican ticket. What I would like to know is why could a Bush representative speak at Harper and not an Anderson representative? Why wasn't equal time offered to Carier, Clark and Commins? Was it because the Reagan people had friends at Harper, while he counted, or was it because certain people at Harper wanted to hear from the candidate that they supported? Now do you get me wrong, I am not knocking Reagan, Bush or Jeb, I just want to know why equal time was not given to the others? If anybody can give me a convincing answer maybe I will but I doubt it. Mike maybe that is why people do not get involved at Harper, because it is too "conservative." Whatever happened to students rights?

Harbinger attitude toward Westmoreland offensive

Editor: As a Harper student, I was greatly offended by the attitude of the Harbinger towards General Westmoreland's appearance and speech. One wonders at the morality of inviting and paying use of America's gas war criminals to speak at a public institution.

This man was responsible for multiple atrocities and war crimes under international law and the Nuremberg precedents. Under his command one out of every two South Vietnamese was killed, maimed or forcibly relocated to U.S. concentration camps ("strategic hamlets"). His orders bombarded that small nation, the systematic slaughter of civilians, the use of millions of gallons of chemicals to sterilize 30 percent of the land area of South Vietnam causing untold birth defects. He has now returned from defeat and disgrace to peddle militarism as the ultimate solution to America's declining prestige in the world. This man was so universally hated that he was unable to speak at Army bases in the late 60's Westmoreland with the conservative turn the American population has taken, apparently now feels he can show his face on college campuses. Three cheers for the Vietnam vet who dared to oppose the general's militaristic insanity. It is the Vietnam vets who first-hand witnessed, and suffered from this illegal and immoral war. At least somebody had the guts to question the logic that is leading us ever closer to nuclear holocaust: "make war to prevent war."

The publication of the Pentagon Papers has shown that government spokesmen the Westmoreland have lied over and over again. Fellow-Americans: Do not fall for Westmoreland's CIA estimates and phony projections of alleged "military inferiority." The lessons of Vietnam (and more recently Iran) is that overwhelming military might in defense of corrupt dictatorships will only create hatred and hostility for the United States. Our real security lies in the determined pursuit of world disarmament, and recognition of the rights of all nations to their own forms of government and control over their own natural resources. This kind of foreign policy will make friends instead of enemies for the U.S.

How to tell Republicans from Democrats

(Published in the Congressional Records, Oct. 1, 1974, the author chose to remain anonymous.)

Democrats buy most of the books that have been banned somewhere. Republicans form censorship committees and read them as a group.

Democrats give their worn-out clothes to those less fortunate. Republicans wear theirs.

Republicans employ exterminators. Democrats step on bugs.

Democrats name their children after currently popular sports figures, politicians and entertainers.

Republican children are named after their parents or grandparents, according to where the money is.

Republicans tend to keep their shades drawn, although there is seldom any reason why they should Democrats ought to, but don't.

Democrats call the fish they catch Republicans hanging them on the wall.

Republican boys date Democratic girls. They plan to marry Republican girls, but feel they're entitled to a little fun first.

Republicans sleep in twin beds—some even in separate rooms. That is why they are more Democrats.

Reagan's idea calls for funding control

federal aid to education began. JIMMY CARTER.

The Democratic platform's education section is 45 pages long, a fact not overlooked by education lobbyists in trying to discern candidate concerns for learning.

But education lobbyists readily express concern for Carter's record on education.

"Carter has directed more aid to education than any other president," says Steve Lieberman of the Coalition of Private College and University Students (COPS).

But Carter, he adds, didn't always follow through on his proposals. "In many of the education policies introduced, the administration had to be prodded to carry them out." Moreover, "I don't think they always pick the best people" for slots at the Department of Education.

Jerry Kuchwalski, director of government relations for the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, agrees that in many instances the administration wasn't "out there fighting" during congressional debates. Still, the Carter campaign's education policies — authored by the NEA — do appear to most education lobbyists contacted by College Press Service.

Among those policies: Funding. The Democratic platform favors "a steady increase" in federal education spending, aimed at equalizing funding and opportunities from state-to-state.

Financial aid. While supporting "tax aid for private schools," it wants to withdraw it for "segregationist academies." (The Republicans have pledged to oppose efforts to remove tax-exempt status for private and religious schools.)

The administration has expanded the amount of grant money available to lower-income students, and has made middle-income students eligible for federal aid programs for the first time. As a budget measure last spring, it also cut $50 off each National Direct Student loan. It has opposed tuition tax credits.

Teachers unions: While the Republican platform "opposes any federal action to establish 'agency shops' in public schools," Carter's support for teachers unions is unquestioned. Both the NEA and the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) — the two largest unions — are campaigning for the president.

JOHN ANDERSON. Education observers accuse John Anderson of inconsistency. Eduardo Wolfe, lobbyist of the U.S. Student Association, says Anderson "tends to vote to authorize educational programs, but then votes against funding them."

"He has done this," cites Bruce Paul, administrative assistant at Anderson's House office. But Paul sees no inconsistency in the tendency.

"Without that [initial] authorization," he says, "the program wouldn't even get on the shelf. It's just that often Mr. Anderson doesn't agree with funding levels and priorities in funding provisions."

The AFT gives Anderson a meager 28 percent "right" rating on education and labor issues, while the NEA assesses him at 31 percent. Representatives of both groups complain congressman was absent when votes on most education bills came up.

Anderson has one policy paper on education. Among the points:

Funding. Anderson voted for the creation of the Department of Education, aid to handicapped students, and new vocational education programs. However, he voted against appropriating money for those programs.

Financial aid: Anderson says that, as president, he would increase the amount of money available under Basic Educational Opportunity Grants and the TRIO program for disadvantaged students. While his policy paper notes a "renewed commitment for work-study" programs, he has voted against forcing employers to pay college students the minimum wage for part-time jobs.

Observers like Tom Duffy of the American Student Association say Anderson's opposition to military registration has helped his campaign on campus. But Duffy now senses that "students are becoming more cynical about Anderson" because of his lack of specific statements on education issues.

Lockwood: a secure, comfortable futurist

"Humanities is a mansion with many, many rooms. Psychology, music and art are some aspects of it," said Dr. Richard Lockwood, professor of Humanities.

Lockwood, who was born in China and spent his first eighteen years there, was a sub reporter in Hong Kong before coming to the United States for a college education at Yale University.

"There's much more to the cub reporters there than to the states," Lockwood said. "In the morning, I'd sit in the courtroom and see the people put in jail for scraping the giant leaf off signs to get some money. In the afternoon, I'd cover sports events and in the evenings, I'd go to the theater."

After graduating from Yale with a bachelor's degree, Lockwood joined conscientious objectors (CO) because "I was the manly of war CO was an alternative service instead of joining the army." He was doing useful things like working in mental hospitals, planting trees and cleaning up after the destruction of tornadoes.

After four years of CO he spent two years with the Robert Shaw Chorale in New York. He then went to earn his Ph.D. in

Karin Johnson
Teacher feature

Humanities of Michigan State University.

With that interest at heart, Lockwood said, "Sociologists say we're at an incredible junction where there will be more change in the next ten years than we've had in the last 200 years."

In respect to that, Dr. Lockwood writes, "When an old world is dying and a new one is struggling to be born, prophetic voices make themselves heard. Prophets have always had a rough time of it because they bring to the level of consciousness ideas that we know to be true, but would rather repress or ignore. They tell us that for the first time in history we have the capacity to obliterate all human life and spell out certain changes which must be made in the very future if mankind is to survive."

The Lockwood, who has been teaching here since 1968 said, "I'm a great fan of community colleges. The idea is marvelous. It presents such a wide range of programs."

He previously had taught at community colleges for fifteen years in Minnesota, Michigan and New York.

"Teaching is fun. I have a very high interest in what I'm teaching. One reason I like being a teacher is because I don't have to lie to all other professions, you have to learn to tell non-truths. Teachers are not more moral than's just no point in lying. There's nothing to gain from it."

When he's not teaching, Lockwood collects slides of every nature and subject to add to his collection, which already fills two file cabinets. He uses most of them in teaching.

He also loves to travel. "In the last five years, I've visited the Soviet Union, spent two summers in Japan and wandered through Europe and North Africa."

As for his future, Dr. Lockwood plans to continue teaching. "It's a comfortable feeling to stay in what you're doing, he said."

Futurist registration open

The Harper College Futurist Conference will be held on three successive Thursday evenings, Nov. 6, 13 and 20 in Bldg. E-104. With guest speakers, films, panel discussions, a literature table and questions from the floor, participants will be pondering the world's uncertain future.

The first session, Nov. 6, will involve an overview of futurist ideas and strategies. The Nov. 13th session deals with the "global village" or "family-of-man" idea, a recognition of our necessary interdependence at the world-wide level. The final session on Nov. 20 is concerned with futuristic careers that will be evolving in the years just ahead, work that will help to resolve that problem, thereby the difficult problems faced by mankind.

Because of the limited space in Bldg. E-104, those planning to attend should register for any or all of the sessions by calling EX-310 or at the Office of Continuing Education, Bldg. C-101.

The senate meets every Wednesday at 4 p.m. in Bldg. A-10. All students are welcome to attend.

Numan brings sense of bizarre future

With great anticipation I awaited Gary Numan's appearance at the Granada Theater. Somehow I thought this concert would be a special event; would the people stay in their seats? Would they stand on them or sit? Is Numan's music bodily danceable? Would it be a show so mind-blowing that we'd forget to applaud? Would we fall asleep, lulled by the droning of synthesizers?

God, the people that this guy attracts! The new wave look was never more rampant—Michelle the fashion expert was giving ten-second reviews of practically every stranger. And stranger, and stranger. Didn't mini-skirts go out in a blaze of anti-sexism? Apparently not, in the safety-pin world. Shucks, I just did not belong! Maybe I wasn't wearing enough black or hot pink, perhaps. Anyway, I was there in spirit, if not correctly at-another keyboardist who also played guitar and violin. For the most part, they all stood still. Their robotic appearance pushed Gary Numan further to the spotlight.

Numan's stage personality isn't marked by between-songs patter. The extent of his verbal contact with the audience was "thank you." He doesn't smile much—that face is enough to make a lasting impression on anyone. Song after song, he would strut or writhe across the stage like a snake, fixing the audience with a blue-eyed glare, no David Lee Roth nonsense, here. During "M.E.," from the "Pleasure Principle" LP, Gary was perched on a platform above the drum kit, the alienation described in that song couldn't have been portrayed in a more efficient way. He was clearly all alone up there, like a sacrifice. Something should be said here about the lighting. The strobe panels all over the stage were impressive, in either red or white. Overhead lighting was mostly for a high-lighting effect; both systems created a futuristic backdrop for the somewhat cold music.

Some interesting toys were included as stage props, during "Are Friends Electric," two cubes with heads inside them rolled about the stage, operated by remote control. Gary sang "Down in the Park" from his seat in a remote-control space-car. A shock ran through the audience when it burst out from underneath the drum riser. Yes, a shock. Concerts these days are a contest in "how do shock the audience." So many people attempt it in so many ways—lgy Pop, Litopia, Peter Gabriel, etc. Sometimes it is more of a sham than a shock. In Numan's case, it worked and seemed appropriate.

Another fan and I got into a discussion before the show. He took off his yellow day-glo glasses and asked me if I thought new wave was part of a counter-revolution. Well, what other revolution is going on, that this one could counter? He said that his parents thought the style of dress and music was extremely decadent. He himself said that "this is very twenty-first century."

Well, all but the mini-skirts gee whiz, this is culture. Some of us are sociologists at heart.

Tattoos: painless(?) decorations

by KEFF KAMRATH
 "It's not like you're born and you have to decide if you want a tattoo or not." But it is a life time decision. Once it's there, it stays. Taking it off is not as easy as putting it on, or is it in-expensive, and the skin will never be the same.

Getting a tattoo is a personal statement. No one can say when to get one or what design. Just knowing is enough, and as one man said after he got a tattoo, "Things will never be the same again."

Once decided, the fantasy is ready to be brought out and made a permanent reality. Tattooing is defined as "inserting pigment under the surface of the skin of a human being by pricking with a needle or otherwise, so as to produce an indelible mark or figure visible through the skin" according to the Criminal Law Procedure of Jan. 1, 1973.

Tattooing is illegal below the wrist and above the neck, the only continually exposed areas that do not have room for change of mind and cannot be easily covered. In Illinois, you must be 21 years old to get a tattoo. The legal age in Wisconsin is 18.

Careful consideration should be given to the tattoo artist, what his credentials are and how hygienic his operation is.

Be able to talk to the tattooist. Be able to tell him exactly what and where the tattoo should be. Look at the sheets of "flash" on the walls of the studio. If the design isn't there, a tattooist can be skilled enough to see an example and either recreate it or improvise. See photographs of his work and if possible live examples. Knowing someone who has a tattoo from a particular parlor also helps.

There should be sterilization equipment for the electrical instruments. The tattooist should be in good health and have no skin abrasions or be smoking while the tattoo is being done. He should have adequate space to work in.

Take notice if the artist washes his hands with soap and dries them on individual towels before starting a tattoo.

The skin will be cleaned with soap (or alcohol), shaved, and rubbed with alcohol. One or two needles, depending on the size and type of design, will be used. The outline, 1/2 needles in a group, and the shading, 3-12 or more needles in a group. The needles are dipped in non-toxic ink and pressed under the skin one-eighth to one-sixteenth inch.

India ink, used in home tattoos, which are often reworked, contains chemicals not made for tattooing.

At about 50 punctures a second, getting a tattoo doesn't hurt, more like a slight burn and almost a tickle. There is a small draw of blood.

Aftercare is a necessity. Complete instructions should be given. Basically, it is essential not to bother the scab, the colors will be brighter if you let it heal naturally. Clean with alcohol twice a day and apply a medicated skin lotion until the tattoo is healed, within 3 to 10 days.

Before the electrically powered needle, soot-covered burns and sharp bones, were used to make tattoos. Cutting the skin and rubbing in pigments was another process. The earliest tattooing dates back to about 15,000 B.C. Egyptian mummies from that period were found to have blue tattoos. Captain Cook made note of tattooing in his journal of 1776.

Spider Webb, tattooist and author of 1979's "Pushing Ink" (Simon & Schuster) estimated that as many people who own Chevrolets and Fords have tattoos. He also considers three tattoos as still experimenting and anything more "heavily tattooed."

There is still a stigma surrounding tattoos, though. "Not around here," Greg, tattoo artist at the Tattoo Company of Lake Geneva and whose work appears in "Pushing Ink," smiled wryly.

Located at 181 1/2 Center Rd. and open daily 11-4, except on Mondays, Greg has been giving tattoos for 15 years. He won't do obscenities or Nazi signs. Neither will he give a tattoo to anyone who is staggering drunk.

Of the clientele, 30 percent are women, the most popular design is a butterfly while for men it is a panther. Sometimes a stencil is used for detailed designs and to make exact copies of another tattoo.

The prices range from $20 starts to $150 parrots and select designs that are done in more than one sitting cost more.

Oscar Wilde said it simply: "One should either be a work of art, or wear a work of art."

Hawks face Triton

The Women's Volleyball team will travel into the sectionals playoffs at Triton College Saturday.

The Hawks will face Oakton College in the first game of the elimination playoffs.

"It's going to be awfully hard because we're going to be missing a lot of our players," commented Coach Lynn Hillecock. "But, I'm glad we're going to play Oakton instead of Triton."

Two weeks ago, the Hawks topped Oakton three games out of four and Harper will try to repeat that performance Saturday.

Treen and Wright are the other two teams in the field of four and the top two teams will advance on to the regional playoffs.

Harper will be suffering a tall handicap in the sectionals. The Hawk squad will be missing sophomore Darlene

Volleyball

Kubinski and with an injured Teri Bauer.

Last Friday the Hawks fell to defeat at the hands of Illinois valley in three straight games. Harper commanded 4-1 and 6-1 in the first two games but lost their fight and the games 15-6 and 15-13.

The final game proved to hold the same fate for the Hawks as they dropped it 15-7.

Darlene Kubinski had eight points for the Hawks throughout the games. Theresa Hudes had seven, Teri Bauer had five, Karen Kamrath added four while Ann Astroksi rounded out Harper's points with two. Ann Astroksi and Teri Bauer each led the way for the Hawks in spikes with four apiece.

Unbeaten Hawks ready for playoffs

Mike Bambach

...on sports

This is what soccer coach Sander Szabo has been waiting for the playoffs.

The second-year coach is sure his team will go farther in the post-season playoffs than did last year's team.

"I think the unforeseen occurs," said Szabo, "we should win with no problems."

First, the Hawks will have to beat either Triton or DuPage in a Region IV North Semifinal. The Hawks have beaten Triton (1-1-2) twice, and DuPage (4-7-1) once, while Triton and DuPage have beaten the Hawks only once.

Should the Hawks win, they would advance to the state or Region IV playoffs. They would play the No. 2 ranked team from the Region IV South (Trion) match at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Should the Hawks win, they would advance to the state or Region IV playoffs. They would play the No. 2 ranked team from the North, Kishwaukee or Waukesha, would then play the No. 1 ranked squad from the South, the winner of the semifinal then meet in the state championship.

The state champion would then meet the Minnesota, Missouri, and Michigan state champions at the NCAAA Midwest regionals, which Harper bats.

Szabo hopes that the Hawks, which finished the year at 9-0-5 after a 1-1 tie with Lake Forest last Wednesday, advance into the national tourney.

"I think we're much better than the other teams around," he said.

One disappointment was the number of ties the Hawks endured. "It's just one of those things," said Szabo. "We just had some tough luck. I'd rather have ties than losses. We're getting better. I just hope we don't get stale before the playoffs."

A brighter note - five Hawks were nominated for All-state. Freshmen Mack Finster and Rick Pals, plus sophomores Frank Binnetti, Steve Todd, and Steve Crane. Pals is the Hawks leading scorer with 13 goals and two assists. Both Todd and Binnetti, meanwhile, were nominated for All-Region IV honors last season.

Hawks roll again, 38-6

Football

This week's 30-0 question is: Why do the Harper Hawks wait till the last couple games of the season before they start to play good, sound, solid football?

Last Monday, the Hawks traveled to North Park College and trounced all over the home Vikings, 38-6.

"This was the second straight game in which the Hawks compiled over 30 points while giving up a futile 6 points in both games."

Ron Burke extended his 100 yard rushing game streak to five games by compiling 164 yards, also a new school record.

Quarterback Tim Tyrrell rushed for 116 yards.

But the thing that the Hawks didn't do was turn the ball over once. Unlike their other games when the Hawks give the ball up more times than they have it, this one was different.

"We had lots of offense and no turnovers which is a sign of maturing," commented head coach John Eliask.

Ron Burke and Jim Vaccarello each scored two touchdowns for the Hawks while Tim Tyrrell and Scott Chokland each added one score a piece.

All in all, Harper gained 523 yards in their romp while giving up 30.

Saturday afternoon the Harper Hawks will play their last home game of the season against the Trilon Bulldogs.

Triton is ranked #1 in the state and #1 in the overall country.

Harper isn't ranked on the state poll, the country poll, or even the North poll for that matter.

Triton has a huge back field and they can run and pass the ball as well as any team they'll ever come across.

Harper has a couple good backs, a quarter back that can run but not pass, and a lot of inexperience in their offensive and defensive lines.

Triton lost their last two games and really needs this victory.

Harper won their last two games and is really playing like a very fine football team.

"The key to this game is going to be our defense," stated Coach Eliask. "If the defense can play a responsible game, then I think we've got a shot at it."

Harper is going to meet great performances turned in by Michael Davis, Tom Jenkins, Kevin Murray, Dan Groce, Brian Sander and Dave Loford.

They are all defensive backs and they're going to have to stop Triton from making any big plays.

Linebackers Jeff Anderson, Dan MacIntosh, Todd Marandese, and Jeff Smithers have all been improving greatly and have turned in fantastic performances for the past two weeks.

The Hawks' defensive line is going to have to get some penetration on the Trilon back field in order to do very well.

So back to the main point. Why did the Hawks decide to start playing good football in the last few weeks of the season?

Well, the Hawks needed someone to push around and give them confidence, enough confidence to go out and really push around someone that may be good. Triton is good!

But come Saturday afternoon when time runs out in the game, look for the Hawks to do just a bit better and then give Dad Fresh an team a hand for a truly remarkable season ending.

Placek, Bingham qualify

Harrriers Tom Placek and Bill Bingham qualified for the NCAAA cross-country meet with fifth and 16th place finishes at the Region IV meet at Schiller Park last weekend.

Placek finished the 3.1 mile course with a time of 25:58 while Bingham finished with a time of 27:27. Both earned All-State honors.

Spoon River and Triton qualified for the national meet as teams Harper, meanwhile, finished fifth out of 19 teams with 14 points.

"The kids did a super job."

Cross Country

said coach Joe Ultem "I'll tell you, if we had Teberg or Martin, we wouldn't have taken two. We have taken a team."

Ron Thiener and Todd Martin were declared ineligible for this season.

Teberg is a transfer from Arizona State. Martin qualified for last year's NCAAA meet.

Placek and Bingham will have next Thursday for next weekends national meet in Cour de Alenc, Idaho.

Greg Cisek finished 20th with a 27:21 time Ed Joyner finished at 20:21 for 41st place, and Paul Wallis finished 70th with a time of 30:28 for Harper at last weekend's meet.

The Hawks have a tentative meet scheduled at the Carthage Invite in two weeks, depending on how Placek and Bingham do at national.

Cousteau lectures on Wuvulu voyage

One could hardly make a round trip to the South Pacific in two and a half hours flat, but those people attending the lecture on October 20 came pretty close to it. Their host, or "pilot," for the evening was Jean-Michel Cousteau - son of renowned ocean explorer Jacques-Yves Cousteau and equally dedicated to the sea and its future. Although the lecture was entitled "Project Ocean Search," participants were given the opportunity to engage in many other remarkable areas.

Mr. Cousteau, being the great speaker that he is, began the lecture with a rather dramatic approach. How much "water" is really at our disposal? In view of what people may believe, the total quantity of water can be found in a little cup. This supposedly being our life support system. Ninety-nine percent of that water is salt water, and the remaining 1 percent is mostly composed of gas, chemicals, etc. An advertisement for a water filter device, you may say, a commercial it is not, but a "newsbrief" in environmental awareness and preparation for our future. Receiving quite a few "Ghas" and "Ahs" from the audience he gave us a few moments to appreciate those starting facts before beginning our journey to the South Pacific.

Wuvulu, a tiny island in the heart of the tropical marine life, is where the expedition was launched from. Jean-Michel Cousteau, along with several people chosen from all over the world, now share the island with a total population of 640 people. They situate themselves away from the industrial plants and villages, as they respect their privacy. Dwellings were built off the ground in order to take advantage of breezes, while also attempting to deter animals from entering. This particular structure also provided extra storage for equipment and other belongings. Immediately upon arriving, deep curiosity set in and it wasn't too soon before the water was rippling and the land showed various trails. Predictably, they became quite attached to the inhabitants (both the people and animals) and learned much about them. Gathering coconuts and fishing were the main activities on the island.

Cocunut milk and fish were essential to their diet, and so these activities governed a good party of the day.

It was soon that time to start making their way back. They didn't leave empty handed though, but left with cherished memories of the people and those in particular with whom they developed special relationships, an abundance of information, and a movie of the waters off Wuvulu which we were fortunate enough to be able to view.

The film was shot at sixty feet of depth and examined the most primitive of animals (sponges) to the most sophisticated (the fish). No words could honestly describe the color and tranquility which was prevalent throughout the movie, and which the camera so successfully captured.

Everything (fish, plants, etc.) appeared to be moving in such a symmetrical fashion that at times it seemed appropriate to subtitle this picture "Wuvulu, the water ballet show." As the final scene found its way from the screen, he concluded with: "Think about this world, the world of each and everyone of us. Preserve it, so our children can enjoy it."

Futurist conference kicks off tonight

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
Alexandra Alridge, University of Michigan
Humanities, Engineering, will address participants in the opening session of Harper's futurist conference tonight at 7 p.m.

Tonight's session, the first in a series of three, will explore the worldwide futurist movement. Alridge, a lecturer in humanities and engineering, will present an overview of the movement. Sharon Aller, associate professor of history at Harper, and Robert Booke, associate professor of physical sciences at Harper will serve as panelists for the session.

Discussion will focus on the history aims and concerns of the futurist movement, an international framework of individuals and organizations committed to effecting constructive changes in today's world. Political and environmental implications suggested by futurists will also be addressed.

The second session of the conference is scheduled for Nov. 6. The main thrust of this session will be a concept of a world family and global village. Discussion of alternative lifestyles and appropriate technology for the future will also be included.

In the third session, set for Nov. 20, future careers which will provide creative opportunities to contribute to the resolution of human problems will be discussed.

Other speakers set to address the conference include Carole Carmichael, Richard Lockwood and David Twedman. Carmichael was selected by Ebony magazine as one of America's 50 future leaders in 1978. A careers editor for the Chicago Tribune and author of a twice-weekly column on careers and the job market, Carmichael is recognized as one of the nation's career experts.

Professor of Humanities at Harper and coordinator of the conference, Lockwood was born in China and continues to be a student of the evolution of that country, particularly how it relates to the Futurist Movement.

Tiedeman, professor of education at Northern Illinois University, has published numerous books and articles on counseling testing and career education.

In addition to Rodney Borstad, professor, curriculum and instruction, and Linda Tatel, instructor, clinical technology, Northern Illinois University, J. Harley Chapman, assistant professor of philosophy, Frank Oliver, assistant professor of sociology, and Molly Waite, associate professor of political science, will serve as panelists for the conference.

Each of the sessions offered will involve comments from the panel members, a film or slide presentation followed by a discussion between the panelists and those attending the session.

The conference is offered as a service to the community, a forum where the general community can learn about the worldwide futurist movement and participate in discussion of the basic issues affecting the future of the world.

Issues to be covered in the sessions include:

- changes in work patterns and lifestyles;
  - use of the world's resources;
  - return of the control of the future to the people;
  - relationship of man to the environment;
  - the world family vs. nationalism;
  - the balance between humanity and technology;
  - careers that help to resolve human problems;
  - interdependence of all peoples.
- The conference is offered as a service to the community by Harper, at no cost to interested parties. Due to limited space, priority will be given to those making reservations in advance. Conference reservation forms are available at various spots on the campus. Reservations are also taken at the Office of Continuing Education, ext. 410.

Crusade campaigns through Nov. 14

Harper's annual Crusade of Mercy campaign kicked off last Friday and will continue through Nov. 14.

Those who wish to contribute during this time, may do so at various spots throughout the campus. Students may make donations in the cafeteria, bookstore, library, counseling center, health service, game room and television area. The majority of contributions stays in the local community. One out of every four families in the area uses at least one of the services funded by the Crusade in one year.

Last year, the Harper community donated $3,386 to the Crusade.

Looking ahead key to the future

How did that old song go? "In the year 2035, if man is still alive. . . ." To many it was just another song on the radio, but in reality it is a look at our future if we fail to do something about it now.

It is time to laugh and scoff at individuals and organizations committed to bringing about changes in today's world to assure a better future for all. Assume them of something to build a utopian society with their "dreams and theories." And get a good chuckle from the group calling for the interdependence of all people.

But what happens when the year 2035 rolls around and there are no visible means to control a runaway society?

Individuals and organizations who are dedicating themselves to the study of the future now are to be commended. This decade is viewed as one of great transition, a critical point at which survival depends on astute changes, global thinking and taking charge of action.

It is clearly time for the "Me Generation" to put down their Pepsi and give some serious thought to mankind's dependency upon each other whether American, French, Polish or Spanish.

Harper College is offering "Challenges, Lifelines and Careers for the 80's," a futurist conference exploring the worldwide futurist movement. The conference begins today and will be offered on three consecutive Thursdays this month.

Not only is the college being responsible enough to host such an event, it is being offered free of charge. That's right, free, it doesn't cost one red cent.

It is comforting to know that someone out there, among the reeked out, stunted out or generally burned out Harper community, there is a group that cares enough about the future to offer others a chance to gain some insight into what lies ahead.

Why not take the time now to find out something that we can do now to assure a better future for everyone? If we don't think about it now, it may be too late.

Kyungpook University a far cry from American system

All of us at Harper College felt great pride in Professor Kenneth Jacob's being awarded a Fulbright Fellowship to teach Korean for a year. I asked Professor Jacob if he would correspond with us so that we could share his experiences during the year. "The Harbinger" will publish the letters Professor Jacob and his wife, Arlene, send to the College. The first letter (dated September 18) is printed below. I think you will find the letters informative and interesting.

Greetings from Kyungpook University. We are now well settled, having been here over two weeks. Classes are going well and I am finding out students are the same here as here! Working conditions are a bit more strenuous here, most staff work about 30 contact hours and 5 1/2 days a week. You are expected to be available for student advising from 9 a.m. until 6:30 p.m.

Theater board a missing asset

Do you feel that you have complete control of your life? To those of you who answered "yes," I'm very happy for you, but there is no point then for you to read on any further. For the rest of us, —from the days of "rock a bye baby" to the years of retirement, a countless number of decisions, revolving around our lives, will be made by others. From choosing the business office to home, many plans in the longrun involve our participation, now, so why can't we participate in the preparation of such plans? I don't believe it's as much due to ignorance as it is making these people (decision makers) better informed as to the contributions we want to make. Let's look to the theater department in view of this. Each year, the upcoming season's productions are decided upon by one person, Mary Jo Willis — director of the theater department. Being the director, who more rightfully qualified than herself to decide which shows should be performed? Yes, — and maybe no. What then can those people do who call themselves "board actresses" yet haven't been in one production and still don't think they can act (even after taking extensive courses in acting and theater)? Some of them might try taking the script out a couple of weeks prior to auditions and drumming the lines and expressions into their heads, but there has to be an easier way to start in. They could have a questionnaire or read a certain play and immediately took a special interest in a specific character or possibly identified so easily with another in that play, that they unconsciously became that person for that two hours, or however long the show runs. More than anything they could every year in E.L.T. alone. There are 10 four-story buildings for electrical engineering alone! Took a short tour through some labs and found all the latest equipment for E.L.T. In large quantity. Some of it still in ratio here has been phenomenal the last few years. I have eaten in the faculty cafeteria twice now and the food is quite substantial. Today we had fish soup filled with spinach-like greens and red pepper, bread, bean cake, shred beef, cauliflower and kimchi with rice and barley. I could not eat it all because the helpings were too generous. It was expensive today, 500 won. That's about 56 dollar or 23 cents! It did taste quite good but a little hot. I also arranged to rent a car this Sunday to visit the coast and some interesting sights on the way. There are ancient temples, excavations, and museums to visit on the way. Have seen some photos of the ## Art allows growth change in Tippen's life

"Art is a state of becoming, a state of growth," said Jack Tippen, associate professor of art.

"Teaching is not my lifetime ambition but I've worked hard enough at it so I'm never satisfied with what I've accomplished in it. It's the challenge with new students, new minds, new talent."

Tippen, who studied at Kent State University, has been teaching art at Harper for 11 years.

His first interest in art probably surfaced at age eight. "I didn't have brothers or sisters so I was alone a lot. I had to entertain myself. I read comic books and drew airplanes, cars—typical things for that age. I guess my power of observation was a little more accurate than my peers because I had more time to observe."

Karin Johnson

Tippen kept his interest in art through junior high and high school and decided to pursue it in college. He also kept his interest in drawing cars.

"Most of my work relates to cars," Tippen said, "but just the surface of cars. My painting and drawing of cars has a definitely been a fragmented view of the surface. You don't actually see the car. What you can see is an image from the reflective pattern of shapes, colors, movements and activity. I like active, energetic images."

Both the Standard Oil Building and Al Johnson Cadillac in Tinley Park display pieces of Tippen's work. He also did a painting of a car for Ben Rose Fabrics, which is his favorite. "There's a lot of implied energy and movement in the reflections on the car," he said.

He still does paintings and drawings from the side of the car because "I still get a joy out of it." Tippen, who worked at the Akron, Ohio Art Institute as a curator, doesn't have a favorite artist. "I can't have a fixed favorite artist because then I

"At one time I understood the influence on me, but now there's too many. You simply become a part of all your experiences. If a certain style turns you on, then there is a great chance you will be influenced by it."

explained

"As for any particular influence, he said, "At one time I understood the influences on me, but now there's too many. You simply become a part of all your experiences. If a certain style turns you on, then there's a great chance that you'll be influenced by it."

In 1969, Tippen started teaching art history here, but switched to studio art when the program grew.

"Teaching studio art requires both institution and intellect. You have to lecture and also react to the students' work. You teach on an individual level. You're constantly moving from giving information to eliciting information. I like that."

"Studio art is not solely dependent on verbal communication, but also growth of visual skills. That is difficult to teach and that's what makes studio art teaching so exciting," Tippen said.

Although teaching is not a lifetime ambition with Jack Tippen, associate professor of art, he is never quite satisfied with what he accomplishes. Tippen teaches studio art classes at Harper. (Photo by Lori Lynn Guy)

This man was watching me when the Apollo astronauts were making "large leaps for mankind," by walking on the moon, while I sat and watched on my TV. This man talked to me when JFK was killed, when Bobby was killed, when Martin was killed, and I watched on my TV. This man talked to me about the chaotic Democratic Convention of '68 while I watched on my TV. This man talked to me about Richard Nixon's fiasco at the Watergate Hotel while I watched on my TV. It's easy to understand why I start crying, isn't it? Who is this man who always talked to me?

Yes, Walter plans to retire this year. This was his last presidential election coverage

And, I suppose he wants out. After this year's race, I don't blame him.

But, I can't imagine how I'll feel when Walter Cronkite will not be there to tell me what is going on in my world. Sure, Dan Rather fills in for Walter and does an adequate job, but he's no Walter. And when Rather does fill in, I always have known that Walter will be back. But, that will not be so, very soon.

Richard Niess told Bob Greene recently in the Chicago Tribune that in order to get elected President, "you have to be very nice to Walter Cronkite." Nice, you have to abuse his cut links. I mean this man is closer to God than the Pope. I'll bet Walter Cronkite gets more fan mail than the Pope, any takers?

It'll be a cold day when Walter steps down from his throne at CBS. I wonder how many people will turn off their TV's when Walter says "good-bye." For the last time I wonder if they will watch their TV turn into a blue dot, like I do whenever the Cubs bat in the bottom of the first.

And when Rather does take over, I wonder if I'll be in a state of shock when I no longer see, "The Evening News With Walter Cronkite," on week nights when I come home after an exhausting day.
 Maybe Walter will say, "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not gonna take it anymore." And then he'll announce his candidacy for president. Oh, what a happy day that would be. We'll get reports everyday from Walter from the Oval Office or the Rose Garden.

If he doesn't, I don't know what I'm gonna do, I better get a tape recorder and record a couple of news shows with Walter for history.

Say, "And that's the way it is," to yourself. You can't help but to sound like Walter Cronkite when you say it. It comes natural, inflections and all.

Get, hand me over a tissue. I think I'm gonna cry. And that's the way it is.

Joe Jackson records another winner

Where I work, I have this cheap little portable radio with a really poor antenna. I mean, this thing is really bad. When I work, there is no WXRT no WJXL and hardly any good music.

You see I have to either listen to the safe and predictable music on WJPM or the good old stand-by rock and roll on WJXL or WJMT. I really get tiresome a trip through any record store will reveal countless new artists - yet the only thing new on our giant rock and roll station is Pat Benatar of The Police. Ah, ignorance is bliss. It has been months since I've tuned into WXRT being forced to listen to the uninspired programming on the "Mighty Mer" and "The Loop" has made me appreciate

 on music

the slight radicalism of that station. I've even gone as far as listening to classical music on WJMT. I mean, hey, there is something to hear in that. There is something to hear on the new Joe Jackson album, too. "Real Crazy" is an incredibly cynical collection of songs guaranteed to move something, primarily the body. But don't miss out on the lyric sheet! There is quite a bit of satiric commentary on the game of real life inside this package. The title comes down hard on this, this song ought to be analyzed at the next meeting of the local P.T.A. See? A few rock songs and rappers think about these things? All of the "asin" today they're all the same: all those drugs, they can't be sane.

They've all gone "Real Crazy." This song has a strong hint of reggae to it. It sets the mood for the rest of the album.

"Pretty Boy" on side two is a rip at all of the good-looking, no talent people in the entertainment biz today. It's a driving tune topped by Jackson's non-stop vocal attack. Listen for this one on AM radio.

These superficial descriptions of songs don't go too far in conveying ideas, perhaps I should say that Joe Jackson and his hand write songs about people. These are primarily character sketches. "The Evil Eye" is from the point of view of a teen working in a meat shop, with people watching him all of the time. At home he gets out guns and vodka dolls while listening to "The Tramps on the Stereo."

"Line to time" is about a man frustrated with his woman friend - she's always joining causes and going to demonstrations, refusing to be "One to One." He doesn't feel like waving a banner.

Joe Jackson could be waving a banner here. By making intelligent songs in a unique musical style, he is breaking free of the blinds that restrict some artists. What is amazing is that his albums sell, certainly something is wrong.

Hey, there is some new heavy metal out. Some of it is good, and some of it is really terrible. Randy Hanson, who used to do very convincing tributes to Jimi Hendrix, has put out a record on Capital. It is strictly for the head bangers, but at least it's quality!

Rose Taitoo is the other new entry in the new loud sweepstakes. Forget it!

What were you to ten albums of this year? Write them on a piece of paper with your name on it, and drop it off in the Harbinger office. It's on 1/2 November, but it seems to take a long time to make people respond. It's sort of like drug tolerance levels - with some people, it hits you right away. With others, it takes ages.

'Elephant Man' warm, sensitive story of life

by HOLLY KUTLER
 Never before has a movie dared to unlock so many feelings, like that of the warm magnetism created by the "Elephant Man." The film itself doesn't single handedly point the accusing finger at viewers. However, it forces viewers to re-examine those times when they could've been guilty of "exploitation" themselves. The "elephant man" is as very much a real person as you and I.

It's his grossly deformed head and other severe deformities which causes the public to see him as rather animalistic, somewhat resembling an elephant, due to a trunk like distended frontal bone which practically roars into his eyes. That is exactly how he is viewed upon; like that of an elephant, in a cage, in a zoo. But this is no elephant, but rather a beautiful human being trapped inside a monster-like body. John Merrick was very much alive in real life, as he was so skillfully portrayed by John Hurt in the movie. S I R I C K E N A W I T H N E U R O F I R M O S I S a genetic disease at birth, his head was nearly doubled in size and lacking any definite shape. Over 90 percent of his body remained covered with enormous protrusions of skin which appeared to be "hanging" from him. It's shown from the very outset, how a man has already capitalized on the elephant man by displaying him as part of a freak show in the circus. Mark Trevens, played by Anthony Hopkins, a prominent English surgeon, is immediately engrossed with the caged human and with the idea that such a being does in fact exist. More noticeable, is the sympathetic eye that wants to free the barred "human" from this "inhumane" treatment. He then arranges to have him brought back to life at the hospital. Yet, he had officially admitted until the board passed a "unanimous vote," thus permitting John to continue living in his present quarters. As the story progresses, viewers are no longer scared off by Mr. Merrick's appalling appearance, but instead taken in by his inner beauty. His identity is gradually recaptured through such visits by high society people and especially by a leading actress (Anne Bancroft), who spreads time reading lines from "Romeo and Juliet" with John. She adds her own touching line before she herself exits, "you're not an elephant man at all, you're a Romeo." Although viewers witness the surfacing of his intelligence and warmth, reverting back to his old life seems unavoidable, thanks to an employee who holds a wild party one evening in John's room and predictably charging admission.

There has already been a great amount of controversy attached to this movie, primarily being "does this film serve as a pep show for its audience?" If it is not a peep show, nor should it be taken as "just another movie." This is a strong piece of film which will inevitably find a permanent place in our hearts. It's most unfortunate how "beauty" found its way into the English dictionary, for standing simply in terms of "looks." If one doesn't already know, this movie will sure make them realize that "external beauty" isn't worth a damn, without beauty from within. People are frightened by what they don't understand, "John Merrick."

Thomas Edison introduced the use of "hello" in the standard telephone conversation opening. At first, people would perfect phone calls with phrases as "Are you ready to talk?"

Hawks fall to Oakland

by JOE KOET

Take two pulls and call me real tall!

This is the perfect prescription for an athletic doctor would prescribe for the women's Volleyball team here in Harper.

The Hawks fell victim to Oakland last Saturday in the seasonal playoff tournament, three games out of three. Not nearly what one could call a winning performance.

The girls will finish the season with a 2-11 record, one more victory than last year's record.

Saturday's loss displayed what has been beating the girls all season: inconsistency, with capital.

Last Saturday the girls managed to serve only 32% throughout the entire afternoon. Teri Bauer, one of the eight young hopes for next season, was sick all week.

They missed one day of practice, and was told not to play by her doctor.

Darlene Kubanski, another strong point in the Hawks game plan, was unable to make the team, and that left the Hawks with a large handicap.

Theresa Hudson, the Hawks top setter, went into Saturday's loss with a 10 degree temperature.

All in all, the Hawks weren't all that good.

Despite their record, the Hawks season was a total success. Harper had no returning players from the previous year, and had to make good with all their young talent.

The top players from next year's team include Teri Bauer, Ann Astroski, Laura Harper, and Trudy Malaise.

Teri will be looking forward to a possible All-Conference season next season.

Teri contains one of the best talents of talent on the team and one of the best setters in the state. She has had to face Teri in an excellent playing match!

She is one of the teams top spikers, bumpers and setters in the seasonal loss. Teri leads the team in spikes with six for the loss.

Helping Teri out in the spiking department will be Ann Astroski. Ann is another of the teams top spikers and with a little work in that area, she could possibly become one of the best in the conference.

Ann's weaknesses rest on her serving and her setting. Ann is an graduate of Conant High School and will add much needed power to the Hawks in the coming season.

Laura Harper, a classmate of Ann from Conant, will also return next season to add bumping strength to the Hawks.

Volleyball

Laura is the type of player that managers to keep the team together when the going gets tough, and for the Hawks, the going's been tough for most of the season.

Laura is the teams top setter but also shows talent of being one of the top setters and spikers on the squad.

Trudy Malaise had never played the game of volleyball before this season but because of the constant quality of her improvement, it's awfully hard to tell.

Trudy took over where Darlene left off and really turned out to be a fine player. If Trudy does decide to play for the Hawks next season, and sometimes to make the same rate of progress, she could not only be one of the teams top setters for the season.

Other players that have played for the Hawks last season but won't be participating next year include Darlene Kubanski, Theresa Hudson, Karen Kamradt, and Judy Abernathy.

Darlene came to the Hawks late in the season but added that sixth strength that the Hawks were lacking.

Hawks were lacking Darlene and all-round players. She is in line on attending Southern Illinois University in January.

Theresa was the teams top setter for the past season and could usually be counted for her service.

Karen was another of the teams top all-round players.

Another season at Harper and Karen could have developed herself into one of the top setters, bumpers and spikers on the squad.

Karen, also from Conant, is a member of the University of Kansas next year.

Judy Abernathy was another of the girls that had never played the game before and also made remarkable improvements throughout the season.

The Coach of the whole squad is Lynn Hitchcock.

Lynn also coaches the diving squad at Harper and the Women's softball team. This was Coach Hitchcock's first season as a college volleyball coach.

Once again, despite their record, the team was a large success. The team has improved greatly throughout the season and should be sending girls to next years team with experience and with something to win for. At least three victories, one more than this year.

Racism in nicknames

trayed Prince Lightfoot from 1961 through 1972, abruptly reappeared at a Stanford game in Berkeley.

Williams, it turned out, had been snuck onto the stadium. His ride around it elicited cheers from some and dismay from others.

Richard Lyman, then Stanford's president, later ordered Williams never to appear on the field again.

So this season Williams' supporters organized a rally which drew about 100 people.

Members of the Stanford Navy Service claims that "half of them were agitated in the sense that they were angry at the school."

Rayner derides "movement" leader Ziebell as a "real smart salesman."

Ziebell is in fact an insurance salesman who has distributed tee-shirts to promote the cause.

"I haven't made any money off this," he asserts.

Ziebell and his co-supporter Allan Smith - who also works with Ziebell in the insurance business - think Prince Lightfoot was the victim of a conspiracy.

Smith says that Williams, the prince's sister, is "a leader in the community, and there was some jealousy among other Indians."

They got the officials at Stanford to get rid of him.

"Most of the Indians at Stanford are from out of state," Ziebell adds.

"They don't have a right to make a decision about this." Same goes for Lyman, who ultimately did make the decision to axe the mascot.

"Prince Lightfoot had danced on the field before DuPage. Lyman was even going to Stanford."

They argue that the character wasn't an insulting stereotype. "He's a famous Indian chief," Smith says of Williams, who won a Caliber and fishing record. "He's not just some drunken Indian."

As far as racism is concerned, Williams' supporters argues, "the Dallas Cowboy doesn't offend Texas, the Minnesota Viking doesn't offend those of Scandinavian descent. We got all caught up in trying to do everything for the minority."

Now there's a tremendous backlash.

But university administrators persist in seeing the Indian symbol as unacceptably racist.

"Universities should be at the forefront in promoting human dignity," Stanford President Donald Kennedy recently wrote in response to the rally on his campus.

A reason which is offensive or demeaning to groups of people should quite simply not be permitted.

"It was insulting to watch someone at the game put on stripes or carry a tomahawk under the influence of liquor."

Stanford's new mascot, the Darimouth.

Newell, a Panethnic Indian who works in the office of Native Americans at Darimouth, said that the Ivy League school's prior symbol was especially ironic.

Darimouth, she explained, was founded some 200 years ago as a school for Indians and area residents. But until 1970, when it shed its Indian mascot.

Presently, we have now a student body which doesn't use the symbol, but an alumni that uses it because it was in use when they went to school."

Newell says.

Despite the readoption papers filed by Faddis, the student group, Newell observes, "it's not all that political."

She suggests that few on campus like Faddis, who also wants to abolish the university's educational system seriously.

But the problem is a common one. Ziebell says 92 secondary and post-secondary schools around the country use some variety of Indian mascot.

No one knows how many of those schools have dropped those mascots, or how many have been pressured to re-adopt them after changing.

Sometimes schools keep Indians as mascots, but try to use them down. In 1977 Florida State replaced "Savage Sam," a student dressed up as an Indian and looked to exhort crowds from the sidelines, with a more-whole less outrageous Seminole Indian mascot.

Members of the Seminole tribe, which is said to have once owned the entire state of Florida, endorsed the idea of the change, which was conceived by the football coach's wife.

Tribe members have even sewn authentic tribal clothing for the new brand of mascot, who is supposed to represent the revered Chief Osceola.

"Everybody loves him," enthuses a spokesman for FSU's sports department. "He leads the team out, and the crowd goes wild."

Of the racial question, she says, "We've never had a problem with that."

They did at Peking High School, which some Chinese-Americans from Chicago involved in 1974 to take issue with the school's 60-year-old unofficial nickname of "Chink."

"They didn't demand anything," recalls school principal Art Keller. "They only complained why this is derogatory."

In response, Keller began gradually to phase out use of the name.

Official adoption of a new nickname, "The Dragons."

Some 300 students rallied in protest. A series of them conducted a three-day boycott of classes.

But Keller is determined to see the change through to a conclusion.

"It was not a name we could use freely," he says. "They could use it here but students couldn't wear garb with 'Chink' on it and go elsewhere and not be ridiculed."

Valley, was an enthusiastic about Harper's chances.

"They're Harper's only team up here that has a chance to beat Belleville," said Newton.

"But they won't believe it is just coincidence. They are a good team," said Newton.

"I am impressed. They played a smart game to day. But if Harper played Belleville 30 times, they might win twice."

Newton was particularly impressed with Puls and goalie Steve Todd, who was called on to make only four saves Saturday.

The Hawks dominated the Chaps in the shot department, 30-

"Their goalie is terrific," said Newton. "He could play anywhere."

"Should the Hawks win the state title, they will advance to the NCAAs Midwest regional, which Harper will host. And right now, it's the only place Todd and the rest of the Hawks want to play."

Hawks stun Triton, 34-29

by JOE KOEST
The Harper Hawks had three things resting on their minds last Saturday afternoon.

Beating Triton, beating Triton, and still more of beating Triton.

The charging Hawks went head on into what was the fifth best team in the nation, and came out of the mess with a stunning 34-29 upset.

Harper was led by quarterback Tim Tyrrell throughout the game. Tyrrell accounted for 215 of Harper's 367 offensive yards and all of their 34 points.

Tyrrell alone with Harper record breaker Ron Burke was sidelined in the third quarter of action but both returned late in the fourth quarter to lead the Hawks to the winning touchdown.

Several Hawks turned in excellent performance throughout the afternoon. Ron Burke rushed for 91 yards to set a new Harper season rushing record of 783 yards.

Burke couldn't have gotten the job done if it weren't for an excellent blocking performance turned in by his offensive line. Jim Murasanki, Chuck Spagnoli, Reggie Silas, Dan Tyra, Julian Tucker, and Mike Griffin all played fantastic games and made the blocking that enabled Harper to beat a power house team like Triton.

Jim Vaccarello rushed for 71 yards in the Hawk's victory. Mark Hudson caught five passes for 79 yards. Pat Gos captured seven tackles and two quarterback sacks in the Harper triumph. Bob Billy caught a pass in the beginning.

Each team scored once more

Football

that some may say was the finest reception they have ever seen. Quite a catch. Dave Ledford recovered a fumble and had an interception late in the fourth quarter that set up the Hawk's winning touchdown.

Brian Sander made a tackle behind the line of scrimmage on a fourth down play that forced Triton to give Harper the ball with less than 40 seconds remaining in the game.

It was a day for superstars in every sense of the word for the Hawks. For Triton, it was doom-day.

Triton's doom started on the second play of the game when quarterback Tim Tyrrell ran 68 yards for the first of many Hawk scores.

On Triton's third offensive play, Pat Gos caught a fumble that was recovered by Harper at the 24-yard line.

Minutes later Ron Burke swept around the outside for another Harper touchdown and a 14-0 lead.

Triton was the next team to score. Virgil Hild scored on a 63-yard run to put Triton on the scoreboard, 14-7.

Harper took their next drive 90 yards in 11 plays that resulted in a two-yard touchdown run by Tyrrell to put the Hawks on top, 20-7.

Triton came up with one more touchdown before the first quarter ended to make the score 26-14 in favor of the Hawks.

Each team scored once more in the first half of play. Harper's touchdown came as a result of a 21-yard pass from Tyrrell to the field light end, Demetrious Gaines.

In the third quarter Tyrrell and Burke were both sidelined with shoulder injuries.

Triton picked up a field goal and a touchdown in the third quarter to take a narrow lead, 29-23.

With six minutes left in the game, Dave Ledford picked off a Triton pass to give the Hawks the ball and a final chance to pull off a victory.

On the final drive Tyrrell and Burke returned to the game. Like magic, Burke's running and Tyrrell's leadership took Harper down the field for the winning score.

Burke rushed for 62 yards on the last drive. The final drive was a 19-yard sweep for the victory.

Harper will travel to Wright College for the playoff game that will decide the final conference standings.

The Hawks topped Triton three weeks ago for their first victory, 28-6.

Hawks put it in Triton's eye

Mike Bambach

... on sports

When football closes its season Thursday night against Wright in a meaningless Region IV "playoff" game, the Hawks will have completed one of the finest turnabouts in Harper sports history.

The football team got off to an 8-5 start and it looked as though the Hawks were not going to win a game all this year. Then came Wright—the MAC's Get Well card and a 3-6 win.

Then, last Monday, the Hawks rolled over North Park's Jayvee, 26-6. Ron Burke rushed for 165 yards while Tim Tyrrell added 118 more yards on hand.

Nothing, however, will match the Hawks' 34-29 win over Triton last Saturday. Unconceivably nothing.

Four days before the game, two Hawks said that there was "no way" Harper would beat the Trojans. Oh, not that they wouldn't want to, but this was after all, Triton.

The Trojans had been the No. 1 ranked team in Illinois for the first five weeks of the season. They were also ranked No. 2 nationally. Only Illinois Valley, which was ranked as high as No. 2 nationally at one point, was as awesome as the Trojans. Then came a 44-40 overtime win over DuPage. A loss to Vevrona's freshman squad followed, but then a 51-14 loss to valley. So much for the No. 1 ranking.

What made the loss to the Trojans worse was that Illinois Valley had lost to DuPage, knocking Valley from the NCAA Top 15.

So, heading into last Saturday's contest against Harper, the Trojans were 6-3 overall, 5-1 in the MAC tied with DuPage and Valley for first place. A lot was riding on the Harper-Triton game, for the Trojans, anyway.

But the Hawks, 17-point underdogs, were up. Triton isn't just another good football team; the Triton-Harper rivalry is as intense as an Ohio State-Michigan, as Triton would discover—fast.

Fifty-five seconds into the game, quarterback Tyrrell ran 68 yards for a touchdown. The Hawks led 7-0.

Three minutes, 11 seconds later, Burke carried 111 yards for another Harper TD. The Hawks now led, 14-0.

One minute, 46 seconds later, Triton scored again on Tyrrell's lead to 14-7. But, 5-46 later, the Hawks scored on Tyrrell's two-yard run to give Harper a 20-7 lead.

Triton scored with 1:46 left in the first quarter to make it 20-14 Harper.

Tyrrell hit Demetrious Gaines with a 19-yard TD pass early in the second quarter to give the Hawks a 28-14 lead. Triton, though, led in the quarter to make it 28-20.

The Trojans then drove 74 yards in eight plays for a field goal. It was now 28-23.

Triton went ahead for the first time with 3:27 in the third quarter on Virgil Hild's 21-yard TD run. The extra-point missed, but Harper trailed 28-29.

Tyrrell and Burke both missed all of the third quarter, but without Burke and Tyrrell, the Hawks could go nowhere.

Tyrrell returned for the fourth quarter, but there was still no sign of Burke. He had injured his left shoulder in the second quarter, and had not been seen since.

Tyrrell could not get the Hawks untracked singlehandedly, however, and the call went out for Burke. The sophomore came back for Harper's second possession of the final quarter. The Hawks opened the drive from their 20. Burke gained two yards, then Tyrrell threw an incomplete pass. He then hit Mark Hudson for 20 yards to the 40. Burke went 24 yards to the Trojan 34. Another incomplete pass followed. After that, it was all Burke: a six-yard gain to the Triton 28 a nine-yard run to the Trojan 19, and then, with 4:45 left to play, a 18-yard run for a touchdown. Harper led 34-29 for good.

Triton did march to the Harper 31. But, on fourth-and-two, the Hawks held. Eight plays later, Harper had the ball at their own 41 with 2:21 to play. Trojan QB Dan Horton threw a screen pass to Tim Jenkins for two yards. The Trojan's next game was over. The Hawks had fielded mighty Triton, 34-29. There was no joy in River Grove that night. And you can take that to the bank.

Is there racism in nicknames?

What would you think "scimitar" Lamar Thomas rhetorically asked a crowd of some 300 students gathered to convince Michigan State University administrators to make their affirmative action programs more aggressive.

"If they called the Washington Redskins the 'Washington Yids' or the Atlanta Braves the 'Atlanta WASP's'?"

But that was more than 20 years ago, when civil rights activists used sports team nicknames as part of their broad attack on institutionalized racism. The activists, in fact, scored a number of successes on the collegiate level in their effort to soften the stereotypes often employed as sports mascots.

Stanford and Dartmouth, for example, surrendered "Indians" as their nicknames out of respect to Native Americans, who characterized the appellations as racist.

Yet now, often years after the change and after the activists who forced them have left campuses, some revive traditionalists are trying to bring the old mascots back.

At Stanford last month, an insurance salesman named Larry Ziebell staged a rally in favor of restoring the "Indians" name to Stanford's sports teams, and bringing back a character named Prince Lightfoot, in role horseshoe around the football stadium during games.

At Dartmouth, an alumni group called Faddis is lobbying in favor of re-adopting the school's old Indian mascot, which was dropped in 1970.

And at Pekin High School in Peoria, Illinois, an administration attempt to rid the school once and for all of the nickname "Chinks" inspired about a dozen students to pull off a three-day boycott of classes last month.

Stanford's traditionalists are probably the boldest. The university has dropped its "Indians" name, eventually replaced by "cardinals" — in 1972, when it also quit its practice of allowing the full-clothed Prince Lightfoot to whop around the playing field.

Last October, however, Timm Williams, the man who por-

Hawks advance to state tourney

by MIKE BAMBACH
"Everything is beautiful," said soccer coach Sander Saabo after his team's 5-1 win over DuPage that qualified the Hawks for this weekend's state tourney at Springfield.

"The main thing about this game," said Saabo, "is that we came out of it with no injuries. We're all ready as we'll ever be for going downtown."

Brian Klose had put DuPage ahead 1-0 with only 30 seconds gone in the first half on a penalty kick. Steve Crane then scored on a penalty shot, and Rick Pula scored on an assist from Crane to give the Hawks a 2-1 lead.

Soccer

Pula scored again late in the first half to give Harper a 3-0 halfway lead.

Mark Moia and Jim Mawmoin added goals in the second half, both assisted by Pula to give the Hawks their 5-1 victory margin.

The Hawks, now 10-0-5, will face Lewis & Clark Friday in a state semi-final match. Lewis & Clark led the Hawks 3-0 for the state title last year. The Hawks will be hoping to avenge that loss.

Should the Hawks win Friday, they would advance to Saturday's state championship match, most likely against Belleville.

Belleville will be as Scabo will tell you, very tough. They are No. 1 in the state and No. 1 is the nation. Heading into the state playoffs, they stand at 11-2.

"If we win Friday, I'll be happy," said Saabo. "But we'll be tough. But we'll play better when we play against better teams."

Current audit policy threat to college reputation

by MICHAEL P. SIMKUS
Harper's class audit policy places the college's outstanding reputation among major institutions in danger.

During the 1976-77 school year, the audit policy was "A student desiring to audit a course without credit must, at the time of registration, receive approval from the instructor or division chairman and the approval of the registrar. An auditor cannot change his status to that of a credit student nor can credit for the audit course be established at a later date."

However, in the 1977-1978 school year, the audit policy changed and remains in effect. The current policy states "A student who wishes to audit a course may do so by following the regular registration procedures or by completing a change of schedule form prior to the withdrawal deadline for that course. Students will be required to pay full tuition and fees, and will receive the grade of 'H' for the course."

"Students who wish to change from audit to credit may do so by completing the change of schedule form by the mid-point of the semester term."

In other words, a student could take an audit grade without the permission of the instructor. A student may also opt to take a grade of audit in place of the grades of withdrawal (W), or non-attendance (N).

Each of the major institutions contacted indicated that the audit grade meant, "to attend class as a listener receiving no credit." Each university stressed the word, "attend." Eastern Illinois University went so far as to say, "If, in the opinion of the instructor, student exposure and effort deserve the course, the student will receive the course entry, audit, on his permanent record. If not, no entry will be made."

Currently at Harper, the audit policy makes no attempt to put a limitation on attendance for the grade of audit.

If Harper is to maintain the fine reputation it has amongst major institutions and maintain levels of academic excellence, re-evaluation of the audit policy is necessary. Harper, if it is to be a school which offers the university of a two-year program anywhere, should have a policy of audit which is consistent with the major universities.

Next week: The controversy of the audit policy on the Harper Campus.

Harper earns seven year reaccreditation

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
Harper College received a seven year reaccreditation from the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The association provides standards for the quality of education offered by member schools. The three areas checked by the standards are mission (goals of the institution), faculty and curriculum.

"Essentially it means that credit we offer can be transferred to other schools," said Brian Barch, chairman of the Harper Board of Trustees.

"Without it we would still operate as a school but other schools would not accept the credit we give."

Evaluation teams from the association visited the campus on a three day reaccreditation tour. The tour included an overall inspection of a physical plant and interviews with several hundred people on campus. The interviews were designed to give the reaccreditation team insight into views of Harper from faculty members, administrators and students.

The association renewed Harper's accreditation for seven years in addition to reaccrediting general courses, evaluation teams visited several programs to observe student clinical experiences and meet with students.

One visiting evaluation team represented the National Nursing Association. The nursing program is seeking accreditation for the first time. Since most nursing students plan to continue their education at a four year institution, accreditation would insure the transferability of credits.

A five-person team from the Illinois Community College Board, ICCB, Springfield, spent two days at Harper on a recognition visit. The ICCB evaluation is scheduled concurrently with the North Central Association visit since both agencies review the college as a whole.

"Since community colleges are facing declining enrollment and financial instability, it's reaccreditation really is a very good shape," said Barch.

The evaluation team also met with the Board of Trustees, administrators and representatives from various areas of the college in order to complete a more complete report. The preliminary report is expected to be completed by Dec. 1.

Harper College was the first two-year institution in Illinois to receive unqualified full accreditation in 1971, six years after opening.

"The importance to the student of Harper's designation as a fully accredited college is reflected in transferability of credit in four-year institutions and the high regard given the certificate or associate degrees earned here," said James McGrath, Harper president.

Serving on the North Central Association evaluating team were: Chairman Dr. Daniel B. Crowder, President of West Virginia Northern Community College; Dr. Charles McDowell, Department Head, Cuyahoga Community College; Dr. Robert Eicher, President, Southeast Community College; Dr. Devo V. Dilagis, Vice-President, Macomb County Community College; and Mr. Raymond J. Still, Executive Dean, Pima County Community College.

Members of the ICCB team were: Keith R. Lape, Recognition Officer; C. William Coons, Finance and Audits; Charles A. Hengstodt, Site and Construction and Student Services; Dennis W. Howland, Instruction, and Penny A. Walhaus, MIS and Institutional Studies.

The National League of Nursing evaluation team members were Sylvia Edge and Dolores Vaz.

Harper speech team fares well in tourney

The speech team earned respectable showings in the annual Ball State University Aquarius Tournament.

In the competition, held Nov. 7 and 8, the team finished no lower than sixth place. Andy Hopper received a second place and two third-place ratings in informative speaking. Keith Pearson received fair ratings in the same category.

In the novice persuasion category, Dennis Adams received the finals and claimed sixth place. He also competed in after dinner and impromptu speaking where he received fair ratings.

In novice poetry, Jill Zarn ranked second, third and fifth in her three rounds of competition while Shirley Turpin earned a first, second and fifth place.

Michael Harper, who received a first, second and fourth place rating, fell slightly short of reaching the finals in the category. Turpin also fell short of advancing to the finals in the novice poetry division.

Mr. Tom McGrath, speech coach, pointed out that members of the Harper forensics team are up against strong, well-supported four-year universities and travel considerable distances to participate in various tournaments.

"It's like a little league team going against a professional team. But it's going to get us a piece of the ball when we get to bat."

"However, at Sagamon State, our next trip, we'll be in our own league and should fare quite well," McGrath said.

Second futurist session tonight

The second session of "Challenge, Lifestyles and Careers for the 80's" a futurist conference, is set for 7 p.m. this evening.

Discussion will center around the world family. Topics covered at the session are concepts of the world family and global village and a look at alternate lifestyles and appropriate technology for the future.

The main speaker at tonight's session will be Richard Lockwood, Harper professor of humanities and coordinator of the conference.

Panelists at the session include Harper faculty members: Harley Chapman, assistant professor philosophy; Frank Oliver, assistant professor sociology and Mely Wolfe, associate professor political science.

The final session of the conference will take place next Thursday, Nov. 20. Future careers which will provide creative opportunities to contribute to resolution of human problems, will be the main thrust of the discussion.

Speakers scheduled for the final session are Carole Carmichael, careers editor for the Chicago Tribune, and David Tidman, professor of education at Northern Illinois University. Panelists contributing to the session are also faculty members of Northern Illinois University: Rodney Burnard, professor curriculum and instruction and Linda Tate, instructor clinical technology.

The conference is offered at no charge as a service to the community by Harper College. No advance reservations are needed. The sessions will be held in Bldg. E106.

Faculty evaluations still a campus farce

Once upon a time there was a community college nestled in the heart of suburbia. Now, once every semester the administration let the students "speak their minds" and evaluate the faculty. What kind and good administrators

These evaluations were quite a big deal of the college. Oh, the secrecy involved! Each instructor received a packet of evaluation forms complete with directions. ("You know these evaluation forms, the fill in the dot, computerized ones). Each faculty member was told to select one pupil to hand out and collect the form. That way the instructor could not see what the students were writing and attempt to influence them.

And then came the big moment for students, they got to fill in the little data rating their teacher satisfactory or unsatisfactory. The kind, good-hearted administrators even treated students enough to ask their opinion on several weighty issues on the flip side of the forms. These issues included the physical facility provided for instruction and was the instructor properly prepared for class.

Some marvel at the concern of the administration for wanting to keep up a quality education. But others thought it was a waste of time. Then there were a few people who sat back, thought a minute and said "These really do not make a whole lot of sense."

Further pondering led those people to really examine the entire process. This is the student's only chance to speak out on their instructors but how much can really be learned from a few basic yes-no questions. The more they thought, the more logical it seemed to ask several detailed questions that would really give some insight into the instructors' performance.

And the more they thought the more obvious it became that the type of class that was being taught affected the outcome of the evaluations. Obviously, an elective course is filled with people interested enough in the subject to work while required courses are filled with people who are there because they have to be. Circumstances surrounding students registered in a certain course are as varied as the evaluations received.

But the administration insisted the evaluation forms offered were fair and were quite shocked when it was suggested that maybe they were more than a little biased.

But, since they were administrators, they win out and the same forms were used year after year.

And, with the exception of a few, bright people who gave the matter some thought, they had the campus hypnotized into believing they were living happily ever after.

Take the trauma out of transferring

by HOLLY KUTLER

A good portion of students have elected to continue their schooling, upon successful completion at Harper. Some hold no idea as to which school they will transfer and yet others appear to have their entire future mapped out (or so they say).

Transferring, if properly prepared for, should be a pleasant and fulfilling experience. Too often, however, students fail to explore transferring as it should be, and consequently, it then turns into a matter of risky business. There are specific guidelines, if carefully followed, which can alleviate the needless tension created by the entire transferring picture.

Students should first begin by directing a couple of questions towards themselves. Mainly, what university or universities do they hope to attend two years from now. In view of those schools selected, they should candidly ask themselves, if they are really approaching this on an idealistic level. What about being financially, academically and emotionally qualified for admission to this particular school(s)?

Transferring is so often thought of as being synonymous with "the losing of credits" that some students may remain reluctant to the whole idea in general. People can only feel reluctant to accept by taking preventive action for the future now, and not tomorrow when it's too late. It's never too soon when it comes to making a concrete future for one's self.

The first order of business is a visit to Bldg. A37, the counseling center (a) THE RIE. No matter what university in mind, one shouldn't have the least bit of trouble finding it among the vast collection of catalogs. Study and compare the courses having already taken, with those accepted by the school as listed in the handbook. If no such information is printed, take advantage of the counselors' it's now about ten who's job it is, to keep up to date with a particular university. Although there might not be a counselor covering that school, other counselors specializing in different majors will be more than happy to help these individuals in preparing a "sound-schedule "Sound," meaning the most basic of schedules which generally transfers with little problem, to a series of schools. Too many people readily assume that once handed that diploma here at Harper, 1) one will automatically enter as a junior, and 2) the courses or degree will transfer as a nice and neat package. As after contacting a variety of schools in the state of Illinois, including the University of Illinois, Northern Illinois University, University of Chicago and Northwestern University, it was discovered that they had a somewhat different story to tell.

Take the U of I for an example, many students expressed a deep interest in going there. At one time, the U of I didn't anticipate any major setbacks connected with those students transferring from junior colleges. Times have changed, and so has their position on transfer students. They, along with many other schools, have become increasingly selective as to what courses they'll grant credit towards, and those they'll put in the "reject pile."

Mr. Ron Mark, a counselor at Northern Illinois University cautions those individuals to the "exceptions of the" when transferring rules. "There are four special cases when students will most often, than not, won't be able to transfer directly into junior standing. The business, music, nursing and physical therapy programs, are those areas of study which can present a large problem in transferring to Northern. Probably due to the fact that here we are mighty selective, and don't only take into consideration grades as the key interview, but several required interviews, physical therapy, passing highly difficult additional music) and must apply before Feb. 15, 1969 for admission to the fall semester (nursing).

"All of these special curricula, including business don't allow many spaces for transfer students, so there can be no selling in those being admitted. For instance, under the nursing programs, there are only 125 openings for those transferring to that field."

"A student can either write to call us so that a handbook may be sent to him. The handbook, containing general college information, also focuses on the courses, which Northern will accept. If someone wants to get on the spot information, regarding those courses accepted by"

Increase or not, students still ahead

Should you prepare for another tuition increase next year?

In April I began to learn of the many facets of an institution such as Harper. During that period, as a Trustee, I was receiving many complaints about the proposed $1 increase in tuition.

They tell us that the ideal college will receive a bulk of it's money from three different sources, state taxes, community taxes and tuition. The money input will be equal from all three sources.

John Malkowski
from the desk of

The latest current figures I am able to present will be from the 1968-69 school year. During that year, Taxes equaled $2,226,300, the Appropriation equaled $2,880,000. Tuition equaled $3,711,800. With the figures presented tuition was 29.8% of the total income. Tuition is 3.1% below what it could be. I do realize that our tax income is at the bottom of the list when compared across the state. There are two causes for that, one being the Funding Formula from the state, and secondly our community tax is low. We cannot change the Funding Formula from the state, that takes the Illinois State Legislature and to raise the tax I takes a Referendum impossible due to the current economic situation. Currently we pay $19 per semester hour. In more current figures this generates about 27.8 percent of the total income. Sure, no one wants an increase in tuition, but we cannot raise community taxes overnight and we cannot tell the state legislature to change the funding formula.

So next spring when the Board wants to raise your tuition from $19 to $20 or $21 remember, We are getting off easy.

Thompson's lifestyle one of total fitness

It's important in an aerobics class to try and work all your muscles. That's why we have a warm-up, the endurance work, the toning and strengthening of the muscles and the cool-down," said Sue Thompson, instructor of aerobic dance classes and mother of three children.

Thompson, who teaches here part-time, comes from a very athletic family and is very active herself. She really likes what she is doing. "It's the best thing for me," she said, "and if I wasn't teaching it, I'd be taking classes too."

While at the University of Iowa, Thompson knew she wanted to teach physical education. "There's so much potential in the field. I can't think of anything I'd rather do. I love my job. I love working with the students. It's so rewarding because every class is different. There's such a cross-section of people. And the students may not always experience physical changes but there's always psychological changes. They feel they're doing something worthwhile for themselves."

Aerobics has been around a long time because it is anything that promotes the supply and use of oxygen. Aerobic dancing is just one area. It increases your cardiovascular endurance. "Aerobic dancing has an aerobic emphasis but it's

teacher
feature

total fitness all around," she said.

The aerobic dance got started about six years ago. "Originally when I was teaching part-time, I was teaching adult education for district 24, in the evening. It was called Sismatics. That was just an exercise class. Then I began using music," Thompson said.

In the meantime, there has been more and more aerobic classes.

"With my students, I use some of my own routines and some from other sources," she said. "I watched 'Soul Train' the other day and picked up three movements that I'm going to use."

Thompson said she has more than 100 routines that she's choreographed. "They're all original. The song makes a difference to me. Music is the key. I'll work around the song. Some routines come quicker than others. I know where I want to go with it."

The routine for "Cad-dyshack" came quickly after seeing the movie. She knew basically what she was going to do with it.

"That's the dance aspect in me. I like to create."

But Thompson doesn't just make up things with no purpose. She always has an intention in mind. "The Blues Brothers 'Give Me Some Lovin'" is good for arms," she said. "Usually I can hear something in mind for a certain song."

In her spare time, she studies and does papers for a physiological and cardiac rehabilitation class she's taking. "Primarily, the more you get into a field, the more you want to know."

Any other spare time, she uses to work on routines. "I also jog when I can but I don't want to make it into a competition thing. People make the mistake of pushing too hard. I run to build my endurance. It makes my job easier," Thompson said.

But she likes to save her energy for her three aerobic dance classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"I really enjoy working with fitness. There's so many avenues you can work with. I'll always be teaching some sort of fitness because fitness is not going to die. It's going to be with us always."

our school, they may want to call (815)753-1000, which is the academic advising office and will answer or at least try to answer any questions you may have. Questions to which they don't know the answers, they will refer you over to someone who does. People here at Northern are more than willing to help those people in straightening out any confusion they may have about our school."

Those wishing to transfer should talk not only with counselors but to friends, relatives and instructors who may have great insight on a college, either by attending it, or knowing people who have. Probably of the utmost importance, is direct contact with the school itself. Not by phone, but by letter. "The proof of the pudding" is in the signature—and not a voice. Mail them a complete list of those courses having already taken, and those courses yet to be taken. Ask for them to acknowledge those subjects which "will" transfer to their school, and now "should." One should never make the terrible mistake in feeling inhibited—to whom does this future belong anyway, it's certainly not theirs. Make sure that a signature accompanies the evaluation.

No one could overly stress the tremendous weight that a formal evaluation, with a signature, can ultimately carry.

- Check the catalogs.
- Visit with counselors.
- Talk with those people having already attended the college, or perhaps even teach or work there.
- If possible, visit the campus now.
- Request a formal evaluation (with signature) from the college.

All of these steps must be followed now. The sooner they're done—the sooner one can feel in control of his future, and not in return, have it control him.

TIM WEISBURG wowed his audience with the magical sounds of the flute last Friday evening.

There's a long four years ahead Mr. Reagan

The election was over. It was a little past eight o'clock when my phone began to ring. My friends from New York, Hartford, Denver, and Los Angeles began to call. They wanted to know if I was still going to put together the surfing team I promised a little over a year ago. If Gov. Reagan were elected.

One of the first phone calls came from Denver. My buddy asked, before I could even finish saying hello, "It's the Apocalypse. It's the Apocalypse. Now."

I tried to settle down my friend who was over 90 miles away, by saying, "Hold on. Get a hold of yourself. Look up in the sky, what do you see?"

"Nothing, just pollution."

"See, now if there was really something the matter, the city of Denver would be glowing, brightly."

"Still. Don't say anything." He said this very quietly. I think my phone is tapped. Listen. Did you hear that?"

"Hear what? Come on, what have you to be paranoid about?"

Mike Simkus
... abstract analysis

"I didn't tell you, I just wrote a paper on the effects of the moral majority. Funny though, my phone hasn't been making those sounds since Nixon."

The paranoid phone call lasted too long. I was beginning to think my friend was Woody Allen. I wanted to make up excuses for hanging up, but I couldn't think of anything. My mind was a blank.

If you call my house some time, and I say "Hold on, there's someone on the other line," please don't get offended. We have a new phone system in our house. I can hear a beep, and know that someone else is on the line. It's terrific. I had an excuse to get off the phone now.

Suddenly the phone rang. I hadn't got more than two steps away. I picked up the receiver and said, "Hello."

"Mike? Did you hear it's great. Now, I'm joining up for sure. Reagan will make sure the military will be strong. Think of it. Fighting over there for our country. I can just see myself wearing those dress blues. Hey, Mike, you still there?"

It was my friend from Hartford. Yes, your typical, gangster, college student. He actually wants to go to war. He strongly identifies with Hemingway.

"Yes, I'm still home. Geez, take it easy on me. You realize of course that Reagan hasn't been elected. I mean it's not official until the electoral college meets. A lot can happen, you know, between now and then."

"What can happen? Carter couldn't get the hostages home for all the Billy Beer in the world. Besides, doesn't it sound like fun to be marching?"

I could hear a record playing in the background, but I couldn't make it out. I said,

"hey, what is the music you've got playing?"

"Geez, Mike, don't be dumb. You'll be hearing it a lot, now. Look, don't be so down. Anderson never stood a chance."

I made the same exit as I did the first time. Another phone call was waiting. I left my friend listening to his Marine Corps Marching Band, playing "Halls of Montezuma."

I had a good night of sleep that night. Hopefully, I was having a bad dream.

I woke up, and found myself in the Harbinger office. There were a few long faces, a few smiles. I walked up to the sometimes sports columnist and said, "So, what do you think?"

"I'm moving to Russia. I want to be on the winning side. That's all he had to say. I understood."

And that is how the day after went. That is of course, until I got home. My brothers, Paul and Scott, draft ball for sure, asked after watching Walter on the evening news, "What does it all mean?"

I looked at them and replied like the TV commercial I've seen so many times, "Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines." I will go on the record as saying, "It'll give Reagan a chance." In the meantime, I suppose it will be fun. I can't wait to hear all the jokes about his "mommy Nancy," or jokes about the movies or even the movies themselves, that Ronnie did. Even the remarks Reagan makes off the cuff should make good reading. And I thought Saturday Night Live was funny. I can't wait till I hear, "And now live from the Oval Office. It's President Reagan."

But, then again, the surfing team idea sure sounds like fun. The blue slacks. The warm Pacific water splashing in your face, geez. It gives me goose pimples thinking about it.

I'm reminded that when Pres said, "he'll make whores out of our daughters and wives," I don't think that happens. I'll have to remind my "Apocalypse Now" friend in Denver, of that fact.

Anyway, good luck, almost President Reagan.

Who knows what music is anymore?

Stick of music? Or just had enough of the radio? Does your record collection take on its own personality at night? Are you obsessed with bottom and upper over your highs? Tweeters malfunctioning? Does the car stereo crackle and make fun of your attempts to get a good sound out of it? Are your ears of mostly stacked tapes glowing in the dark? Does "Robert Plant" jump into your brain when your neighbor dog starts yapping? Do the latter copies of Rolling Stone laying around your abode make you feel that this pursuit is hopeless? God, you're as burnt-out as I am.

Kris Piepenburg

There is music in the elevator. There is music in the Jews. Woodford has a low, droning piece of music going and played the radio, you, along with countless others, had music circling in your brain. It's really cottony, y'know. A nice car with roll seats and WBSY.

You stopped in the cafeteria to eat coffee. What that muffled noise coming out of those speakers music? Surely I won't lose touch, but it was there. Major Tom's a junkie! You attended Psychology 101, from where you sit, in the back row, you can see at least six different concert posters on the backs of young dudes. Let's see, what were they? Rush, Pink Floyd, D.R.E.O. Cooknewagon, AC/DC, Journey and some fool with a Special jacket. And now, are you going to tell me that music doesn't matter?

Well, I hope you do. It really doesn't. A few seconds ago, I got off the phone with a friend. I'll give you one guess as to what the subject of our conversation was. It was sort of like, "wow, man, what is new waves?" Who, really, cares? When the whole place goes up in flames, the vinyl will melt and the guitars will burn.

Jagger and Lydon have both said at one time or another that "rock and roll has no future." And the fans all wrote into Rolling Stone and told Jagger to get his derriere off the stage if he thinks what he thinks, Oh, they take it lightly so seriously.

"Lydon" Who is, be some punk or something?

Since my picture appeared above this column, I've received loads of feedback on music from everyone and their brother. So far, most of the readers like this column, but "that Simkus has got to go." "I don't know a thing about art, but I know what I like."

This week's column might have made you laugh. Maybe you agreed or perhaps you didn't. The other day, someone said to me, "I want to learn how to play guitar." Don't bother, because there will be someone telling you to play softer. Or play differently. Use feeling or don't play at all. There will be a critic there from day one. Some idiot like me.

Music is everywhere. Give me a sedative. And tell me about your favorite albums of 1980 while I drift off into a land where no one has ears.

Major-college athletes: what price for grades?

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE
With their cars and their special dorms, athletes are one group usually left out of the standard list of deprived campus minorities.

But as the personality of the fledgling college sports reform movement—founded in the aftermath of the worst intercollegiate athletics scandal in recent history—begins to develop, protecting athletes' rights has become the movement's prime goal.

The revelations of coaches fixing athletes' transcripts to insure their eligibility to play, of schools neglecting athletes' educations, and of students receiving credit for non-existent courses—have now spread to more than 20 campuses. Reformers generally blame the worst excesses on the adults who run the sports instead of the students who play them.

Athletes "are told to obey the rules, while everyone else gets a free ride," asserts Allen Sack.

Sack, a sports sociologist at the University of New Haven, is also one of the most ambitious reform groups, the Center for Athletes' Rights. Formed as a legal and psychological consulting center for prospective college athletes, it aims to "give college athletes the same rights as everyone else," Sack explains.

"Colleges should require 2.3 grade point averages in high school, not just 2.0 for entrance," says Chuck Sherer, head of the Chicago-based Athletes for Better Education. "This way we wouldn't wind up with a lot of dumb jocks who graduate and aren't good enough to go to the pros, or smart enough to pursue another profession."

Sherer's group has organized summer camps for a few hundred high school athletes soon before they enter college, by simulating a realistic college environment. Sherer claims, athletes learn to adjust to the world of classes and exams, not only practices and games. He believes the camp's schedule of classes and sports activities conditions the athletes to better deal with the hard-nosed coaches who only want to get athletic results from them.

But Sherer and others diagnose the disease as more than just a lack of academic training. They believe athletes must learn more about priorities in society, so that they can both adjust to the rigors of college life, and also resist any temptations to accept material objects in return for their services.

The Center for Athletes' Rights argues that "these kids" should be allowed to accept whatever material gifts that are offered in return for their enrollment at a certain school. Since the world of intercollegiate athletics is big business, the players should be entitled to the rewards of corporate success, the group claims.

"The only way to make the system fairer is to let the athletes receive money from the colleges," Sack says. "It should be like a free and open market where they can have schools bid for their services."

Moreover, Sack detests the goal he says athletes feel when they are accepting gifts.

"They [the athletes] are told it's wrong when they accept gifts. How hypocritical that is when at the same time they are coaches and athletic directors, and even university presidents, reaping all the benefits," Sack says.

"The whole system dehumanizes the athletes, makes them feel like animals. How can you blame the kids when it's the people at the top who cause the problem?" he asks.

To carry its message that college athletes should be "professionals" and not amateurs, the center is setting up offices in Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, and New York. It has applied for a $250,000 grant from the Carnegie Foundation, but has yet to receive a final response.

One of its main chores will be to publish a national guide to college sports, which will give prospective athletes an outlook on school's academic program, general environment, and their coaches' attitude toward athletes.

Still being organized, the center plans to make an extensive display of its activities at an upcoming national convention on the study of sports sociology, in Denver. The convention will analyze the role of sports in society, spending a lot of time on the negative consequences of the recent flood of recruiting violations.

As expected, NCAA officials and others who currently run the system don't like Sack's ideas.

Wayne Duke, the chairman of the Big Ten Conference, calls the proposals of the Center for Athletes' Rights "totally out of the realm of possibilities" and "an upside-down look at what needs to be done."

Dave Gavitt, athletic director at Providence College, said such an overhaul of the system would be a "total degradation of the integrity and performance of it." He adds the result would be a lack of spirit and hustle in college athletes, similar to what he says has occurred in the pros.

Duke and Gavitt, as well as other athletic directors, suggest more studies be done before determining solutions. The thrust of their philosophy calls for schools to regard athletes as students first, and players second.

"Somewhere the college has to make a stand insuring that these kids get a degree, an education, or else they would lose their grants," Gavitt says. Among the most popular reforms suggested by NCAA officials and school representatives are the following:

- Freeze athletic scholarships over five-year periods if an athlete has not received his degree after five years, his scholarship can not be awarded to an incoming freshman. This is to supposedly motivate coaches to get players to class.
- Every school should be required to appoint a faculty committee to oversee academic performance by its athletes.

- Reallocate the large sums of money awarded to schools appearing in postseason bowls or tournaments.

- Increase the penalties for cheating.

But Sack insists such changes are just cosmetic, and would not be adequately enforced.

"All they [the NCAA] are concerned with is exploiting the athletes. These changes would just make it harder for the athletes to prosper," Sack argues.

Defense, Tyrrell kept Hawks going

been long gainers for the game, a fumble recovery, and an attitude that look the team right through the game with spirit to spare.

Ledford's top notch performance could have been topped by one thing if anything and that would have been Ron Burke topping the 1000 yard mark for the season.

Burke came into the game needing 209 yards for the goal, but he was hurt in the second quarter of play and was forced to finish the season with a total of 245 rushing yards in his credit. That alone sets a new Harper record. A truly fascinating season for Burke. But Tyrrell, the usual leader on the offensive squad, couldn't seem to get a good grip on things throughout the course of the game.

Even though he scored three touchdowns, Tyrrell said: "I think that this will be remembered as a worst game I've ever played."

And rightfully so. Harper's leading receiver Mark Hudson, watched helplessly as four passes sailed high over his head in the endzone. Four touchdown passes? Maybe the Hawks just didn't care if they won the game or not. Not that they came out on the field with a defeatist attitude, but maybe the Hawks had something else on their minds besides beating a team that they had wallowed earlier in the season. Maybe the Hawks wanted to have fun in their last game of the season.

"I don't think that I've ever laughed that hard in my entire life," stated Chip Catto concisely.

ning the bus ride to the game. If having a good time means starting a fight on the last play of the game that needs both teams pouring out to the field to get a piece of the roughest action they'll probably ever see, then Dave Lock must have had himself a great time.

Everyone on the team had a great time. And as far as Coach John Eliasik may not have molded them into Super-bowl contenders but he sure taught a bunch of boys, taught them how to accept defeat along with pride, and most of all, how to have a great time while playing a great game, with some great friends.

And on that note, the Hawks have made a winning season.

covered a 12-0 win over Lincoln with the first string missing much of the second half. This is a team that should've but didn't. Next year, Todd, Chris Small, Mark Mota, Jimmy Maiworm, Andy Bobowski, and all the rest, this was it. But it never came.

"I feel bad about it," said Sisko. "Everybody thought we could do it. We played much, much better against Lewis & Clark than we did last year. It was just one of those things."

Maybe but it's just not fair. Really, I'm afraid it's not.

Loss an injustice

those games," said All-State goalie Steve Todd. "We just didn't get any breaks."

Indeed, but one game where the Hawks got all the breaks was when they downed Lincoln 13-0 that was only eight points fewer than the football team scored that weekend if they lost to Joliet, 32-0.

In the Region IV qualifying match against DuPage, the Hawks fell behind 1-0 before leading the champs, 3-1.

The game was mirrored with a little controversy when DuPage coach David Newton said, "They're Harper the only team up here that has a chance to beat Belleville but they won't. Belleville is too awesome if Harper played Belleville 30 times, they might win 'em."

Newton, probably suffering from a bout of sour grapes, had already absorbed a 1-0 loss to Belleville earlier in the year. But his comments set off a fire in the Hawks. "I think we're going to win," said Jimmy Maiworm. "Just for revenge."

And so the stage was set. Harper would play Belleville for the state title and the right to play in the Midwest Regional, which Harper would host this weekend. Wouldn't it be fabulous if the Hawks could qualify for the national tourney, and in front of a home crowd?

Well, someone forgot to warn the Hawks about Lewis & Clark. Actually, the Hawks needed no warning. Lewis & Clark had beaten the Hawks 4-1 for the state championship last season. That in itself was enough motive for revenge.

But as it turned out, it wasn't enough for a win. The team that had been riding latent all season waiting for the big break had just to a team, that would eventually lose to Belleville in the state title match.

"It's like this," said Todd. "Last year's team had a lot of luck, but not as much talent. This year's team had a lot of talent, but not much luck."

"We weren't supposed to lose Friday," said Binnett. "Sack stated, 'It was the same story. We just couldn't take advantage of our changes. It's just one of those things.'"

Hawks fall 1-0 in state semis

by MIKE BAMBACH
In the soccer team's opener ahead of two-and-a-half months ago, Andy Bobowski scored two goals and Mike Paruch added another score as the Hawks downed the Illinois Institute of Technology, 5-2. The Hawks' promising season had begun.

There was, however, one foreboding moment in the game, a moment which would be the ironic foreshadow of the Hawk's season — John Prell hit the crossbar twice during the game.

That is how the Hawk's season ended last Friday — only this time Bobowski was victimized by the goalposts, as the Hawks fell to Lewis & Clark 1-0 knocking them out of the state playoffs and a possible NJCAA Midwest Regional playoff spot.

"I thought if we scored one goal," said coach Sandow Sabbo, "we would win. We played an excellent game. We were by far the better team. It's just one of those things."

Lewis & Clark, despite being outshined by Harper 13-4, took a 1-0 in the 31st minute of the first half. That held up for a Lewis & Clark win.

"I'm very disappointed for really thought we could win it. Everyone thought we could win it. I'm still very proud of them, though."

It is only perfect irony that the Hawks, which finish the year with an 11-3 record, were shutout in their only loss.

It is also perfect irony that the Hawks were beaten by the problem that has plagued them all season — inconsistency. For example:

• The Hawks beat Triton 2-1 for their fourth win of the season. But they fell behind 1-0 early in the first half before going ahead for good. "It was a disappointing game," said

Sabbo afterwards. "We played a poor game of soccer. There were so many things we did badly. We just completely forgot what they're supposed to do out there. I thought we were a better team."

• The Hawks crushed DuPage 6-0 in their first meeting of the season, but tied the Chapparals 1-1 the next time they faced them. "I'm very, very proud of this team," said Sabbo after the first match. "It was a very disappointing tie," he said after the second game. "I'm very disappointed."

• The Hawks tied Washburne 1-1 in their first meeting of the season, but beat them in the second meeting, 3-1. "We played a very poor game," said Sabbo after the first match. "We should've blown this team out of here. After the second match, which was after the 1-1 tie with DuPage, Sabbo said, "This was without a doubt the best performance from everybody this year. Overall, it was our performance of the season."

Triton was the only Region IV North rival the Hawks beat twice. They beat and tied DuPage, Washburne, and Kishwaukee. They also tied Wheaton and Lake Forest. "We should've won three of Defensive Defense Defense. That was the name of the game for Harper last week as they closed out their season with a 35-14 pounding on the Wright Rams.

The victory closed out the Hawks season with a 4-5 record, a win straight in a row to complete one of the greatest turn-around seasons that Harper College may ever see.

The game had no real meaning other than the fact that whoever loses, takes the center position in the toughest of tough conferences.

Even though the Hawks scored 35 points offensively, the Harper defense is what pulled the victory off.

Brian Sander had two interceptions in the contest and recovered one fumble to help out in the Hawk victory.

Chip Gatto got tough when the Hawks needed it by pulling off three quarterback sacks in the fourth quarter.

Thomas Jenkins and Dan MacLacoe each picked off a Wright pass in the game and played very tough and hard.

Sophomore Jeff Smithers had a fumble recovery in the Harper win and braced up quite a few of Wright's offensive players.

However none of these defensive stars could have come close to the job that Dave Ledford put in from his defensive back position.

Ledford had two interceptions in the contest, three inceptions that he couldn't manage to hang on to, three tipped passes that could have

Hawks loss knows no poetic justice

Only Monty Python's Procession of Iniquities' skit could describe the soccer team's sudden exit from the state playoffs last Friday.

It's not fair. It's just not fair.

It's really just not fair.

I'm afraid it's really just not fair.

The Hawks, who hadn't lost in their 15 regular season matches, fell to Lewis & Clark 1-0 in a Region IV semi-final Friday, killing their hopes for a state title, and, perhaps a national championship.

"We played an excellent game," said coach Sandow Sabbo. "We just couldn't score. We should've been up 3-0 at halftime. We were clearly the better team. It's just one of those things."

The players were just as disappointed. "We weren't supposed to lose Friday," said Frank Binnett, who won All-State honors. "We really thought we could win state."

"We had our chances," said Mark Mota. "I missed three shots I should've made." "It's like this," said Steve Todd, who also earned All-State honors. "Last year's team didn't have much talent, but had a lot of luck. This year's team had a lot of talent, but not much luck. We just didn't get any breaks."

It is perfect irony that in their only loss of the season, the Hawks were to be shut out.

But, you see, the Hawks weren't supposed to lose. They were supposed to win. Lewis & Clark was 9-7, nowhere near their finish at last season. And the Hawks, who were 12-1 last year, were supposed to face Belleville, a team ranked No. 2 nationally, for the state title and a NJCAA Midwest region playoff berth.

Belleville was supposed to be the Hawks' obstacle. Not Lewis & Clark. But it didn't, as history will show, happen that way. Belleville won, which it was supposed to do, over Washburne in the other state semi-final. Then they beat Lewis & Clark for the state title and the NJCAA playoff berth.

Although officially over, the Hawks season is not technically over. Harper will host the NJCAA Midwest Regional and, by that ironic.

"It's like we should be there, but we're not because we lost," said Binnett, struggling for a description.

To try an analogy, it will be like a person seeing an ex-boyfriend/girlfriend with his/her best friend; it should be you in his/her place, but it's not.

In simpler terms, it's gonna hurt. This has been an ironic season for the soccer team. This is a team that has had football as its primary competition for Harper football (whatever your name is). This is a team that had gone 5-0-3 before the football team had even won one game. This is a team that had ridden talent all season waiting for breaks; this is a team that

Hawks close with 35-14 win

by JOE KOST
The Harper Hawks ended their season last Thursday with a victory against the Wright Rams at the Rams home field, 35-14.

Ken Burke came into the game needing 200 yards to push this season total over 1000 yards. Burke, however, was hurt in the second quarter of play and captured only 60 yards for a season ending of 945 rushing yards.

This game, unlike many others, wasn't controlled by Harper's offense. The Hawk defense stole the show and the ball several times in this contest.

Dave Ledford and Brian Sander lead the way for the defensive attack by picking off two interceptions apiece and one fumble recovery apiece.

Chip Gatto had three quarterback sacks in the game that accounted for 27 lost yards.

All in all, the Hawks had six interceptions and three fumble recoveries against the Rams offense.

The Hawks offense gathered a total of 427 offensive yards while Jim Vaccarello ran for 106 yards and one touchdown.

Harper's first score came in the beginning of the second quarter when quarterback Tim Tyrrell ran the ball in from one yard out to give Harper a 6-0 lead. Dave Luck's extra point attempt was good to put the Hawks out in front 7-0.

The Hawks next score came as a result of a Jeff Smithers interception. Jim Vaccarello took the ball in from two yards out and that, along with the two point conversion gave Harper a 15-0 half time lead.

Wright came out into the second half throwing the ball. On their first possession the Rams passed the ball down the field to their first touchdown of the game and a 14-0 score in favor of the Hawks.

Don MacLacoe recovered a fumble moments later on the Wright three yard line to set up another Harper score. On the next play, Tim Tyrrell went in from the three yard line to put the Hawks up on two, 21-0.

On the first play of the fourth quarter, Wright scored on a 22-yard interception pass to put the score at 21-14.

Several minutes later, Dave Ledford intercepted a Ram pass and ran it back 20 yards to set up another of Tim Tyrrell's three touchdowns in the game.

After Tyrrell's touchdown that put the Hawks up 27-14, Chip Gatto checked the Wright quarterback two plays in a row for a loss of over 20 yards.

With 3:33 left to play in the game, Thomas Jenkins intercepted a Wright pass and ran it back 19 yards to the Rams 25 yard line. On the next play Mark Dabbe ran 23 yards to the two yard line. Danie got the ball on the next play and rolled into the endzone with Harper's final score of the game.

The Hawks held the Rams on their last possession. They set up the game 35-14, to end their season with a final 4-5 record.

College deficit knocks off intramurals

by MIKE BAMBACH
Forget who shot J.R. Who shot our intramural program? What had gone wrong from Harper's single-largest activity success has become, in short, nothing.

The flag football league, the billiards tournament, the tennis-table tournament, the basketball league, and the hockey league which were seen all at last fall are no where to be seen today.

"I am hard to provide some type of intramural program for the students for 18 hours a week," says Wally Reynolds, the prime factor in the intramurals success last year.

For this year, Reynolds had built it for the 17 hours he worked last year to put together an intramural program. It had been hoped that a full-time intramural position would be reinstated during the last budget session, but nothing occurred. "Intramural coordinator," says Reynolds, "was not added in a full-time capacity. But I wanted to stay with the program."

Admittedly, there hasn't been much of a program this year indeed, most of the activities are based around Harper's multi-million dollar facility. "When we talk about intramurals now," explains Reynolds, "we're talking about the facility. Our priority is keeping the facility open to the students and train supervisors."

There are many reasons for the lack of intramural programs sponsored by Reynolds. First, and always foremost, is the lack of funds.

The intramural program receives $9,800 from Student Activities. Out of that comes the salaries for the supervisors who are around the gym and weight room when Reynolds isn't, and for the lifeguards. There are also more supervisors this year, which is understandable with the addition of the racquetball courts and the swimming pool.

Another key when analyzing the situation, is the fact that the intramural program didn't get off the ground until Mid-October of last fall. This year it started from Day 1.

The biggest reason, however, is the cut in Reynolds hours. "Most of this supervising work fills in 10 hours per week," says Reynolds.

The reason for his cut in hours is, again, simple. The lack of contractual funds, the reason Reynolds was able to hold down 37 hours per week last fall, was due to a grant given by the Student Senate to Student Activities for the intramural program. The grant was for $5,000. Reynolds can't help but feel frustrated over not getting the full-time intramural position but he has no sour grapes, which is best shown by the fact that he is still at Harper.

But until the school can cure its monetary problems about a $600,000 deficit, there won't be any significant changes in the intramural program.

Reynolds still hopes to sponsor some of last year's successful activities. There is a ping pong tourney and a racquetball tournament in the works now and a basketball league is being planned for the spring.

"I would like to see the school get its monetary problems solved," says Reynolds. "I think the students will respond to intramural programs. I would like to see the college make a commitment to the intramural program. But you can't spend money you don't have. It's frustrating for me because I know that there's a market of students out there that would respond to these programs."

What Reynolds is hoping for is a program similar to the one at Lake Forest. "They have an outstanding program," he says. "What they have is a supervisor who assigns students to run certain programs. That's a great learning tool."

One advantage Reynolds and his program does have is M building. A problem had arisen earlier this semester with the racquetball courts. People would use the courts, which cost students $5 per hour with a Student Activities card, and not pay the fee for using them. "We couldn't monitor the courts

System hits no snag for spring '81 registration

by WENDY WINCKELBAKE
Early registration procedures have hit no snags in spring 1981 registration.

"We've handed out 1800 computer cards (in the afternoon) and the procedure seems to be running smoothly," said Anna Harberger, a representative of the registrar's office.

The early registration systems, which cater to currently or previously enrolled full-time students, allows students to have their choice of classes in a schedule advantageous to their interest.

"It also prevents crowds later on," commented Harberger.

Telephone registration, which is open from January 5 through 7, is also open to part time students. This system lets them phone in their class schedule instead of doing so in person.

"We are going for speed with telephone registration. It's only part time people with one, maybe two classes," said Kathy Severe, head of registration.

Once having completed their educational planning sheet, students may pick up an appointment to register cards at the Admissions office, Bldg. A111. The appointment to register card indicates what time the student will be able to get computer time and complete the registration process.

According to Harberger, the initials used during early registration while 10 operators are needed during the phone-in registration period.

tion, phone operators try to speak to one student every three minutes. Severe points out that as classes begin, more time must be spent with each student.

Faculty reaction to audit policy

by MICHAEL SIMKIS
Faculty overwhelmingly called for a change in Harper's audit policy, which they termed anything from "bizarre" to "a travesty."

Doctor Richard Lockwood, professor of humanities said, "I would favor a policy that would make a student after four weeks either withdraw or take the class for credit. I don't believe in the audit system, unless, there is a cut-off point."

Lockwood and other faculty said Harper's current audit policy leaves a "late impression on student's grade transcripts."

The policy, which was changed in the 1976-1977 school year, states that a student may audit a class until the last day of class in the semester. The former policy required that the instructor or the dean of the division approve of a student taking a class on audit. The current policy states that the student needs no permission of any kind. In order for students in audit classes today, all that they must do is file a change of schedule form with the registrar of the college.

Harper's policy also differs from many other colleges, in that, Harper's policy has no requirement of attendance. Many colleges leave the decision of audit up to the individual instructors. Instructors make the decision as to if the student had attended class enough to earn the audit grade.

Dann Stansbury, Vice-President of Student Affairs, said that the policy was probably brought about because the administration wanted maximum "retention" of students.

When the policy did change, it came upon fire from the faculty senate. Gil Terney, associate professor of English, pointed out "The change in the policy was made under the past administration."

But, the Faculty Senate had asked informally for a change in the policy this past July. There has been no formal appeal by the Faculty Senate, nor has there been any action on the audit policy by the administration.

Stansbury added "The audit policy will probably be changed soon. I would not fight the change."

Doctor Frank Smith, assistant professor of English, a strong advocate for the change of the audit policy, thought that the audit policy was "a real compromise of standards. We're selling the appearance of a student taking a class and getting credit for it. As long as we have the grades of W (Withdrawal) and N (Non-Attendance), we don't need a third grade. Either change the standards, or change the transcript."

Doctor Lockwood pointed out that students who do not attend class should have a grade that reflects that situation, not the audit grade. And, if a student receives a grade that represents attendance when the student has not attended, he said it would be "a terrible travesty."

Originally at Harper, and at many other schools, the audit policy was and is supposed to be used to explore new academic areas. Dr. Smith added "An audit grade has a positive connotation, in that it shows that the student was inquisitive. The W and N grade can have a negative connotation when the student transfers to another college. So, the student says, why not take the H 'audit grade'?"

Doctor Donald Sedik, professor of management, said "The audit policy may have connotations later down the line." He added, "But, we have the alternative N grade. And, we are being more than flexible with it. There is no real need to use the H 'audit grade' when we have the two alternatives of W and N."

Sedik argued "Some students really deserve the option of taking a class on audit. It is unfortunate that some students are abusing it. It hurts the student who is trying to find his academic limitations."

What happened to the intramurals

"Hey, Ron! We are putting together an intramural touch football team. Wanna join?"
"Yeah, what a riot we had last season. Remember when we won tournaments?"

Perhaps it was a dream. Perhaps there wasn't a successful intramural program on the Harper campus at all. Funding for such a program seems the impossible dream of the full semester.

True, an intramural program may not be as vital to the college as knowledgeable instructors, new buildings or roof repairs. But it is important to the development of the student.

Those "weekend afternoon athletes" may not have the time to devote to the team but still enjoy the game. Carrying a full course load puts enough pressure on the student fast alone a rigorous practice and game schedule.

Where else can they enjoy the "human drama of athletic competition" without the added hassles, but the campus intramural program. But, due to an extremely large deficit built up by the college, funding for a proper program and a qualified coordinator cannot be obtained.

Open gym weight rooms and pool time is available but without an expense it is just that an open room lacking any real activity. The attitude of college officials seems to be "throw in a few basketballs and they'll be happy."

That attitude reflects unclear thinking on the part of the administration. With all of $16.4 million facilities finally open, there is a wealth of intramural activity open to the campus community.

Basketball, racquetball, swimming, as well as outdoor sport tournaments, could be arranged. This would not only benefit students by providing them with an organized non-pressured leisure but the college as well. With never having had a pool before, there wasn't an overwhelming demand for a swim team. By having an organized intramural program, interest in not only swimming could be sparked but interest in all Harper athletic teams as well.

Student activity has had any type of intramural program offered on campus. When an interest on the part of the administrators is shown for the intramural program and the financial aid given to the physical as well as academic coordination and enjoyment of the student, it is clear Harper students are just not getting their money's worth.

HARPER'S INTRAMURAL MASCOT

Faculty evaluations - an instructors viewpoint

When the editor of the Harbinger, Wendy Winkeltake, stopped by to ask me to write a student evaluation, my first response was an agitated "here we go again." I'm sure Wendy was rather surprised as I nearly smote her with a barrage of papers. Robert Powell's nationally published study of the effects of evaluation on instruction, the Faculty Evaluation Review Committee's (FERC)'s recommendations on evaluation processes at Harper, along with a rapid fire explication of the history of the FERC position over the years. Just the previous day, Mike Stimus of the Harbinger caught me to ask about student evaluation, and at that time I gave him a list of papers to talk to Bill Foust, Bob Kecke, Bob Powell, Jan Savin, Rose Trank, John Marchure - he got so much longer that I said, "Ask any full time faculty, he'll tell you."

You see, therefore, that student evaluation is something we faculty have long studied, worked on and encouraged. But what Wendy and Mike seemed to be asking was "that form on faculty evaluation we're getting in our classes - is that the best possible way to evaluate teachers?" And aren't some of those questions dumb?

They sure are. But it's important that the students be aware of the history of faculty evaluation at the college, in order to first of all understand the faculty attitude and then secondly, for the faculty to communicate to the students our concerns with instruction.

First of all, the faculty historically have at Harper been under attack for the very qualities that make us good teachers. As many of you know, we have a new administration, well, not so new now, but an administration committed to the institution. The aims of the administration converge with the faculty senate president

aims of the faculty and the students. We're here to teach, they're to administer (which means making learning easier) and the students are here to learn.

But student evaluation in the past was used as a political weapon. The terms then were different, talks about "dumb questions" but were computed and analyzed and then the score was tied to promotions, to salary to retention, in politics. At best, the system made us expose and polarize. At worst, and this is not a new thing to say about our faculty, it made a few of us counterfeits. Robert Powell's nationally published study of student evaluation showed a damning correlation between the grades a teacher donated, and the scores he garnered from his students. It was a bitter realization. Were the "best" of us under the old system of administration and evaluation, only the most shrewd, given the monetary stakes?

But, thank God and a professional faculty, the "best" as it was, was just one to two. The rest of the faculty, charged itself in the FERC studies to devise a system of evaluation by students that addressed the problems. The FERC committee is concerned with students, administrators, and faculty. We determined that the purpose of evaluation, if evaluation is not to be a totally demoralizing, constantly time pressure instruction. A further series of questions then emerged. What is "instruction" is not also the marking of the "why," the "how" the "can't this be done differently?"

Then, after "instruction" is understood, the whole summary range of "improvement" comes into view. For example, I know my students aren't tremendously challenged by or stimulated with or even fond of the grammar and punctuation unit I lost upon them. I admit I don't like dangling participles or playing around with genitives either in most cases. But they have to know it, grammar with its conradic punctuation is a necessary tool. But if students mark on some form or another that "not everything in this course was interesting" or whatever, does that negative score on my evaluation devalue the merit of knowing the basics of the mother tongue? Furthermore, the students have to know grammar, and that body of knowledge cannot be constrained from my curriculum no matter how boring we all agree it to be.

What about questions on the form which deal with the personality of the teacher? Certainly, we all learn best when we sense a caring, committed individual is guiding us. But not all commitments are restricted to the students; the teacher is also committed to the field in which he is teaching. And not all individuals are avuncular or witty or gentle of speech, or mild of manner, or exciting in front of groups. In fact, some individuals get sick or burn out for a week, or find the biannual confrontations with grammar or whatever taxing. And maybe, the individual student and the individual teacher were fated to bore each other to death, which forebode abjects other individuals who find the teacher challenging and the student stimulating. We faculty are not abstract disseminators of knowledge, we are individuals. And the idea of measuring individual characteristics on a standardized form is, you're right, Wendy and Mike, laughable.

I must move on to my conclusion, however. I don't intend to close off discussion of student evaluation of faculty by this session. Faculty are chary of some of the aspects of student evaluation, precisely because we know our individual students. Can a student fairly evaluate the teacher who is flunking him in a course which the student abhors and does not spend any time studying? Can the routine seasonal filling out of standardized forms, ever make those fine distinctions among the large lecture class, the lab, the elective and the remedial? Can students in their first semester of college fully respond to the responsibility of mature evaluation of professionals? Can student evaluations done on an institutional basis ever result in the improving of instruction?

Mixing hobbies with profession asset for Waite

"I didn't grow up knowing I wanted to go into politics. It's not something I've always been aware of," said Molly Waite, associate professor of political science.

In high school, Waite said she was always trying to decide between math and political science. "I chose the field I'm in because I thought it was the more interesting of the two. It always has changing events. I thought numbers would get dry."

An influencing factor that might have swayed her decision could have been her background. Waite grew up in an international state because the United Nations and the International Trade Center. Her uncle traveled around and made documentaries. And Waite herself went to Indonesia between her junior and senior years in high school, as a foreign exchange student.

"I stayed with an Indonesian family for three months. I learned the language as well as I could. I gave talks to Rotary clubs. I even met the president at that time, Sukarno, who was a very important leader."

Waite said. "I think it's a unique experience being exposed to foreign affairs and attitudes."

All these factors, she thinks, exposed her to different parts of the world and different

feature

But Waite believes it's hard for students here at Harper to deal with global or foreign and comparative politics as she does. "We're in the Midwest and we're not exposed to them a great deal," she said. "We don't have immediate contact with people from foreign countries. Students don't have a lot of background in this field."

Waite thinks getting students involved in outside activities would help though.

The Model United Nations held in New York every year is one way. "The Model UN really gives people a chance to emerge themselves in different to a foreign environment to see and feel international problems from a different perspective."

"In the Model UN, the students have to negotiate and bargain. They have to maintain their country's point of view. They have to know the issues. It's a total emergence experience."

Another activity would be the model Illinois Government which is held in Springfield.

"Here, students represent legislative districts. They have to act as Democrats or Republicans. They prepare and research certain issues like nuclear power or ERA. They learn about the issues then wheel and deal to get them passed. The issues help the students get involved in what the state is doing."

"It's a real challenge to give people the experience through the Model UN and Model Illinois government," Waite explained.

Political science is good preparation for many careers such as business, law or journalism according to Waite. "It can be important to set a context, but if one majors in political science, they should minor in law or some field they can combine it with," she said.

In her spare time, Waite likes to play tennis, ski cross country and travel.

She enjoys combining travel with her career. "Political science is so interesting to teach. You can see it in action and you can get involved. No matter where you are, you have an interest that's pertinent to what you're doing. You have a chance to increase your knowledge with each new place. So whether you stay put or travel, you can get involved in politics."

"Everything is relative. I like to travel yet fit in with what I teach."

Hawn superb as "Private"

by HOLLY KUTLER

What happens to a young woman who, after 25 years of living in princess shoes, has suddenly found herself "eye to eye" with the real world? Crowned at birth "Judy Benjamin, Goldie Hawn, she was bathed each day in money, pampered with the finest of things and was crowned in love—or was she?"

Always under somebody else's wing, she remained naive to everything beyond the front door and so thought it was only normal that everyone else did as Judy did. On the wedding night of her second marriage, her guardian angel slipped from the picture, with the heart attack of her husband. Never being trained in anything, and not making the same mistake of moving back in with her parents again, what's a girl to do?

Why not join the army? After all, it has yachts, condominiums and all of this plush living, and you even get paid for it. Those were the reassuring words of the army recruiting officer, and who better to trust?

When arriving at the base, she was nearly suffocated with military impressionism. Not taking much of a liking to the make-up Judy from her high heels to the red-painted fingernails, Captain Lewis Eileen Brennan's wince-cut on the base with her first assignment: to scrub the bathroom floor, using her toothbrush electric of course.

Film review

Goldie superb in her role, made a beautiful transition from "princess" to an "incredibly dedicated worker." Through the torment of military life, Judy's royal-like character was able to shed its skin to a stronger and more capable individual. While at a night spot with her soldier girlfriends, Judy's heart was immediately captured by a handsome French gentleman. When time came for actual assignments to be handed out, she "requested" to be flown to Paris where she may pursue her military work and more importantly, try to pursue the relationship with her French friend.

Judy ends up getting entangled with some messy situations in her boyfriend's company. From meeting up with Captain Lewis, who has been intimately spying on them, to cleaning up his dog's accident, to dying her hair bright red, she has turned Cinderella to his every whimsical desire. When talk of marriage enters the scene, and before any such plans are cemented, he insists that she sign a special document. The document, which he must first translate (as it was written in French), outlines that if the marriage were to ever dissolve, Judy would not be entitled to half of his possessions, including the magnificent home of which has been in the family for several generations. Heintently, but willingly all the same, she signs.

Goldie Hawn and Eileen Brennan take the audience by storm. Eileen Brennan's gutsy Captain Lewis carries her viewers until that moment when she delivers that very last line.

A story from riches to rags? Not really, but a tale of riches to rags, and riches to riches. Judy, by route of the military life, became a stronger and more intellectual individual. This movie not only gives the audience quite a few laughs, but a worthwhile message as well.

Harbinger rates first class, NSPA/ACD

by WENDY WINKELBAKER
The Harbinger received a first class rating for its coverage of campus events last spring.

The award, given by the National Scholastic Press Assn. and the Associated Collegiate Press, rated the paper as excellent in its sports coverage and music reviews.

In competition with other junior-college publishing weekly, the Harbinger was awarded three marks of distinction. These marks were given for editorial leadership and opinion features, physical appearance and visual communication and photography art and the use of graphics.

"With few exceptions, the paper is pleasing to the eye and easy to read. There is a wide range of topics which are or should be of concern to college students," said Sue Murray, contest judge. "The paper has excellent action photos, especially on the sports page."

Revelations from the radio conference

Just a bunch of ads and ends picked up last weekend at the Loyola National Radio Conference, which I attended with WHCM. Oh, for those of you who don't know, I have my fingers in every pie here at Harper. In addition to lazily writing this column, I pick the music at WHCM. They call me the music director, and sometimes, the music dictator. Anyway, some rambling on the business of radio.

One great bit of advice came tumbling from the lips of WLUF's station manager, regarding the broadcast field "learn to not shit with a sledge on your face." The room was pretty quiet upon the utterance of these words, so perhaps a few dreams were shattered. At the session featuring John Landecker and Mitch Michaels, I noticed budding air personalities regarding the scene with "gee, real deejays" smiles. I hope they weren't too disillusioned by the crusty messages put forth by most of the speakers at the other sessions, that radio is a business with huge jaws. It likes to eat people. Sooner or later, sapient techno-brains reach the suitable level of cynicism for dealing with this situation. Some of us bit it real soon.

I was really losing faith, along with everyone else. What do I see the aggravation of the radio business for? I react, jeez. I'm only a vinyl junkie. I got excited about the music itself, and since pieces, even new treatments of old songs. I don't care about advertising or marketing. Give me a set of headphones and cut the ropes! Lift off!

Yeah, I was losing faith, until the session featuring Bob Geims of WKRT. This guy spoke in a language that any music addict's case could understand. The topic was "how to run a music department."

Naturally, I was fascinated with WKRT's system for dealing with new music. I had always wondered how they in a liberal their progressiveness, but keep within a format. It is a delicate process; their deejays must be musically aware, down to the smallest genre. The jacks program their own shows, but follow a loose set of guidelines. A lot of it depends on the time of day. The morning man will rely more on mellow things like Steely Dan, or Traffic, while the night people explore the other side of music, the one that might even become scary.

Anyway, I feel better. Here was Bob Geims, enjoying the radio business. And, yes, he too, is a vinyl junkie. I thought I was looking in a mirror. Basic stuff. His lifeblood is the music. Surely there must be more in the air for one more waiting information booth.

Probably not, though. In the whole country, there are only a few "WKRT's" left. The creativity involved with programming has been drained away. The population is happy to wallow in the pre-programmed and impersonal semblances of radio created by almost every AOR station.

College radio is widely accepted as the alternative. A major task of almost all college stations is the feeding of new artists, that would never pick up airplay anywhere else. Lip in the pool room, when the TV isn't too loud, you can hear WHCM. If you unraveled the music from the culture and drama blaring from the tube, you'll hear artists with names like Nuclear Lovers, Sector 27, Flash & the Pan, Ultravox, and The Normal, etc., along with the already "great" groups prescribed to everyone by the station they tune in to home.

OK, pull that snotbox out from under my seat. I get really stupid. Loyola was great fun, only one person blew show, so one fell down the stairs, and we even learned about radio. Next week, I'll retrace the record reviewing job.

American students shortchanged on education

I'm mad and that's a fact. I found out that I've been cheated. My education has not been what it should have been.

When I was in high school, my high school had prided itself on the basis that it provided a "good education." When I was in grammar school, my grammar school had prided itself on the basis that it provided "the very best in education, today." So, you ask, why do I feel cheated?

After talking with students from other schools, and other districts, it seems as though we come from different countries. Where the other students had taught classes on English grammar and literature, I did not where I had tough classes in mathematics and science, the others did not.

Well, the fact is, we all graduated from American high schools and have been certified with diplomas. And yet, we received very different educations. I have sat in classrooms and teachers have asked if we knew such and such, and only a few would raise their hands. There is no uniformity, amongst us students. It seems as though that we have not been taught from our grammar and high schools, something we should have been taught.

Many teachers at Harper have said to me, "So many students come to college 'functionally illiterate.' Some have never read a classic literary masterpiece. Times have changed, and I'm not sure if it's for the better."

How is it possible to be in college without a good command of the English language? How is it possible to be in college without a command of mathematics and science? Recently, an instructor at the University of Colorado had to give his students a course in basic geography, because "students could not show where the different continents on the globe are. And students could not show where each state was in relation to another." These are the states of America.

After speaking with our newspaper advisor, Douglas Pirouette, I have found out that I've never had a good, rigorous class on grammar. I do not know how to diagram sentences. I don't know where to begin. I was in a "college prep program" at my high school, and I did pretty well.

I can only imagine the problems of some of my fellow students. I am not saying that I'm a good writer, it's apparent I still need a good deal of work, but so many students suffer from bad grammar.

I don't know where to attack my previous education. It makes me mad to think that I've been ripped off. Especially now, because in order for me to write effectively and achieve good grades from college instructors, I've got to play "catch-up." And that's my fault. It is the fault of the educational system that was supposed to give me a "good education."

Harper's "Charley's Aunt" a well-done production

by HOLLY KUTLER
Television had its "Maude" musical productions, it's "Auntie Mame," and now Harper College Studio Theatre presents "Charley's Aunt," a well-written, fast-paced comedy about two Oxford boys, Charley and Jack, who resort to underhanded antics in order to secure their relationships with the girls they've been courting.
And how do they propose to do this? Charley's aunt is the only one who holds the combination to these two hearts, and it seems another heart as well. Sir Francis Chesney. It's hardly her transmittable charm, but rather the unmistakable wealth and status she possesses which carries that slightly magnetic force. Her mere presence is also indispensable, as it is expected that she will act as a chaperone to the boys during their amorous escapades. But this plan collapses in mid air when a telegram arrives informing the boys of her delay. Thinking fast on their feet, they literally corner Babberly in college of theirs into posing as Charley's aunt. As the show unravels, Babberly now disguised as Charley's aunt, gets himself deeper and deeper into trouble and has caught himself in an enormous web of lies.

Drama Review

The great frenzy generated by Babberly, has been artistically created by Robert Dorn, who was perfectly cast in the role. Equally matched in strength, is Bill Kelly's portrayal of Jack Chesney, who's gesture, expressions and complete mastering of the English dialect are the theatrical ingredients for a fine performance.

The straight part in comedies aren't to be overlooked to them lies the difficulty of adding variety to the consistency of their character. Scott Mullen (Charley Wykeham) has definitely succeeded in putting out his best in each scene, as opposed to simply "blending in." And Laurie Ann Turpin, cast as Kitty Verden, had total control of her character and just the precise accent which her role demanded.

Mary Jo Willis, faculty director of the studio theater, chose just the right people for this company and just the right staging to complement that company. People who worked on the set should also be complemented for the ever-glowing elegance and charm which dominated the stage.

Drop by on "Charley's Aunt" for a game of "who's who?" and an evening of laughter. The last two performances will be given in 8 p.m. and ticket arrangements may be made by stopping by the student activities office, 813 A33.

The very best of Fall 1980

The fall season is now officially over. And, with the closing of a season and beginning of a new one, this column will dedicate itself to the best of Fall 1980.

Mike Bambach

...on sports

The final record for the team sports (women's tennis, women's volleyball, soccer, and football) was a decent 22-23-4. No team was much an outstanding success, but each sport had its moment in spotlight. And this will, I hope, be the spotlight.

Best game - Easy choice: the football team's 24-29 upset win over Triton. The Hawks led all half-time, 28-0, but the Trojans scored a field goal and a touchdown in the third quarter to take a 28-28 lead into the final period. Then, with under six minutes to play, Ron Burke, who had missed much of the second quarter and all of the third period with an injured shoulder, scored on a 19-yard TD run to give the Hawks a 34-29 win over Triton. The Trojans went on to win the state title with a 17-13 win over Illinois Valley.

Runner-up was the soccer team's 1-2½ shellacking of Lincoln. Six different Hawks - Mark Pietro, Andy Bolowaki, John Prell, Mike Purich, Mark Mota, and Rick Puls - scored in the game. Coach Sandro Stalbo pulled out much of the first string in the first half, after the Hawks had taken an 4-0 lead.

Best performance, one game - Very tough choice. Ron Burke rushed for 145 yards against Illinois Valley - the No. 1 team against the rush last year - but the Hawks lost to the Apaches, 47-14. Rick Puls notched three goals against Lincoln in the Hawks 12-2 win, but Tom Placek's fourth-place finish in the Oakland Invite. Placek completed the 4.5-mile course in under 27 minutes - his best time of the year.

Best performance, season - without a doubt, Ron Burke's single-season rushing record of 667 yards, his six consecutive 100-yard rushing games, and his seven TD's, which put him in a fifth-place tie on Harper's all-time scoring list, gives Burke the nod for the best performance of the season.

Don't forget, though, soccer goalie Steve Todd, defender Frank Binnett, forward Rick Puls - all made All-State.

In cross-country, Tom Placek and Bill Bingham made All-NAC and All-State honors. They both reached the NUCAA cross country meet.

Jacques Anderson and Pam Meyer anchored the women's tennis team, and both will be returning next year. Both narrowly missed all-conference honors.

In golf, Brian Dunmer and Mike Hagen, made the state golf meet. Both earned All-NAC honors.

Biggest improvement - No problem here, either. The choice is easy - quarterback Tim Tyrrell. Tyrrell took over as starter after the Hawk's second game and, after a sluggish start, led the football team in four wins in their last four games. His best game was the football team's 34-29 upset over Triton. Tyrrell passed for more than 300 yards and rushed for 110 yards more.

The next thing about Tyrrell is the fact that he is a freshman. He'll be back next year, with Ron Burke. And you can bet they'll finish better than this year's 4-4 record.

Biggest improvement, team - A lot of teams improved. The football team went from 2-7 in 1979 to 4-5 this year. The Hawks got off to a 4-0 start, and it looked as if they wouldn't win a game. They finished with 2-6, 2-4, 2-2, and 2-14 wins over rival, North Park, Triton, and Wright, again. It is interesting to note that the football team scored at least 30 points in each of their four wins and no more than 20 points in their five losses.

The volleyball team improved 100%, from one win in 1979 to two wins in 1980. That may sound mean, but the women's record doesn't indicate how much they had really improved. Most of the team was made up of freshmen - there were also only 10 players in the team. The soccer team also made some progress - from an 11-4 record in '79 to 11-1-5 in '80 - but the team didn't go anywhere in the post-season playoffs, which makes their season a bit of a disappointment. In two years, though, the team has a 23-5-4 record. You can't

Frosh, football program on the rise

by JOE KOST
With the successful ending of the football season that the Hawks had, one would have to be crazy not to be saying, "Just wait till next year!"

The past season was won by experience. The other teams had it and we had none. Well, we had some but nowhere near as much as the other school's did.

Last year, Harper had to returning sophomores from the previous season. Next year Harper has the chance to field 41 sophomores, that is if they decide to return. And why shouldn't they?

Working together they've got more talent than most of the other teams they played. If they come back, worried all it wanted to win has enough and went out and executed things properly, the result could be a possible conference championship.

At the quarterback spot, Tim Tyrrell, Scott Choklad and Dave Lock will all be threats to improve defenses. Each possesses certain outstanding qualities.

If Coach Dudley manages to stay healthy for next season, he'll be giving Tyrrell a real amount of competition to go against.

Ron Burke, the team's record breaker for the past season by rushing for 667 yards and five consecutive 100 yard games, will also be returning for another season of action.

Burke came out of Fremd High School where he had several records that probably won't be broken for some time. Burke will give the team the speed on the outside once again and will hopefully carry on his position of making big plays.

Also returning to the running positions will be Chris Samf, Mark Dahle, and Bob Blyss.

Saint was a powerhouse for the Hawks last season. He came in the games when Burke was injured or when Harper needed someone to take the hard shots and then doing it again.

Saint was hurt in the Triton game and sat out of the final contest against Wright.

Mark Thibie is another exceptional runner that the Hawks will be using a lot next season.

Dahle started showing his running talents toward the end of the season in games against Wright, Triton and North Park.

Dahle will give Harper the fullback talent that it will be lacking with Jim Vaccarello.

Blyss displayed more talent as a passer than a powerful runner and he will be adding depth to the Hawks next season when they run their backs out for short passes.

Defensive backs that could possibly return for next season would be Mickey Davis, Thomas Jenkin, Kevin Murray, Maurice Thigpen, Dan Groce, Brian Sander, Dave Lanford, and Shawn Doran.

Harper's defensive backfield started to get tough in their final games and shows great potential for next year.

Harper's linemen won the real battles in the Harper victories and a great majority of these unknown heroes will be returning for next season. Randy Brown, Dan Foley, Dan Tobin, Reggie Sitas, Jim Murawski, Pat Groce, Dan Schiewer, Dan Baker, Jim Wright, Brad Pilgard, will all be helping the Harper cause next season.

The Hawks will really be suffering in the linebacker position come next season. Harper has good talent returning but the problem is the quantity of the talent.

Jeff Anderson, Dennis Kraus and Todd Maronde are the only returning linebackers the Hawks will have to work with.

The Hawks will be getting five returning receivers from the past season and not very had ones at that.

Mark Hudson led the team in yards and reception last year and was selected to the All-State squad in his senior year of high school.

Along with Hudson will be Brent Slinkard and John Sullivan. Both possess enough talent between the two to give Harper the big play winner they'll need it.

Roger Barton and Ron Dudley will also be returning to the squad next season.

Tyrrell a success

by JOE KOEST
Three players have been seeking the starting position of quarterback this season and so far, only one player has managed that position more than once in all of Harper's games.

Tim Tyrrell has been that player during the past season.

Along with Tyrrell, Dave Loch and Scott Choklat have been the other two players that have been looking at the quarterback position with eager eyes.

"I think Tim is the very fine runner and that is what he should play next year because I'm going to play quarterback," stated Dave Loch concerning Tyrrell's talent.

Tyrrell started the season out at the running back position and that is as good an explanation as any as to why Tyrrell was the second leading ground gainer for the Hawks this year.

Tyrrell played running back for Cozart High School in his junior year. In his senior year, Tyrrell suffered a knee injury in the first practice of the season and was forced to sit out all the sidelines.

Tyrrell came to Harper to play the tail back position for the past season, however a loss at the quarterback spot gave Tyrrell a shot at the job.

Dave Loch started out in the starting position but lost it to Choklat. Choklat lost the job to Tyrrell after he suffered a knee injury in the second game of the season.

Since then, Tyrrell has been the top performer for the Hawks and has been constantly improving.

"I think that I took me some time to understand the position and the different types of talents needed to do the job," stated Tyrrell concerning his playing ability. "But now that I understand it better, I think that I'll be a lot better next season."

Against Triton, Tyrrell played one of his best all-round games by combining his running and passing talents to gain 215 yards and score 18 points.

"Tim has great potential and I think that if he works on those more over the off season, there'll be a fine quarterback next season," stated Coach John Elias.

Dave Loch of Arlington High School played the position of quarterback in the last seven games of his senior year. Before that, Loch was a star at the defensive-back position.

"Dave is a fine quarterback but he never had a chance to prove how good he really is unlike myself," stated Scott Choklat dealing with Loch's ability.

At Arlington Loch passed for 80 yards and ran for another 70 yards. He was selected to the All-Conference team and the All Area team in his senior year.

"This past football season at Harper wasn't the best for Loch. Dave didn't set any Harper records at the quarterback position but he showed great promise as a hard running fullback.

Dave also may have found a new position as the team's place kicker. In a game against the Wright Rams, Dave Loch added a points to the Harper score column and also hit for a 30 yard field goal in the game, a rather long and accurate kick for a back-up quarterback.

The other back-up quarter

by MIKE BAMBACH
When the swim team opens their 1980-81 season Saturday at home against Lincoln, it could mark the beginning of the best first-year team in Harper history.

The first-year program, headed by coach Steve Eul, has all the ingredients for success—a facility and lots of talent. Of the 22 swimmers (13 men, nine women), 18 are from Mid-Suburban schools: Arlington and Schaumburg (finished eighth and ninth respectively in the IBSA swim meet last year). Three Harper swimmers are from either Arlington or Schaumburg.

"We have a real strong program," said Eul, who will double as both the men's and women's coach. "This area tends to be a hotbed for swimming. All the swimmers who have come here have had excellent training and coaching."

There are four basic strokes in swimming—free, breast, fly and back. Swimmers will specialize in as many as two. Some are being converted to divers.

Here's a breakdown, by event, of the 1980-81 swim team.

300 medley relay—Eul calls Todd Muszell his premier "Breastroker." He's the only one "I've got." Muszell, of Schaumburg will join Jim Pingry (fly) and Dave Maday (back) in this event.

Sprinters—Mark Waks and Mark Gough are Eul's leading 50-yard men. Gough is also from Schaumburg.

Distance—Mike Sheridan will handle the 500, 1,000, and 1,500-yard events for Eul. He's an excellent distance man," says Eul.

Fly—Eul calls Mike Soja, John Doyte and Mike Zwerzki "excellent." Soja, from Grove, will also handle the 300 individual Medley chores with Soja and Pingry.

Backstroke—Gough and Maday are good. "They can only get a lot better," says Eul.

500 Medley Relay—Watch out. "I think we're going to have a terrific relay team," says Eul. "I hope to take this team to nationals." That's a mouthful for the usually soft-spoken Eul. Soja, Zwerzki and Sheridan are usually the best relay team in the state.

WOMEN
"The women that I have are very good," says Eul. "But I don't have enough of them. I need three or four more swimmers."

Sprinters—Donna Ammen, Terri Westdale, Pam McEachern will handle the 50, 100, and 200-yard events for Eul. Westdale, Ammen and McEachern, who is probably Eul's most versatile swimmer, will also be on the 600 medley relay team.

Distance—Dana Odum and Donna Gavell will handle the 500, 1,000 and 1,500-yard events. Gavell will join McEachern, Anne and Westdale on the 400 relay team. McEachern will also be doing some distances and even a little diving.

Backstroke—Marcy Locksha and Audrie Hauerst will double as backstrokers and 200'ers.

Outlook—Eul is soft spoken, but he is most soft-spoken when talking about the women's team. "They're coming along," he says. "I don't know what to expect. I need more bodies."

As for the men, Eul need not be soft-spoken, although he remains guardedly optimistic. "I have to say that they'll win all of them, but I wouldn't be surprised. I'm very high on them. We are very strong and fairly deep."

Doph is surely going to catch up to the women, although the gaps should go far strictly on talent. The men won't be as susceptible to the lack of depth. And if they have talent everywhere, if they have a weakness, Eul hasn't yet found it. The Hawks, in their first season, could win a national championship. Don't count on it, but don't count it out. But do expect the Hawks to win the state and advance some individuals to the national meet.

Fast-break key for 1980 basketball Hawks

by MIKE BAMBACH
If Arvin Gilmore ever wants to start his basketball career over, Harper coach Ripper Bechtold would more than appreciate his services.

As was the case in 1979 and in years past, the Hawks are again lacking a big man that can dominate the center spot. To alleviate some pressure on his short-circuiting Bechtold's team will run, and run, and run.

Also missing from last year's scene is guard Tim Logis, who was probably the best guard Bechtold has coached at Harper. He set the single-season and single game records for assists, and was a second-team All-State choice.

"It's very difficult to replace a player of Tim Logis' caliber," says Bechtold. "He was a leader on the court. That's something every winning team has to have."

Bechtold, who was a team-mate of Walt Frazer's on Southern Illinois' NIT basketball championship in 1967, will be starting two freshmen at the forward spots, and another at point guard.

The 1980-81 Hawks will play much of the style they did last season—fast-break offenses, and a collapseable zone defense to key on opposing big men.

Here is a breakdown, by position, of the 1980-81 Hawks:

Guard—Kevin Murray, 6-foot-2 guard from Barrington, will start at the point. He is an excellent shooter and works hard defensively. He needs to improve in that area and he's making an effort to improve.

Forward—Dave Strawn, a senior from last year's 6-8 (10-13) team, will start at the other guard spot. He's tenacious, aggressive, he gives the cliché intercept.

Patrick Murray and Strawn for starting roles are Mark Muncion, Sally Lewis, and Jerold Lewis. "We may not have guards with Logis' caliber," says Bechtold, "but well enough," Reynolds says. That problem has since been alleviated with the addition of locks on each of the three courts.

Right now, Reynolds is playing out the year, so to speak, hoping that the intramural coordinator will become a full-time position next fall. "They do need to hire somebody to run the intramural program," he says.

"I think it's great for everybody. Seventy-five percent of student activities goes back to the students in the form of supervising salaries for," Reynolds adds.

Fast-break key to Hawks '0'

we have better balance at that position."

Bechtold calls Monckton his best defensive player who runs the offense very well. Leuzli's shooting ability gives Bechtold the luxury of using the 6-1 sophomore primarily against zone defenses.

Forwards — Freshman Tim Murray and freshman Greg Meyer will start at the forward spots. Bechtold calls Murray "A very complete basketball player. He plays all facets of the game very well. He's experienced and anticipates well on defense. I think he's going to be a setting influence on our team."

Of Meyer, Bechtold says, "He's very fundamental as far as defense and rebounding. He's also a good passer." Right behind Meyer and Murray is 6-2, sophomore Fernando Goss.

"He's an outstanding player. He can play good offense and defense. He's the type that can generate the quick offense similar to what Logan did. The fast-break style fits him well."

Center — Where are Artie's Goss will start at center, but will probably be replaced eventually by 6-3 sophomore Demetrius Gaines. Gaines can jump and has the board strength Bechtold will need to ignite the fast break.

"After D's been with us a little longer and learns the plays, he's got a good shot to start," says Bechtold.

Also at center is 6-4 freshman Keith Miller. "He's a player that needs more development, but he has the raw material to become a good player," says Bechtold.

Mike Bayless, a returner from last year would be pushing for a starting role. The 6-3 sophomore is scintillating, however.

Outlook — The talent and quickness and team speed are there. How far the Hawks can go without a big man to combat the 6-4 or 6-10 centers of their NAC opponents has yet to be seen. The Hawks will be forced to collapse, much like the style of defense NBA teams use to stop the Bulls Gilmore. The key is rebounding. Unless the Hawks can pull down some rebounds they won't be able to get their fast-break offenses untracked, which could spell trouble. Speed and overall shooting ability, are the Hawks' strengths.

While rebounding is, as Bechtold says, an "unknown," the Hawks' inside defense is also questionable. Of the five players who Bechtold will start in Harper's opener against Outfit Saturday, only Goss is taller than 6-2. The Hawks will need development from Miller and Gaines at the center spot to free-up Goss to play forward.

"The depth at guard and forward is tremendous. The balance at guard is better than last season. It's hard to say over the long run," says Bechtold. "Who's going to be the better guards?"

The big three we watch out for in conference play are Trilux, Illinois Valley and Joliet. The Hawks beat JV twice last season, lost to Trilux twice last year, lost to Joliet twice last season.

"I feel we're going to be competitive," says Bechtold. "Going in I feel positive. It all depends on the strength of the other teams in the NAC."

The Hawks are good enough now to win nine, 10, maybe 11 games. And if they can stop opposing big men, anything can happen. How, if they only had Gilmore.

WALLY REYNOLDS — "I think the school needs a commitment to the intramural program. They need to hire a full-time intramural coordinator."

Tyrrell a success

back on the Hawks squad was the only passer on the squad that played the position before in high school. And it shows!

"I have to say that Scott is probably the best man for throwing the ball on the squad but, thanks to injuries, I'll probably start again next season," commented Tim Tyrrell on Choklad.

Choklad attended Jacobs High School and was named to the All-Conference squad five quarters back talents. He was also named to the All-Area squad for his ability at the defensive back position.

Choklad threw for some 1,300 yards in his senior year, nearly 800 of those yards went to his All-State wide receiver Mark Hudson, who also played at Harper for the past season. Choklad took Jacobs to the quarter finals in the state playoffs before they were eliminated.

Choklad played only 1/4 games of the season before he was sidelined for good with a damaged knee. But in that time Scott Choklad chalked up some pretty impressive marks. Choklad went 16 or 32 attempts for 216 yards, two touchdowns, and only one interception.

Choklad has one big edge over both Tyrrell and Loch and that is that Choklad has played the position before. That means that he's no stranger to the spot and one other thing, he likes to throw the ball a lot.

Tyrrell and Loch both like to run a lot but Choklad will just sit in the pocket and wait for his receivers to open up the field.

Next season, Scott Elliott will have three different talents to choose from.

One, Tim Tyrrell with his swift fast speed and occasional accurate passes.

Two, Dave Loch with his hard running up the middle and extremely good kicking talents.

Three, Scott Choklad with his patience to sit in the pocket to wait for his receivers and the big plays.

With experience and choices like that, the Harper Hawks will be flowing over with talent in a position that usually hurts them this year.

Best of 1980

be too hard if you have more ties than losses.

Coach of the year — This is the toughest choice. The easy way out would be to pick the coach that had the best record of Fall '80. That, indeed, wouldn't be difficult. Another way would be to pick the coach whose team made the biggest improvement over the last year. Again, that would be fairly easy.

Soccer coach Sander Saabo was a natural pick last year, when he took his first-year team to the state finals and the NJCAA Midwest Regional. This year, the Hawks had a better regular season record, 31-6-5 — but the Hawk didn't get out of the state playoffs.

Football coach John Ethank gets the nod on the best improvement of his team in one season. The Hawks started slow, as you might expect of a freshman-oriented team, but they came back to win their last four games.

Martha Boll's tennis team was ninth in the nation last year. And, although her women weren't near that mark this year, Boll did a great job. She took another freshman-oriented team and took it to a credible 4-4 record. Most of those freshman will be returning next year, giving Boll a lot to look forward to.

Lynn Hitchcock didn't take over as women's volleyball coach until the summer. I suspect her team would've been much better records-wise had Hitchcock gotten the job last spring. Another freshman-oriented team the women finished with two wins — one better than last season. But, again, the team was better than their record indicates. Hitchcock has a lot to look forward to in 1981.

Joe Vitlan has turned out three All-American nominees in two years. This year the cross-country coach had the pleasure of tutoring Tom Placek and Bill Hugham. Last year it was Todd Martin.

Next year? Only Vitlan knows that.

Gary Glasser took the golf team to a fourth-place finish in the NAC and turned out two All-NAC players—Brian Dunlap and Mike Hagen.

When the season of Fall 1980 is looked back upon, it won't be remembered as a vintage year. But it sure had its moments.

Tutoring center: an aid in elevating grades

by HOLLY KUTLER
Tutoring, "who needs it?" Every student at Harper College is entitled to this free service from people who are flooded with "Ps" on exams to "C's" achievers who aren't satisfied with their grade.

The tutoring center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday. Those are the times in which the learning lab is officially opened, although hours vary according with the tutor's individual schedule.

Tutoring is offered in virtually every course (about 60), with popularity rating the courses to be offered. If enough requests are made for a specific subject, then it probably won't be long before a tutor can be hired in that area. Students are asked to call ext. 539 to reserve time with a tutor.

Free tutoring may be taken away if students fail to comply with the cancellation policy making it to each scheduled appointment, unless canceled at least four hours prior to a lesson. Exceptions are made for illness or other problems.

The first session runs a full hour, while all lessons thereafter run a half hour. A student may only be helped a half hour per week in each subject being tutored. There are special circumstances, if first discussed and observed with the tutor and the person being tutored, where a student may "sit in" on another student's lesson. More than three students wishing to "sit in" on the same session must first bring up the matter with Mrs. O'Donnell, the tutoring coordinator.

In drawing a general classification for these students utilizing the service, both the tutors and Mrs. O'Donnell were directly approached, only to discover that "general" was inappropriate because there is a definite variety of people who get tutored. Mrs. O'Donnell had categorized the students into four major groups:

- young adults (generally low achievers) going to college directly from high school;
- older students (people who are coming back to school, and have a difficult time adjusting to the new environment from how it was 25 years ago);
- returning women (high achievers, but need to build up their confidence);
- foreign students (whose native language isn't English, and as a result, experience a "culture shock").

Bob Brandt (biology tutor) said from his experience, students who use the center "aren't really people with learning problems at all, but rather need their confidence built up; in fact, the irony in tutoring is that all I ever do is re-explain the student's notes to him, the notes that he himself took in class." Brandt added, "I just want people to realize that we're not in fact tall because we tutor, but are peers, and students, just like them and we'd like to see them do well."

Students who qualify to be tutors must have received an "A" at Harper in that course, or have obtained at least a "B+" from another college. The transcript or proof of having taken the course must be submitted directly to the tutoring center along with an application. A degree in a particular field also qualifies a person for consideration.

Payment for tutors is distributed on the basis of experience. Also required for a result, experience a "culture shock".

Bob Brandt (biology tutor) said from his experience, students who use the center "aren't really people with learning problems at all, but rather need their confidence built up; in fact, the irony in tutoring is that all I ever do is re-explain the student's notes to him, the notes that he himself took in class." Brandt added, "I just want people to realize that we're not in fact tall because we tutor, but are peers, and students, just like them and we'd like to see them do well."

Students who qualify to be techniques employed by the tutors." Mrs. O'Donnell pointed out that it is highly advisable that the tutor obtain a copy of the syllabus from the instructor teaching that course. This way the tutor may prepare in advance for the student's upcoming meeting. Brandt concludes that professors will occasionally ask that the tutor introduce himself to his classes, as this personal touch seems to really sway former "lookers" to the class.

Once hired, tutors are required to go through a formal eight-hour training program, for which they will get paid. Tutors will learn the importance of eye-to-eye contact, learn to examine the exact nature of their problem, approach it on whatever level with which the student can easily identify, be made aware of any symptoms indicative of a learning disability problem, and can then be referred over to professional people trained in that area. ## Anderson rep. denied, Bush ushered in

by WENDY WINKELSHAK

A Harper College student hoping to have a representative of presidential hopeful John Anderson speak on campus was turned down despite the fact that arrangements had already been made for a representative of the Reagan-Bush campaign to appear on campus.

Student Dennis Gravel sought approval from Jeanne Pankasin, director of student activities, to have the representative address Harper students. According to Gravel, Pankasin turned down his request on the grounds that Harper is a conservative school.

"She told me the school wouldn't sponsor a speaker because it was a conservative school," Gravel said.

According to Molly Waite, political science instructor, Gravel's request was denied, apparently at the same time Pankasin was making arrangements to have a representative of the Reagan-Bush campaign speak on campus.

Pankasin denied Gravel's claim and cited the college is conservative in its views. However, Pankasin cannot recall any authorization.

"I don't even remember the student. I would have told him the same as I would have told anyone the guidelines the college has concerning political campaigning," Pankasin said.

"I can say he is not right," Gravel said. "I would have wanted him on campus." An apparent misunderstanding came between Pankasin and Gravel concerning the group sponsoring the speaker. "Supposedly, WHCM (the campus radio station) was going to sponsor. Any political candidate has to have a sponsor," said Pankasin.

"When I said it should be sponsored by a club, I meant those listed in the guidelines specifically a club not receiving a large chunk of student activity dollars. WHCM is not a club. It is an organization."

Gravel denied WHCM was sponsoring the group. "The thing was WHCM was not going to sponsor it. They were going to help out - get microphones and speakers - not officially sponsor it," Gravel said.

"Although she does not recall the incident, Pankasin feels that, acting in her normal capacity, she would have given Gravel a list of campus groups eligible to sponsor a speaker. "I would have given him a list of clubs and advisors. I don't recall the incident," Pankasin said.

"Gravel never received a list or suggestion as to where he could find a sponsor. "I never got anything," he said.

Joe Bush, son of vice-president elect George Bush, addressed a Harper audience Oct. 24. According to Pankasin, the Political Science Club sponsored his appearance. Waite, political science club advisor, said that the group did not initiate Bush's appearance.

"I am not sure exactly how it was arranged. Jeanne Pankasin seemed to arrange it. Maybe they used our name but she arranged it. It was a kind of last minute thing," Waite said.

Pankasin said the referred Reagan/Bush campaign officials to the club after they made a request to have a speaker on campus.

"They sponsored the program. When someone wants to sponsor something, a mass political forum, anything, I refer them to the appropriate club. I contacted the political science club," Pankasin said.

Harper policy is that any political speaker appearing on campus must have a sponsor. Any outside groups sponsoring a candidate must pay the college a rental fee for the use of space. Any students wishing to sponsor a candidate must find an on-campus group to sponsor the event.

Editorial No signed contract, concert cancelled

Yes, that's right. There was a major concert scheduled Friday evening. While they have been doing an outstanding job with other concerts, films and lectures, the Program Board missed the boat on this one.

Everything for the "Survivor" concert was set; security was alerted, an ample amount of space was reserved and tickets for the performance were on sale. The only thing lacking was a signed contract. Thus, when the band reported that they would be long up in the recording studio and could not leave the equipment, the Program Board was left holding the bag.

It is not the fault of the board that producers forced the band to break the scheduled concert, but if there had been a signed contract the band would have been responsible for the booking regardless. Whether the contract went unsigned because it was lost in the mail or it was simply an oversight of the party involved, it cost Harper. The student interest and "name" band that it has been lacking over the past few semesters. Up until now, the Program Board has done an outstanding job. Current films and concerts appealing to a wide variety of interests have been scheduled. And there has been an overwhelming supply of one-theatrum fans.

Perhaps the key to the success experienced of the board so far has been this enthusiasm and desire to appeal to a wide variety of student interests. Films that guarantee a laugh, films that guarantee a tear and humorous "talk" shows have kept the interest of most students.

But there will always be the demand for "a band with a name." Any college will schedule classical guitarists, flutes and viola players but how much of this will the average rock crazed college student take?

Obviously, the only way to quiet the clamor for a "name" band is to schedule one to play Harper. And the only sure fire way to guarantee the concert and protect the college from last minute backsets is to put it in writing.

One incident is not enough to put the lid on the board but it certainly should be enough to make them tighten the contractual screws a bit.

The Revitalization of the Community College

by WILLIAM M. RANDLE, JR.

The community college is the last of the major urban institutions with the capacity to become the cutting edge of the future for American society. The failure of the entrenched bureaucracies in most areas of public higher education and the chaos associated with that failure are contemporary crises. Traditional lip service to missions and goals statements and public relations imagery do not begin to meet the exigencies of a complex world of urban America.

As we enter the 1980's, major trends are emerging that can be powerful catalysts for the renewal and revitalization of community colleges. They are:

• The greatly increased number of women actively determined to obtain the economic advantages and status benefits of higher education.

• Increasing urban tensions underline the recommendations of the Carnegie Council designed to bring untalented and academically disadvantaged youth directly into the community college service area.

• The "reverse migration" of students, because of inflation and recession, from away-from-home colleges and universities in lower cost local institutions.

• The influx of a new blue-collar clientele, as the myth of working class affluence recedes under the pressure of economic and high-technology realities.

• The expansion of education opportunities to meet the needs of retiring professionals, workers who are displaced or whose whose skills are obsolete and who need retraining. Liberal arts B.A.'s who want specific career training, and the growing number of people in general who want a college degree.

The fact that more and more women are entering institutions of higher education has already had an observable effect.

fect. but the current statistics do not begin to reflect the intricate web of factors in the 1970s decade. The proportion of young women (17 to 18 years old) indicating interest in attending college has skyrocketed. College costs are more sophisticated responses to their needs than did those previously considered. Lipwax open access to all areas of the community college. Community teachers - these are only the beginning of an enormous pattern of change.

Existing inequities and progressively deteriorating educational and social futures are contemporary realities for many Americans, particularly for members of minority groups. Massive numbers of young people, largely concentrated in urban areas, must be brought into the mainstream of society through successful educational intervention. The alternative is the development of a permanent underclass. The explosive social, economic, and political consequences of such negative forces (already well under way) would be devastating to democratic society.

Primary action to prevent crisis through positive intervention should include carefully planned and implemented expansion of community college services to meet the real needs of disadvantaged youth. Programs in basic-skills training job preparation, and apprenticeship and related vocational specializations are absolute necessities and they must be coordinated with counseling, advising, career preparation, and referral and placement services.

Functional literacy, curricula, pandemic must be tackled and largely eliminated. That will otherwise previously deprived members of society not only open access to the system but the chance to survive and reap at least some of its benefits. Growth in the clientele for higher education coming from those em-cepted millions will have positive short- and long-range effects on the future of community colleges, and will significantly increase the role and influence of those colleges in their communities. The steady decline of middle-class economic and social status because of paralyzing inflation and the economic downturn of the past two years, is challenging the historically stable foundation under institutions of higher education. As middle-class families realize their financial priorities, a reverse migration of thousands of students currently attending schools away from home is taking place. The students primarily involved are those studying for a bachelor's or career degree who are now deciding to take their first two years at a local low cost institution while living at home. There is little question that most of the mature two-year institutions can readily expand and service large numbers of those new students.

Permanent layoffs and revisions at local low cost institutions can readily expand and service large numbers of those new students. Permanent layoffs and revisions at local low cost institutions can readily expand and service large numbers of those new students. Permanent layoffs and revisions at local low cost institutions can readily expand and service large numbers of those new students.

Letter to the editor

In response to the November 29 issue of the Harbinger in which Ms. Karen Kares expressed her view of the current student evaluations of Harper teaching personnel, I was particularly upset to learn that these scores have or had in the future over such serious issues as promotion, retention and salaries of our instructors. I recognize the importance of giving some input to students, and used properly an evaluation is a wise and necessary tool. A systematic, available avenue to improve the quality of instruction if it is indeed quire additional training. Community colleges, industry-focused since their inception, will have to collaborate more closely with labor organizations and industries to meet effectively the training needs of both groups.

The increased expectations of older people who are making up the largest and most rapidly growing segment of the population will demand a new sophistication and sensitivity to their needs and expectations on the part of community college leaders. It would be naive and dangerous to assume support of institutions of higher education by older people without real insight and widely publicized responses to their developing educational imperatives.

Such commitment will not come easily. Optimal availability of services and maximum effort by faculty and staff members are the minimum requirements. An adaptive curriculum should be offered at flexible and realistic times in easily accessible locations both on and off the campus, and skilled use should be made of such new technologies as cable television, the microprocessor, and the videodisc, among others.

The critical decade ahead must see the development of a new class of administrator in the community colleges - an academic professional with sophisticated management skills, socially and politically aware, and responsive to the community. There will also be a need for professional public relations and marketing efforts that will present the institution accurately while emphasizing the benefits of its programs and services.

The coming of age of the expanded community college will mean the development of new responsibilities toward youth and older people and academic and career oriented students, a greater involvement of women and members of minority groups, and a dynamic program of community service. Such an institution can really lead the way to new democratic vistas for America.

William M. Randle, Jr. former assistant vice-chancellor in educational planning and director of tele-communications at Cuyahoga Community College is now a consultant.

Korbel applying research to improve microwave

by KARIN J. JOHNSON

"I just love what I'm doing. I love the students. I thoroughly enjoy teaching," Dr. Susan Korbel, professor of psychology said.

Korbel teaches five different psychology classes, but research psychology was her primary interest when she was studying at Baylor University where she earned her Ph.D. and also taught a year.

She then taught at the University of Arkansas where she began researching the effects of microwaves on rats. She continued her research for twelve years. She found that the rats that were exposed to the same level of microradiation that we are exposed to were affected. "At first, they were really hyper-active, then they were normal, then they were sluggish. They were more emotional and they had more learning problems. They also were more sensitive prone and more stressed," Korbel said.

Dr. Korbel has had several articles published on her research. "They were published in psychology and biology journals," she said.

"I felt I proved my point after twelve years of research so now I just apply it. I basically want to use it to help form standards on microwaves in this country."

In 1973, Dr. Korbel joined the Harper staff because "it offered good facilities for research." She enjoys teaching here and thinks her style of teaching was influenced by two professors she had at Baylor.

"One was a statistics teacher. I got the organization in my classes from him. Everything I talk about is outlined and every semester I either totally revise or partially revise. The other professor, Thompson, was always up in his area of teaching. No information was old. And I think it's better to teach students old stuff," Korbel said. That's why she is constantly reading material on psychology. In her spare time, she eats and sleeps. "I don't think I ever caught up from graduate school," she joked. She does enjoy water activities such as swimming, sailing and snorkeling.

Korbel also enjoys traveling. "I like the ruins of Egypt and Greece, but I also like Africa. I love animals. If I wasn't teaching psychology, I'd probably be a veterinarian."

Her favorite animal is her dog. "It's an Afghan hound. I love Afghans from my love of the Egyptian culture which is where Afghans originally came from." Her Afghan's name is Karak. "I wanted all my Afghans to have names that began with K. I went the easy way this time by naming him after the ruins in Egypt."

As for Dr. Korbel's future, she is going to continue teaching at Harper. "I like teaching. That's why I'm staying. If I wanted to, I guess I would leave but I'm doing what I like to do."

Harper Crusade contributions hit new mark in '80

Harper College students, classified staff, faculty Local 11, and administrators increased their contributions to the Crusade of Mercy by 118 percent over the 1979 campaign.

Thirty-four persons gave a Fair Share gift which means that they contributed one day's pay or more to the Crusade. Of these persons, twenty-three Fair Share givers are members of the classified staff. Classified staff members also tripled their contributions over 1979. Karen Morgan solicited six Fair Share givers, while Santiago Gutierrez received contributions from 100 percent of the persons contacted. In addition, contributions have been received from the student Senate pool tournament and the eleven "Change for the Crusade of Mercy" canisters placed throughout the campus. Harper staff contributed $7,484 to the Crusade. Staff who gave "Fair Share" include: Shirley Acks, Lea Barlow, Lynn Beagoe, Sue Brooks, Gwen Brown, Ben Dallas, Barbara Deer, George Dorrer, Betty Flynn, Joyce Hill, Bill Howard, A. # Students reap many benefits of tutoring center few among many pointers (outlined by Mrs. O'Donnell) stressed during the training program.

Harper college, having the largest tutoring program in the state, Mrs. O'Donnell illustrated how diverse is the number of students in the tutoring program compared with last year's figures. The federal government pays for everyone working under the tutoring program. The center is funded through the Education of All Handicapped Children Disadvantage Grant. Students are therefore required to give their social security number when they sign up for the program.

What happens to those who also fail "tutoring"? It doesn't matter if a student practically "lives" in the tutoring center, there will always be a handful of students who just can't get it, said Mrs. O'Donnell. It's not the tutors' fault, the fault of the instructor, or that of the student. Who's fault is it then? One must first begin by analyzing the situation, adds Barbara Evenson, accounting tutor. Are those students taking a "course overload"? This semester? Do they have a part-time job? How much time do they devote to the course, outside of the classroom? Have they seen their instructor for help? What about taking out tapes on that subject, and playing it over and over again? What about viewing any slides or movies that might help his or her understanding? They claim they're at a "dead end." They're just not passing this course and time is running out. Mrs. Evenson recognizes that it may be "that time" to re-evaluate certain priorities. Which is more important to the student, getting a "D" or a possible "F" in a class because they must rush through school in these two years? Or getting an "A" or "B" and spreading the courses out over a two and a half year period? To have a diploma is one thing, but the grades are the deciding factor as to which college one may transfer, that is if they are working under a transfer program.

"Why do students feel that they have to get an associate degree in two years?" asked Mrs. Evenson. Parents put pressure on the students to get their degree and get out to be independent! If you're taking too much in school, and then doing poorly in a couple of classes, they wonder what's wrong. This can very easily cause the students to get frustrated, and even enough to drop out of college. "It seems that too many people are in too much of a hurry, and in some cases, grades will be an indication of that hurry."

Instructors appear to be entirely supportive of the tutoring program. It really delights them to discover students of their's taking the time to see the tutors, and having any difficult material clarified for them. Instructor Dominic Magno, mathematics division, said, "It's of overall benefit to the student. A peer can sometimes put it into words so that the student will better understand it, compared with the terminology used by the instructor. I'm very much supportive of the tutoring system."

"It doesn't bother me if a tutor introduces a new way to solve a particular problem," said Magno, "as long as the answer is correct. Although no shortcuts should be taken when explaining the mathematics behind a problem."

Asst. Professor Judy Miller, English division, added, "I use the tutoring center as an intricate part of my Eng. 101 and 102 courses. The individual attention one receives at the center has proven to be very successful."

Students in the program also speak highly of the service. Said Lorna Hunt, physical education major, "I believe the tutoring center is really successful, in that you're working on a one-to-one basis, and this lets you clear up any problems you had trouble with in class. Too often though, students are "scared off" by the tutors, when many times, we end up making friends with them."

Californians need to straighten themselves out

Californians are sun drenched, soft brained, material hedonists. Californians are the most conceited, vain, egotistical citizens of the United States. Californians make no sick.

Californians live in fern groves, under tall sequoias, Spanish haciendas, and beach condos. Californians drive BMWs, Mercedes Benz, Parachutes, Rolls Royces, Volkswagens, '51 Chevys, and mural painted' cars.

Californians have the whitest teeth, the broadest skin and the blondest hair. Californians have the worst slang in America. They say things like "hey, man," or "hey, like man," or "hey, like man, dude," or "hey, like man, dude, like wow."

Californians say that they are in perfect harmony with nature. Californians are "nature."

Mike Simkus
abstract
analyst

Californians eat yogurt, nuts, berries and roots. Californians drink diet colas, and grapefruit juice.

Californians roller skate, skate board, and hang glide. California's sports teams are on national TV the most.

California has cities with nice names. Cities like Los Angeles, which means the city of the Queen of the Angels; San Francisco, the city named for Saint Francis of Assisi; San Bernardino, the city named for Saint Bernardine; Berkeley, the city named after George Berkeley the English philosopher and San Clemente, the home of Richard Nixon.

California has cities with progressive cities like Los Angeles, the smog, San Francisco, the gays, San Bernardino, the frat from Berkeley, the college students and San Clemente, Richard Nixon.

California is known for its gopdy public officials. Gov Jerry Brown, who dates a famous rock n roller, and edis alfa sprouts, senator S.I. Hawaiiya, who is known for his gopdy concerning energy for the poor. California has given us Ronald Reagan; and I'll be nice), but only California could have elected an actor to be governor.

California has the place known as Hollywood within it's border. And Hollywood has given America Adam-12, 77 Sunset Strip, and Marcus Welby.

Californians need something to straighten themselves out. You know what they need? They need to live in Illinois, near the great city of Chicago.

Californians have the Chicago Cubs, White Sox, Bears, and Bulls. Californians have the Bama, Dodgers, Chargers, Raiders, A's, and Lakers.

Californians have Muddy Waters, Albert King and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Californians have the grateful dead, the Beach Boys and Tony Bennett.

Californians have Michigan Ave, the Hancock Building and O'Hare Airport. Californians have Highway One, the letters Hollywood on a hillside and San Diego's air traffic controllers.

Chicago has sunny days, rainy days, snowy days, and lo-jan Summer days. California has smoggy days, foggy days and more smoggy days.

Chicago has more down to earth people than California. Perhaps, more down to earth people in the whole United States. If Californians lived in Chicago they would turn into real people. They would shed their image of takers and phosus.

Hopefully, Chicago will never see an influx of Californians immigrate here. Last year Jane Byrne, enough? And could Chicagoans handle the Cubs and White Sox if they started winning?

Perhaps if we were really lucky, California would fall into the San Andreas Fault, or separate from America. But then too, that would make Nevada the new coastline, and Nevada is a different type of people, maybe worse than Californians.

Wouldn't it be nice to be rid of California, and California? "Yes, isn't it pretty to think so."

fine, is that Mr. Geleb himself disallowed members of his staff the right to talk to me on their own. Mr. Cub Reporter was understandably furious when he found out what Mr. Geleb had done. Now Mr. Geleb has alienated an already suspicious member of the press.

What Mr. Cub Reporter would like to ask rhetorically is, "What was gained by not allowing anyone to talk about the Stabo incident?" Notice that read "not by talking about the incident," but "not allowing anyone to talk" about the incident. These things are very sensitive.

All the details on the Stabo resignation — and there are many — won't be released until his court appeal with Schaumburg Two District 54 is decided. Stabo is hoping to retain his teaching job at McArthur Junior High, and it is understandable that he not jeopardize his chance with remarks said about Harper.

But when they are — and they will — I certainly hope that Mr. Geleb can rise above the popular belief that all Mr. Cub Reporter wants is a juicy scandal. That isn't what Mr. Cub Reporter wants at all. All Mr. Cub Reporter wants to do is report the news — you know, who, what, where, when, why, and how. Of course, if Mr. Cub Reporter runs into a scandal along the way

Grapplers face tougher season

by WAYNE BEINDAU
Head Coach Norm Lovelace shrugged his shoulders when asked the question.

"I don't need them," he said, referring to wrestlers who consider a wrestling workout to be 20 days and not 5-7.

"Besides, I'd run them out anyway if they pulled that kind of stuff."

Lovelace is used to those kind of phenomena — the "missing persons," as it were, who show up sporadically, the scraggly wrestlers who can't hack it academically.

He's heard about the trips to grandma's, the 24-hour flu, and the mid-winter vacation. But through it all, Lovelace only worries about one thing, who wants to wrestle, and wrestle seriously.

"It's the same old thing," Lovelace said, shaking his coaches out. "Our standing depends on how much we want to work. Hardly anything more to it than that."

The team has lost nearly all of its sophomores, most notably Jay Evans, NAC Champ and Region IV Champ, Dan Weber, state, and Jeff Richard, NAC Champ and third in the Regionals.

"If I have to be honest," Lovelace sighed, "but this year we don't have the same kind of talent."

"Look, basically these are tough kids, don't get me wrong. We have a lot of untapped talent and I'm anxious to see what they can do."

"But if you go on what we had last year, well, it's hard to say we can be much better right now." A couple teams he feels will be formidable opponents include Trilon and DuPage Colleges.

Both are getting a lot of their freshmen back and it puts them in much the same position as we were in last season," he points out.

Lovelace says that Trilon would probably be the rabid in this year's divisional race, with DuPage and possibly Joliet up there also.

As for the Hawks, he feels that two weeks of practice isn't enough to determine just where they're headed.

The team practices in a new room separated from the gym, as opposed to practicing just off the gym's track as they had last year.

Lovelace feels the practice room will eventually help the Hawks psychologically, if anything, but as for now he doesn't think it matters much.

"Heck, people still tend to think that Harper is second rate. I don't know why. Probably it's because we don't always have the money other schools have available to them."

The money aspect of wrestling also ties in indirectly with the team roster. If, as Lovelace illustrates, a wrestler is a top competitor in high school, he most likely will wind up at a four-year school instead of a community college.

But now in awhile, he continued, the school will get a wrestler who didn't get a scholarship, wants to stay near the area, or whatever. "But we didn't get anybody like that this year," Lovelace laughs half-heartedly.

When asked if that discouraged him to a degree, Lovelace quickly shot back, "Heck no. I'm used to working with only 10-12 guys."

"We've never had numbers before, so it doesn't bother me at all."

Going into Wednesday's meet at Concordia, the Hawks will participate in a round robin with top-notch schools such as Illinois State, Purdue, and several other universities.

Says Lovelace of the tough first meet, "I'll be an eye-opener for most of these kids, that's for sure."

Last season at this time, injuries were slowly creeping into the Hawk line-up and gradually became worse. This year, five Hawks have minor injuries but should be ready when the whistle is blown to start the 1983-84 wrestling slate.

"Injuries," shrugs the coach, reflecting back on last year. "They killed us over time. This season, well, I don't want to say much because we've been pretty lucky."

The Lovelace philosophy is that, if work or get out, will be present in the Hawk locker room for yet another year.

And, as Lovelace keeps saying, "They're tough kids. If we stick it out, we'll be on top, or near it."

One gets the feeling his Hawks will be there. Somehow. Some way.

that slip in the way. "She could be a lot better if she would get totally serious about what she is doing, and I expect to see a great improvement in all her routines this year."

Sue Quinn is another freshman on the Hawk squad this season and will be competing on the beam and the bars.

According to her coach, she has made enormous improvement on the bars in the last month and with a little more strength building, she could turn out to be one of the best on the high bars for next year.

"This is Sue's first experience on the beam and it shows in her not being very sure of herself," said Coach Mustari. "She surprises me every day because I'll show her a trick, she'll say that she can't do it. I'll show it to her and 10 minutes later, she's doing it just great."

"She has a lot of natural talent and I think that she'll do very well this year," concluded Coach Mustari.

The last on the team is Denise Brewer.

"Denise is not eligible until next semester but she is one of our all-round players," says Coach Mustari. "She is a very strong girl in vaulting and tumbling and with a little more work on her dancing, she should prove to be a very valuable member to the team."

"From what I've heard Trilon should be our toughest rival. Of course they have an advantage of a much larger team but that doesn't mean that in any way they'll be better," added Coach Mustari.

The gymnasts open their season of competition at home on Thursday, Dec. 11 when they'll host Wheaton College and Northwestern.

Men off to quick start

The men's swimming team made some big noises in a 99-53 win over Lincoln in their first-ever swim meet.

"I'm really really pleased with the performance we had, said coach Steve Eul.

Four swimmers qualified for the national meet in three events: Mike Soja, Mark Waka, Mike Zwerger, and Todd Mussel combined for a 3:30.24 in the 400-medley relay to qualify for the NCAA meet. "That was a team we just put together," said Eul.

Waka and Soja also qualified

DYNAMO DIVE: Mark Waka (left) and Mike Soja (right) qualified for the national meet in two events each. Waka qualified for the 100-free with a time of 59.60 and the 400-medley relay team. Soja, meanwhile, qualified for the 100-fly with a time of 54.83 and the 400-medley relay also. Harper won his first-ever swim race, 99-53 over Lincoln. (Photos by Rick Kuhnke) in the 100 free and 100 fly respectively. Waka lured in a time of 59.60, 12 under the national qualifying time. In the free, while Soja went the fly in 54.83.

The Hawks opener was more impressive when one realizes that three swimmers - Mike Sherridan, Jim Soja, and Mark Gough - missed the meet. Both Sherridan and Soja are ineligible but will be able to join the team in January. Gough, meanwhile, missed because of an injured shoulder.

Dave Maday, who is normally the 100-breast man, went 1:00.00 free in 12:06, good enough for a victory. The 1,000-free is Sheridan's event.

"Dave had a good time," said Eul. "I was very proud of him."

Other swimmers also swam out of their events. 100-free and fly man John Doyle covered the 500-free in 32. And Mussel went the 100-breast in 1:09 and swam the 400-free relay right after the event.

Sprinter Jim Currier was fourth in 200-free. "That's not bad," said Eul. "I've never having swam the event before."

The 400-medley relay team turned in the most impressive performance of the meet, with a 39 second win over Lincoln's relay squad.

In all, Eul was more pleased than impressed by his team's initial performance. "Lincoln was not in our class," he said. "They weren't up to par. For us to beat them with such a crippled team - well, you know."

"We've got a lot of tougher competition along the way. We're looking for national qualifying times, not just championship times. Just qualifying times. Qualifying is qualifying."

And a slaughter is a slaughter.

Hawks, Goss off to 4-1 start

Question - What happens when the Hawks score 30 or more points in a game?
Answer - The Hawks win.

Question - What happens when Ferrado Goss scores 30 or more points in a game?
Answer - The Hawks win.

So far, the Hawks have scored 34, 32, 30, 32, and 35 points in their first five games of the year. Only once - in the 17-point game - have the Hawks lost. And in the 32 and 35-point game, Goss has scored 33 and 25 points respectively.

New Jim Hawks, who are committed to live and/or die by the fast-break, are 4-1 and 10 in the NAC after a big 30-42 win over Illinois Valley Monday.

The Hawks, who have not trailed at halftime this season, built up a 46-37 halftime lead before the Apaches pulled to within two points early in the second half.

But the Hawks, behind Goss and Demetrious Gaines, pulled away to an 8-7 lead with less than a minute to play. Valley made it close with three meaningless baskets.

Basketball

The Hawks will host NAC for Wright at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night in the West.

The Hawks were coming off a tough 79-78 loss to Kennedy-King in the championship game of the Harper Thanksgiving Classic Saturday night. The Hawks had led by as much as 23-17 in the first half, and held an eight-point halftime lead.

"I'm concerned with Kennedy-King because of their quickness," said coach Roger Bechtold before the game. "If we can handle their pressure, I think we can win."

The Hawks fast-break had worked perfectly in the first half against Kennedy-King, but fell apart in the second half. "They forced us not to properly running our offense by cutting our fast-break and double-teaming our rebounders," said Bechtold.

The Hawks also had a tough time stopping Kennedy-King's Tyrone Moore. Moore scored 31 points - all in the second half - as the Statesman finally caught, and then passed, the Hawks with six minutes to play in the game.

The night before, the Hawks had beaten Lewis University's Jayvee squad, 90-76, in a first-round tourney game. Gaines led the Hawks with 14 points, 12 rebounds, five assists and five blocked shots.

But the 8-foot-3 Gaines had trouble stopping Lewis' six-foot-six Steve Hockstzer, who scored 31 points in a losing cause.

Yet the defense, which was supposed to have been a problem because of the Hawks' lack of height, has had problems only against teams with a good outside shooter, like Kennedy-King, because the Hawks are forced to double-team opponent's big men.

Dave Strawn, who scored 20 points against Lewis, and Goss were named to the All-Tourney team.

Gymnasts eye No. 1 spot in State

One word to describe the Women's Gymnastics squad for the 1986-87 season would be "talent" with a capital "T."

Actually, if you're looking for an exact description of the team you'd have to use the word "exceptional talent."

Last year's squad took 13th place in NCAA Nationals, 1st place in both the NCAA Region IV Regionals and the Invitational Tournament, while finishing with a 5-0 record for the season.

This year's gymnasts are setting their sights on even bigger and better things and with the abundance of talent that the squad possesses, the possibilities are all the more reachable.

According to Head Coach Linda Mustari, "I'm very proud of my little team this year and I think that we'll do exceptionally well."

Leading the team into competition this year will be returning sophomore Mary Beth Black.

"Mary Beth was very strong in high school and has carried it right on through to her college competition," commented Coach Mustari. Black finished 1st at Regionals last year in the balance beam competition. Black also is a very strong competitor in the floor dance and displays great talent in that area as well.

"Mary Beth has added more difficult moves to her routines this year and if all goes as planned, that could make her scores much higher," stated Coach Mustari on Black's routines. "The most important element in gymnastics is form," commented Coach Mustari, "and Mary Beth is one of the best at that."

"Other teams may do a lot of trick maneuvers that may look good but without good form then they won't get good scores at all."

"Mary Beth is adding some very difficult tricks to her routine this year but if she doesn't have good form while performing, those then the judges won't give her good scores."

The final returning sophomore for the squad this season will be Sandy Colglaser, an outstanding vaulteer and bars competitor.

"Sandy finished 9th last year at the Nationals for the vault however her best routine is still on the bars and I hope to see her place much higher this year, basically because she has added quite a few new things to her routine that have made it a very difficult routine also," commented Coach Mustari.

"Sandy is lacking in confidence and that is probably the biggest thing that is working against her," stated Coach Mustari. "Sandy is sometimes scared to try new things, and that can really hurt her just to name up the whole thing I'd have to say that Sandy doesn't believe she is capable of being as great as she could possibly be," commented Coach Mustari.

The four other girls that make up the squad of seven girls are all freshmen this year.

Kris Kandel will compete on the uneven bars this year for Harper this year.

According to Coach Mustari, "Kris is at the basic stage of the bars and she is also one of the hardest workers on the team. She works so hard that sometimes she just keeps going even when she is in pain."

"But a lot of that hard work has paid off because things that she couldn't do at the beginning of the season come with a great sense of ease now," said Coach Mustari.

Kris didn't compete in high school gymnastics because the school that she went to offered none, but she did compete in her Park District gymnastic program.

Another freshman that is new to the squad this year is Mary Reucher.

"Mary does the bars, vault, and the floor dance," commented Coach Mustari. "She is a very strong tumblor on the floor and is working hard to bring her dance level up to that point also."

"Mary has a good solid routine with the exceptions of a few minor execution errors

Szabo steps down as Coach

by MIKE BAMBACH
In a surprise move, Harper soccer coach Sandoz Szabo resigned Monday citing "personal reasons." The move followed his firing from McKinley Junior High School in Schenoburg District 54 just a week before.

Szabo verbally resigned last Wednesday, but his resignation did not become official until Monday when he turned in his letter of resignation to John Geich, Associate Dean of Athletics.

"I was over at Harper Wednesday and I decided to resign," said Szabo, who led the Hawks to a 22-5-4 record in his two-year tenure. "This is a hard decision to make," he added. "I just want to start over. I'd like to coach and teach somewhere."

Szabo had been fired from his District 54 teaching job because he called in sick on a dozen occasions - occasions which were used in coach the soccer team. He was the first teacher in 15 years to be fired from District 54. But Szabo has decided to appeal for a hearing concerning the District's decision and has declined further comment on his resignation until after the hearing.

"I'd like to say something," he said, "but I can't say anything until I've talked to my attorney."

Said Geich Monday, "The soccer program is off to a good start. That has a lot to do with Sandoz. He's demonstrated he's a good coach. I think he did a helluva job."

Szabo resigned because he had become increasingly disgusted with the athletic department, for what he thought was a lack of interest in the program. He even acknowledged as early as October that he wouldn't be returning this season. "They just don't give a damn," he said after an early season practice. "When the chips are down, they don't want to help you."

Geich declined to comment on Szabo's criticisms. "I don't want to respond to comments made elsewhere," he said. "I don't want to manufacture anything that is not there."

Geich added that a successor would be looked for no earlier than next semester.

It has been rumored that Szabo is interested in either the Trinos or DuPage coaching jobs. "Of course I am," he said. He added that neither school has yet contacted him about coaching.

Szabo's resignation is a surprise because it follows so closely the end of the Hawks' season. His contract was to be up for review before the athletic department officials. It is standard practice for each coach to have his contract reviewed at the end of each season.

The resignation will surely jeopardize recruiting efforts. Many players have said they would come to Harper only if Szabo remained. One area player said he would "follow Szabo anywhere."

"If the resignation set the soccer program back five years," said one Harper soccer player.

Asked if he would consider returning to Harper, Szabo said, "No way. There's no way they could pay me enough money."

Players react

Two soccer players that reacted to Sandoz Szabo's resignation were disappointed but not surprised.

"It's a shame," said goalie Steve Todd. "I think it's terrible. In time he'd bring a national championship."

Todd was a two-time All-State selection as goalie, and was twice nominated to the NJCAA All-American team.

"It's a shame," seconded Jim Mayworm. "I set the soccer program back five years."

He was a tough man to get along with, but as a coach there was no better. I hope the athletic department doesn't pick some run-of-the-mill hunk to take his place."

Had Szabo not decided to resign and return in 1981, he would have had only four returners from this season's 11-5 team - Rick Puls, Mark Mota, Mark Pistorio, and Keith Voss. Mota and Puls were the Hawks two-leading scorers this season.

College where he was an All-American selection three times. In 1977, he was a 13-round draft-choice of the NFL Atlanta Falcons in the fifth round. He was released at the end of the career.

He began his coaching career in District 54 where he's been since 1966.

Szabo turned down two North American Soccer League coaching offers to return to Harper for his last season.

Mustari eyes top

by JOE KOST
Gymnastic coach Linda Mustari takes her position of teaching the girls the same way that she takes her position in gymnastics: very seriously.

"Next to my little boy and my husband at home, gymnastics is what I love the most," stated Mustari.

"In no other way am I putting down other sports but in a lot of other sports if you were missing someone you could always get someone else to fill in for a day. Of course they won't be as good as the rest of the team but they could still do something. In gymnastics you just can't get some one to fill in and do a routine for a day."

This year the scoring in all gymnastics has gotten a lot tougher according to Mustari.

"The United States Gymnastic Federation had to revise their system basically because too many gymnasts were getting perfect scores."

"As a result all previous routines had to be revised and changed to be harder, and meet the standards. Changing all of that takes an enormous amount of time and giving us only one month to prepare it is asking a bit too much."

Mustari continued by saying "In the future I hope that Harper will supply summer practice at some type of program where they can keep working out. Because it is impossible for these girls to compete at the level they are capable of with only one month of practice before the first meet."

"If we had some type of summer practice then the girls could stay in good shape all year long. Also if that was possible then the level of competition could be much higher. Plus it would cut down on the number of injuries because as it is, gymnastics ranks as the number one sport for women injuries."

Actually it is totally incredible how high schools and some colleges expect the girls to compete with such little practice time and to also expect isn't enough practice time. And it really hurts especially when I see some girl that could be so good if I could spend the time with her to help her learn," commented Mustari.

Whether the gymnast turn out a fantastic season or find a poor one is unimportant, they should still consider themselves very lucky if they have a coach that cares that much about them and their sport.

A little coerced censorship hurts

The dirtiest word in journalism is censorship. Nothing triggers the suspicious mind of the typical Cub reporter faster than "no comment."

There are, of course, many kinds of censorship, akin to mission of truth.

And this journalist, if you will, has discovered another type, albeit an odd that goofy, of censorship - coerced censorship. While working on the Sandoz Szabo story last week, I first approached Don Siansbury, Vice-President of Student Affairs, if the administration had any word on the resignation of Mr. Szabo.

"Yes," he told me, "it's official. Did the administration, as it had been rumored, ask for Mr. Szabo's resignation?" "No, we didn't," said Siansbury.

Fine.

That was a Wednesday, a day after Szabo had informed of his intention to officially resign. Two days later, on Friday, approached John Geich, Associate Dean of Athletics, on the subject of Mr. Szabo's resignation. He refused to comment on anything until he received Mr. Szabo's official letter of resignation.

Fine, again.

But, later that evening, I found out, to my dismay, that Mr. Geich had told members of the athletic department staff not to talk to me about the Szabo resignation.

Foul!

Now, what do you think was Mr. Cub Reporter's first thought when he heard that Mr. Geich didn't want anything said about an incident that had already become official?

How does Harpergate grab you?

Please, don't go get Woodward and Bernstein, because there is no such scandal at Harper. Just a little coerced censorship.

What has intrigued Mr. Cub Reporter, though, is the nonchalance with which the athletic department let Mr. Szabo go. He can be abrasive and even arrogant, but he is a winner. Or maybe that doesn't count.

It also intrigues Mr. Cub Reporter that this isn't the first time Mr. Geich has asked his staff to ignore me when I came calling. In fact, this is the third time this semester that Geich has coerced censorship.

Why might you ask? Well, maybe Mr. Geich thinks Mr. Cub Reporter is just an irresponsible, scandal-seeker, no-good gossip spreader from some podunk state-grade rag.

Or maybe Mr. Geich thinks Mr. Cub Reporter is trying to uncover a scandal in the athletic department that isn't there. Or maybe Mr. Geich thinks that Mr. Cub Reporter doesn't have sense enough not to get involved in personalities when reporting the news.

Well, Mr. Geich is wrong. My intent in both Mr. Geich and other members of his staff was to get some reaction from some not-so-very-nice things Mr. Szabo said about the athletic department.

In respect to Mr. Szabo, Mr. Geich declined to comment until Mr. Szabo's official resignation was received.

Fine. That is a very responsible thing for a former boss to do.

And when Mr. Geich declined to comment on Mr. Szabo's criticisms after receiving Mr. Szabo's letter of resignation, that too was fine. There is no law that says you have to talk to the press. It is an individual's prerogative to remain quiet about an incident.

But, what isn't fine, what never was fine, and what will never be

Harper loan default rate on decline

WENDY WINKELHAKE

Although Harper's student loan default rate has decreased by 18 percent over the past year, loan now-pay later study method has met several roadblocks.

Rising inflation and higher college costs are making it harder for many students to repay loans. Charlotte Christin, harper, points out that not all students default on loans, some simply forget to pay them back.

"From what I see I don't think that the default rate is accurate. A lot of students are still in school and just don't have time to work to pay it back. Others move and just forget to change their address," Christin said.

Anton J. Dolejs, director of finance, said that the National Direct Student Loan default rate was 26.08 percent June 30, 1979 but dropped to 18.12 percent June 30, 1980. Auditors discovered that nearly half of Harper's NDSL loans had not been repaid. They also uncovered several irregularities in the handling of Harper's program. Irregularities cited include overpayments, failure to have notes signed and awarding loans to academically ineligible students.

By neglecting signatures, Harper could lose thousands of non-dollars each year. "There has been only one instance that a note has passed by college officials without obtaining a signature during the past year," Dolejs said.

Ernest L. Boyer, commissioner of the United States Office of Education, said that colleges with a 10 percent default rate might be dropped from the loan program beginning with the 1980-81 academic year.

Although NDSL loans are made directly by schools, they are guaranteed and subsidized by the federal government. Schools are supposed to collect payments from previous lenders and set up a revolving loan fund for future borrowers. Upon completion of their education, borrowers are given a nine month grace period before the first payment on the loan is due.

The borrowing institution is required to communicate to the lender three times during the grace period; a letter explaining the Truth and Lending Laws and other information is sent to the borrower during the first thirty days of the period. The lender also receives notification 180 days into the grace period and 30 days before the payment is due.

Christin emphasized the importance of students keeping in touch with Harper after going on to four year institutions and filling out proper forms before they leave.

There are several extenuating circumstances under which the installments on the principle need not be paid and interest does not accrue. These are:

- the lender remains enrolled as at least a part-time student at an institution of higher education
- the lender is involved in military service, Peace Corps, Vista or another form of voluntary service

Persons involved in a service program are eligible for a three year deferment.

"There have been many cases where Harper has gone through the collection process and found out that the student qualified for a deferment," Christin said.

Acceleration of the loan, demanding a payment in full, may be a final step taken by the lending institution if the lender continually ignores payment of the loan. Christin said that after a lender misses six payments the matter is turned over to Van Ra Credit Corporation, a collection agency specializing in collecting students loans. Skiptracing, a new form of follow-up, involves record checking to locate defaulters. "We use social security numbers as well as telephone directories and other financial aid records," Christin said.

Christin said that tracing defaulters through social security numbers has proved to be an especially effective tool in the locating process.

The final alternative open to lending institutions is suing the defaulter provided that he can be found, owes more than $500 and has assets that will cover the outstanding debt.

Student loan officials suggest borrowing from friends, family, employer, school, church, credit union, casing in a life insurance policy or appealing to a finance company for students who face difficulty in obtaining a loan.

Season's Greetings

Little Aaron Segal, age four of wealthy Highland Park wrote Santa of his Christmas wants and sent it in the dark.

Dear Santa, the letter started to read. There's so much I want but so little I need.

I already own a leather speed bike and a color TV that entertains me at night.

A stereo with a 600 watt amp, two electric guitars and my own day camp.

Paintings by Dalí line by bedroom wall my answering service beeps when anyone calls.

Four computerized toys to educate my brain, a walking umbrella for whenever it rains.

A moped, a gun, a waterbed and swags, two ponies, four cats, and a parrot that sings.

Three tuxedos, a camera and a monkey that talks, a farm in the country and a fish that walks.

Calvin Klein Jeans with plenty of sweaters, my own stationary for my personal letters.

An indoor pool with ruffs and floats, a maid and a skipper for my 62 foot boat.

Pens and crayons and plenty of books, sunglasses with mirrors for that rich kid look.

I have a chauffeur that drives and a golfer that gets, a gardener who waters and a dog sitter that pets.

I own stocks and bonds and an airplane that's new, a basketball team with cheerleaders too.

I'm prim and proper respectful and kind, Donny Osmond looks and a shapely behind.

Groomed fingernails and styled hair, private schools with the utmost care.

I have a Dad who cares and a Mom that's lazy, an Aunt who's pretentious and a shrink that's crazy.

SANTA, SANTA with kindest regards, you know what I want most for Christmas IBM

'Moods' makes a big comeback

Heh! As you can plainly see, I'm back. I don't plan to haunt my old opponents too long, so I'll make my visit as brief as possible. Here are my top three records of 1988. The albums that are first are, in my opinion, the best of 1988.

Mike Simkus
 ...moods for moderns

(1) Talking Heads, Remain in Light. Last year in my estimation, Talking Heads released the album of the year in Peak of Music. This year, once again, Talking Heads have released the album of the year.

Rhythm is a function of every human being. Rhythm can be found in the heartbeat, pulse, brainwaves, and even the natural act of reproduction. It would seem so simple, too simple perhaps, to produce an album which would contain many rhythms/polyrhythms. But, the trick in working with polyrhythms is to incorporate the polyrhythms into a general theme, without interfering with the theme. The listener should not be bombarded with sound, nor should the listener be distracted from the basic rhythm by the polyrhythm. The listener should be able to listen to the piece as a whole.

Talking Heads have incorporated polyrhythms rather successfully on Remain in Light.

David Byrne has written the most outstanding lyrics in his brilliant career. His lyrics encourage us to examine ourselves. Byrne asks us, aren't we all just buses in motion? Do we ever know where we are at, or where we are headed? Do we realize the value of life, and live life to the fullest? Is our self-perception a reflection of advertising, or what we truly are?

Talking Heads, by the usage of polyrhythms in each song, may be suggesting that life itself is complicated. But, all these complications fit within the person who realizes his life, and his life's meaning. In nature, rhythms exist, but there is only one universal rhythm, and Talking Heads Remain in Light explores that philosophy.

—Jon Hassall and Brian Eno, Fourth World Music Vol. 1.

If you like your music commercial, you'll not like this album. It is not stale, boring, or filled with predictable music.

Vol. 1 is a look into what should become the new music well into the year 2000.

Our culture is learning from the Chinese philosophy of Tao. Taoism philosophy is learning to become or make things simple. Vol. 1 is a compilation of this philosophy with music.

On this disc, simplicity is important. We are given a simplistic theme, and the theme is cascaded with rhythms. Once again, like Talking Heads Remain in Light, polyrhythms appear to reinforce the simple theme.

On the first listen, the listener will swear that the disc is a recording of African tribal music. Africa is where rhythm has its roots. And Vol. 1 is a combination of rhythms and electronics. It is a combination of the ancient world with the modern.

Vol. 1 is a balance of yin and yang. Another Chinese philosophy that is making waves in our society. For that reason alone, the union of yin and yang, Vol. 1 is a masterpiece.

The disc should be in every American home, but I realize that many are not ready for it. Therefore, it will sit in stores and warehouses collecting dust. That is no matter, because those who understand the philosophy of yin and yang will survive the 21st century, at least better equipped to survive. And those who don't understand yin and yang, will not survive.

—Royce Music, Flesh and Blood.
 Bryan Ferry has been bitten, burned and scorched by love affairs. On Flesh and Blood, we wonder if Ferry has finally overcome the love affairs he has sang about so eloquently on his previous solo discs, and group discs? Apparently, he has not recovered.

Once again though, Roxy Music delivers with

Top ten 1980 albums- Piepenburg's picks

Got a favorite album? How about ten favorite albums? How about ten from 1980? Think that is a tough order to fill musically the year wasn't too full. Over here in America commercialization of a new wave (the same groups shined out their in some cases) an annual piece of boredom and Bruce Springsteen lived everyone into the lan. Country rock bars grew bigger than before, the "bull-bars" were full and yes, that is Devo you are hearing on WLS. Are you still laughing? Here is my list, not necessarily in order of preference.

Peter Gabriel Anyone who passed the summer without hearing "Games Without Frontiers" must have been in a coma. Gabriel's songs are lyrically and musically strong and his live performances are still captivating. He, there was some decent music in the Top of this year.

Kris Piepenburg on music

The Buggles The age of "Plastic" who? The Buggles are Geoff Downes and Trevor Horn, who most recently joined "YES". This album came out in the winter and went relatively unnoticed. "Video Killed the Radio Star" was a huge hit everywhere but in the U.S. It's a fun record, electronic pop music with emotions present. There are futuristic one music paper called the Buggles a "collage on speed". True but also a fun ride. Police-Zenobia Mendatta This band has carved themselves a niche in rock music. A mixture of reggae, tight musicianship, hoarse vocals and good songwriting. They're assured of a long and lasting career. Let's hope they don't get over. Judas Priest British Steel Yip, that's right! Heavy metal. I've decided, it is an experience to be felt by the body. You don't dance to it, but you need this great surge of energy start in your feet and rush up your legs. When it hits, your head you suddenly feel more energetic. The "Breaking Law" side of the British steel is some of the best heavy metal, most genuine anyway that's been written together in awhile. How can you treat an album with a life like "Order and "Metal Gods." Fascist rock for fun. Talking Heads-Sheena in Light More body music but this is it, intellectual and intense. This one will take you back to the jungles of Africa. A unique record by a group that will not get weak.

Dire Straits-Making Movies A superb collection of songs penned by Mark Knopfler. "Skateaway" has been received heavily, adding play and interest. As this one a collection of two types of songs—sounding saxophone rave-up with grumbling Bruce" and "Making Movies contains more subtleties in one song, than in entirety of the "The River". David Freedley of Choice A great danceable album if you can forget about "Whip It." You'll love it. Freedom of Choice "It's a non-stop tour-de-force including humor. In these guys are intellectuals-how can they make music like this? It's so scary-strange-argue-wow I like it." Magazine The Correct Use of Soap Another unmodified gem. This group deserves some recognition for their unique sound. Good lyrics, catchy melodies and good musicianship. What does the title of the album have to do with anything? A line from a song. From Under the Floorboards "I know the meaning of Life, it doesn't help me a bit." Profound skafish. The debut album by Chicago's own mutant, Jimmy Skafish. After the satirical feud of "Juan Pan Club" were off a bit there is plenty of good music from multiple influences. "Disgracing the Family Name" does the same thing as the Judas Priest album. The my feet down before I take off. I couldn't think of a tenth choice. No honorable mentions either. This is the last music column by yours truly that will appear in the Harbinger. I had written an in-depth criticism of the "The River" but some geek stole it from the office. A personal opinion isn't worth the paper it is written on. If you're really going to miss this column, write me a letter and tell me why I'd like to know.

"Why do they also shoot the good guys?"

I can remember now, the feeling I had when Martin Luther King was shot. It was a bit painful, but it was more of a feeling of loss. I remember asking myself why it happened, and I didn't like the answer. I remember now, the feeling I had when Bobby Kennedy was shot. I had just woke up, and my mom told me all about it I asked her, "Mom, why do they always shoot the good guys?" She said, "Son, I don't know."

I can remember the feeling I had Monday night. Monday night, the night John Lennon was killed. When I heard that Lennon was killed, a tear trickled down my face and a lump in my throat prevented me from speaking.

When I woke up Thursday morning, I went directly into my kitchen. My mom showed me the paper, with the headline that read, "The Beatle John Lennon Dead."

I read the news account of the tragic sight, and looked up at my mom. "Mom, why do they always shoot the good guys? Those dirty bastards."

She said, "Son, I don't know."

This tragic loss of John Lennon is not the first blow to my life. The first time was when my best friend Ralph, was killed.

protesting electrical in this particular day. Ralph was giving a traffic light onto the four big bolts that held the signal in place. The crane that was hoisting the traffic light, touched a high-tension wire. The electricity went right into Ralph's body. When my mom told me about Ralph's death (both Ralph and I worked for the same company part time. I was in shock).

To this very day, I still get choked up thinking about Ralph. I miss him dearly. I miss his company. I miss the hell raising we did late at night.

Today, I miss the presence in this world of both Ralph and now John Lennon.

I know that they are well, and live up there, but it's hard to imagine that I'll never see or hear from them again for the rest of my life.

I hope everyone gets the chance to watch "It's a Wonderful Life." On WTTW Christmas Eve. This movie, in my opinion is the best movie ever made.

Wherever I watch it, I think of all these friends and relatives now departed. But, most of all I think of the value of life. Each of those people that I miss, valued their life, and had it taken from them. And, that is what Christmas is all about. It's not the presents under the tree. It's not the stockings hanging on the fireplace. It's not even the Christmas tree.

Christmas is peace and goodwill. But, it's not peace. Life is also the value of life.

Life is more than money, and material possessions.

John Lennon said: write Imagine no possessions. I wonder if you can no need for greed or hatred? A brotherhood of man. Imagine all the people sharing all the world."

My friend Ralph never worried about money, because whoever he had it he spent it. Ralph valued life.

If only I could emulate Ralph and Lennon, my life would be complete.

Yan (no Lennon once said you don't shake hands with people you love.

You don't shake hands with people you love.

This Christmas and New Year's, tell your husband or wife how much they mean to you, tell your brothers and sisters how much they mean to you, tell your friends how much they mean to you. It's the best present you could give them.

I wish I could tell Ralph how much he meant to me. I wish I could tell my grandmother how much she means to me. I wish I could tell my uncle how much he means to me. I wish I could tell John Lennon how much he means to me. But, I can't.

Top three 1980 albums - Simkus' picks

penetrating vocals, and music. Musicians hits directly with very few guitar overbuds.

I hate to say, "if you like Manifesto, you'll like Fresh and Blood." But, it is true. I realize that, that is not a valid criticism.

I can't be painful for all of us to hear a song that reminds us of an old love? Doesn't it hurt when you realize a love affair is over, one that you thought would last forever? Of course! Perry and company realize this, and have sung their dirty-dirty so. But, they handle our delicate feelings so well, that it makes us feel good to have them.

The songs are singable, that is, if you like to sing along in the car, like to use along when you're in the shower. This album is everything that the Beatles could have been, had the Beatles kept their hands out of the business and politics of music.

Bye and until next time, take care.

It might be comforting to those who don't excel in their field or area of interest to listen to Betty Windham, Professor of Physics.

"In high school, I did not do well in math," she said. "I quit taking it at the end of my sophomore year. I liked the sciences, though, especially biology. But then, when I decided to major in chemistry in college, I had a lot of work to make up. And as I just offered, science became easier."

"If you like something, even if you're not good at it, if you work at it and become better. Motivation and a liking for a particular subject can help overcome inability."

"A person does not have to be a genius to do well in a particular field. So when a student, who seems to be struggling, all the sudden sees the light and does well, that makes me happy," she said.

Windham enjoys science and teaching. She also likes to do research work.

About three years ago, she was working on research at Northern Illinois University.

"Acoustics is a branch of physics, dealing with sound," Windham said. "It wasn't as active held for awhile, but with the push on the environment and the government has an noise pollution, it became more active."

She is applying her research to her classes. The science department has a professor and Windham sees it in her classes so they can study noise.

Besides teaching, Windham is program director for a new program, Flaget at Harper PATH. The purpose of PATH is to improve students' reasoning ability and to enhance their chances for future academic success.

The program is aimed toward "students who enter college and want to transfer, but haven't decided a major," Windham explained.

"We devise activities so the students are given opportunities to get involved and upgrade their reasoning skills. The students do most of the work," Windham said.

Aside from all her other activities, Windham finds time for the National Committee on the Education of Women in Physics, where she was just appointed chairman.

"The purpose of the committee is to encourage young women to go into science-oriented fields. We want to remove the biases from textbooks that say women can't do that type of work."

In her spare time, Windham enjoys camping, swimming, golfing and cross-country skiing.

Even with her responsibilities as a teacher, chairman and a director, there's still much more to the busy Windham, but as she says, "I just keep going."

Who's Who applications

Sports Women... off to quick start too

by JOE KOST
The Women's basketball team has started their season off to the tune of "Win, Win, More, Win Big."

Maybe that tune hasn't reached the Top 40 listings in the Midwest yet but the Hawks are humming it quite a bit after their victories over Illinois Valley and Wright College.

The Hawks started their season out on the road when they traveled down to Illinois Valley's home den to take on the power house squad. The result: a 77-55 Harper victory.

The girls then returned home and watched their conference record climb to 3-0 with a impressive slaughtering of Wright College, 74-40.

The Wright game started out slow for the Hawks as they were unable to get a good lead up on the board with Wright leading 24-23, key baskets by Sue Hoday, Leanna Rose and Kim Place put the Hawks way up on top.

Harper continued to play tough for the remainder of the first half and took a commanding 47-17 half time lead.

During the second half of play the Hawks increased their 14 point lead to 39 points, 65-55. Harper then coasted on to the win, 74-49, but not before the Hawks emptied their bench and put every player in the scoring department.

Center Sue Hoday led the Hawks in scoring for the game top hitting for a total of 13 points. Hoday is a tough rebounder however she isn't as mobile as some of the other centers on the team.

Hoday, a 6' freshman out of Elk Grove High School, is expected to be one of the top rebounders on the squad according to her coach, Tom Teschner.

The other centers on the squad, Sue Mischler and Leanna Rose, each turned in respectable performances against Wright.

Mischler had eight points in the contest and is one of the teams to improve greatly.

"Sue didn't play half last year because she was transferred in," commented Head Coach Teschner. "She has a natural high jump and a very good shot. I'm looking for her to improve greatly as the season goes on.

Leanna Rose collected six points in the Wright game, all of those in the first half of play.

"Rose is a sophomore from Elk Grove High School," stated Coach Teschner. "Leanna played for us last year and she started quite a bit. Even though, she is still getting a lot better than last year and her defense alone has improved greatly."

Forward Kim Place had 10 points against Wright and she hit for 18 points against Illinois Valley days earlier.

Place, a freshman out of Fremd High School, is probably one of the best shooters on the team according to her coach.

Other top guards for the Hawks are Yin Westner and Mary Ann Larson. According to coach Teschner, both are good shooters and very quick.

Karen Demoss and Dianna Dieber are two of the teams to improve this year.

"Karen is a very fine defensive player back from last years team and she has also improved her shot from last year.

Diana scored nine points in the Wright game. She's a good scorer and probably one of the best all around players on the team. She is definitely the best guard I've ever had," commented Coach Teschner.

"This year we're trying to run two separate teams of five players each every five minutes," stated coach Teschner. "We're playing a lot of fast break this year. Joliet and Trion are both tough out."

think that we'll be right up on top fighting for the lead too.

"The over all attitude of the team is a lot better than last year and the girls are just fantastic. They do everything that I ask them to do and even more than that. They work themselves harder than any other team and it just goes to show how much they really want to win."

The girls play again tonight at home against Elgin. The game will tip off at 8 p.m.

By then, Dul will have a complete roster. And, oh, look out then.

Wrestling a surprise

What Kevin Rosdatcher doesn't know, didn't hurt him.

Rosdatcher won the 126-pound championship at the Whiteswater Invitational last Saturday. But, said coach Norm Lovelace, "he was a surprise to me. He wasn't supposed to place."

Nonetheless, Rosdatcher went 5-0 while advancing to the championship, and defeated the tourney's No. 1 seed in the first round.

All together, the Hawks went 2-3 at the tournament, which included only one two-year school, Harper.

"It's a tough tourney," admitted Lovelace, who has not only one wrestler win a championship at the Whiteswater invide. "We're getting better. But I had another kid quit on me and it's killing us."

Roger Baron won his first four matches in the 134-pound category, but lost to the eventual champion, 3-2.

Harper's Mike Reif, who doubles as Lovelace's assistant coach, won the 142-pound title with a 14-2 win over teammate Howard Leggett, 14-2. The Hawks almost pulled a 1-3-3 sweep in the 142-pound class, as Paul Laszkowski finished fourth.

Saturday, the Hawks will be at the Rock Valley Open. "It's not as tough as this tourney," said Lovelace, "but it's an important meet."

Hawks fast-break past Wright

by JOE KOST
 "We took it right to them and that really killed them," commented Dave Strawn after last Saturday's beating over Elgin, 88-57. "We just fast-broke them to death."
 Harper certainly did use the fast break in the very beginning of the game because with just over eight minutes gone in the contest, Harper had built up a 35-12 lead and already had the second string squad in the game.

At the halftime, Harper had doubled Elgin's score, 49-20. In the second half of the contest, the Hawks out scored Elgin 38-37. Most of Harper's second half scoring came from their bench as the Hawks went on to win the game, 88-57.

Earlier in the week, Harper took on Wright College and came out with an 88-66 victory

Basketball

Demetrius Gaines led the Hawks in scoring in both games against Wright. Gaines scored 21 points, 19 of those in the second half of the game.

"We were trying to get the ball inside in Demetrius more in the second half and it seems to have paid off well," stated Head Coach Roger Bechtold on Gaines' improvement in the second half of play.

Against Elgin, Gaines scored 17 points throughout the course of the game, and 10 of those came in the second half also.

Tim Murray had 11 points against Elgin and 14 points in the Wright contest.

The other half of the Murray brothers, Kevin, had six points in the Elgin contest while hitting for 11 points against Wright, 14 of those in the second half.

Fernando Goss collected eight points in the Elgin contest and was unable to play a lot because of early foul trouble that Goss found himself in. Goss nabbed 14 points in the Wright game.

Dave Strawn hit the net for seven points against Elgin and 15 points against Wright.

"As of now, I don't think that we're getting the respect and recognition that we deserve," commented Coach Bechtold. "We're going to have to build up a lot of that on ourselves in order to get ready for the Trison and DuPage games.

One bad note for the Hawks this season is that Demetrius Gaines will not be returning to the squad for the second semester. And that will be a big loss.

"I just wish that people would come out to see us play," added Coach Bechtold. "We've got a good team and I think that a lot of people would be impressed with us."

The Hawks play tonight at home against Moraine Valley. Game time tips off at 7:30 p.m.

never completed in. "He went crazy," said Eul.

Eul has been followed by Mike Sheridan, his distance man. Jeff Knepper (breaststroke), Jim Soja (Mike's brother), and diver Bob Olson.

"Jim is just as versatile as his brother," said Eul. "We're trying to cover the 500- and 1,000-yard events without Sheridan."

Sheridan, said Eul, could be his best swimmer, alongside Soja. Zwierynsky (who is also known as simply "Z") and Waks. They will join the team before next semester.

As for the women, well, it was another case for the "Not Bad for a First Try" file.

The women, in their first meet of the season, took home third-place at the Lincoln Invite.

"They looked real, real good," said Eul. "To say the least, I was impressed with their performances."

Carra Westdale went the 200-free in 2:17.1, seconds off the national qualifying time, and won the 100-free. She was the

Basketball looking awesome

by JOE KOST

Amazing!
 It was just totally amazing!
 Last Saturday Harper gave out an embarrassing defeat to Elgin, 88-57. For those of you that aren't considered a wiz at math, that was a 32 point victory for the Hawks.

The amazing part of the whole slaughter was that a wain 1 Harper's first string players that gave Elgin the heaviest part of the pounding, it was the Hawks second, third, fourth, and maybe even fifth string squads that hit the court hard.

When the first string squad was on the court, it looked as though DePaul was talking on a group of second graders that had just taken a one week course in "basic games." Seriously, Harper looked fierce, hungry, and just over all fantastic on the floor.

Mark Monckton came into the game off the bench to score 9 points for the Hawks. Skip Louzi, Keith Miller and Pete Kaminski each came into the contest to score four points apiece and display how much depth Harper has resting on its bench.

Jerald Lewis came into the game and showed the crowd why his nickname is "Muggs." Lewis passed the ball rather effectively in the game, and really intimidated Elgin with two of his behind the back passes.

As far as Harper's first string squad is concerned, a good word to describe their latest would be "lustrous!"

While most players are starting to feel the fatigue and weariness of the second half of play, Demetrius Gaines is just starting to come alive. Gaines collected 10 of his game high 17 points in the second half of play. Earlier in the week, Gaines hit for 19 of his 31 points in the second half against Wright.

Commentary

Demetrius also registered one of the games most exciting plays. His slam-dunk stuff in the final quarter of play, really silenced the Elgin bench.

Tim Murray, one of the best all-around players on the squad, hit for 11 points against Elgin and played a fantastic defensive game.

Kevin Murray, Tim's brother, teared the net for a mere six points. Quite a difference from the 18 points he had collected against Wright a few days earlier.

Fernando Goss. Now with a name like that you know he has got to be good. Goss found himself in early foul trouble and had to leave the game early with only eight points, all in the first half.

Dave Strawn, the last of Harper's starting five, collected seven points in the contest. Dave may not be a scoring power but if anything, Dave is the electricity that keeps the Hawks buzzing right along, victory after victory.

This year Harper possesses a deep bench of talent and that will help them out when they run into teams like Trison and Joliet. Okay, so maybe the Hawks aren't "lustrous." Every team has its faults here and there and of course Harper has theirs. Just give our coach a week or so maybe, if I think real hard I'll come up with one or two. But just to be on the safe side, please don't hold your breath. I could take a long time to find one.

Video Studio puts students in spotlight

by HOLLY KUTLER
The camera rooms in Streams of penetrating heat from the glaring lights are felt traveling from one's head to their toes.

Most students have surely envisioned what it might be like to be "up there," the face on the television screen and the name long etched in everyone's hearts. Hollywood may be a little out of reach, but Harper College Video Studio is a start. A memorable experience, and no match in the situational learning which goes on in the classroom. One must experience it.

A warning—once deciding to sit in on one of their meetings, it's very easy to end up becoming one of the permanent fixtures, so it can become very addicting.

Meetings are held every Wednesday at 3:30 in Bigg Five (Chuck Swan, student president/production coordinator) mentions that although no experience in the area itself is required, there are general requirements to become a member, interest and dedication.

This being the second semester that the club has really been in full swing, according to Swan, has proven to be most successful, as presently there is a good 13 or 14 participating members (Genuine excitement is definitely affluant throughout one's involvement).

The great job that the group has tackled thus far was the rock concert taped last summer which is scheduled to be aired sometime in the near future. A local rock band was called upon to perform, and the show's host was none other than Vincent Van Darian, whose work as D.J. and actor has made him well known in the entertainment industry.

Another such project in the works is an interview with Congressman Phillip Crane to be hosted by Curt Renz and is planned to be shown again fairly soon.

A piece which was in production for months, and has been closely followed by the Harper community, was the long awaited Christmas special. Debuting to us at the Harper Video Variety Show, this program included such items as a musical act and a comedy sketch.

There is no doubt that this provides fun entertainment for people behind the scenes as well as those whom view the finished product, however, it has also proven to be educationally stimulating as well.

If given an ample amount of time, the students, instructor and production staff can blend their talents to create an educational feature for a specific class. Students have sought out the video club in the past, as means of contracting a project for a course. In place of the typical term paper.

It must first be agreed upon by instructor, student and video club so that everyone has a full understanding as to his or her responsibility.

Even though the time needed to complete a video program often turns out to be 3 times that of the time involved with a term paper which Swan points out, the creativity which serves as a backbone to a student's project, adds dimension to their academic abilities and goes rewarded with far better grades.

Having progressed quite a bit from where the club was at this time last year, they have a wide range of selections in store for Harper, in a hopeful attempt to treat the post holiday blues.

Some such areas up in air is a possible magic and comedy special, also pieces to promote various clubs on campus. But right now, in an effort to create a broader reputation for themselves, they are looking for melior, interesting and singers to form bands for a spring production. Any interested parties are encouraged to contact them, their extension.

Report recommends cafe overhaul

by MORA NORTON
A general overhaul of the Food Service Department and cafeteria operations, which has lost more than $200,000 in the last twelve years, has been recommended by a consulting firm hired by the Harper Board of Trustees.

Paul Marwick Mitchell and Co., the firm hired by Harper to investigate the ongoing deficit reported food services lost $207,000, an average of $20,000 per year, including the cost of heat, light and energy for food preparation.

The firm received $25,000 for the report which examines the organization, financial performance, food service operations and marketing aspects of food services.

The consultants found room for improvement in every aspect of the operation from management to menu in reorganization of the kitchen, some of the recommendations include:

- Analysis of customer buying
- Competitive bidding on food purchasing
- Standardization of portions served
- Analysis and updating of food costs regularly
- Offering selections that appeal to student tastes
- Maximizing student satisfaction and structuring services to meet customer needs.
- Possibly reopening a snack bar with items not competitive with the cafeteria.

The report also pointed out that the cafeteria does not serve standard portions, a possible contributing factor to the operating deficit. The consultants also recommended standard recipes to be drawn up and followed to assure consistent quality of prepared foods.

Specifically, the consulting firm recommends menu changes for the cafeteria including:

- A deflection in the serving line
- Free coffee during examination.
- The opening of the snack bar on the second floor to provide fast food snack items.

The report singled out the hamburger as being particularly low quality.

A food department that produces poor hamburger will have a poor reputation. The hamburger at Harper College is overcooked, is high in fat and has no garnish or condiments.

In the area of organization, recommendations are that responsible administrators work together more closely on operations of department heads and employees, work load and performance evaluations.

Financially, recommendations are that the college set a policy on the level of financial performance expected, such as:

- Break-even at operations loss
- Break-even at operations plus energy and maintenance cost level, or
- Break-even at operations, plus energy and maintenance level, plus indirect cost allocation level.

Since the opening of Harper College Food Services has not been considered a profitable part of the school.

"I was not on the board at that time," said Brian Baruch, chairman of the Board of Trustees, "but from the time the college was founded, the food service has been subsidized or supported as a benefit to the student. It has not been until the past year or two when finances have become tighter, that the board has become concerned about the financial picture."

Food services was not responsible in the administration until December of 1979, said Dr. James D. Perry, vice president of administrative services.

"That is when we requested an audit," he said.

"I believe the philosophy at one time was the cafeteria and dining room was a trifle benefit. It was to provide a service," he said.

"Since the management report came out in August, there is a greater awareness of what is happening in the food services department."

"We are doing better," much better. People are more cognizant of the necessity of keeping track of what is being spent and taken in. They are more aware of the utilization of an employee's time. They are cognizant of the bidding process now and the placing of competitive bids to retain quality and save money," he said.

"A major delay in carrying out the recommendations of the management report occurred when food services director Clifford Weser resigned in the labor

"We had no idea he was going to leave," said Perry. "Cliff gave no indication about that and gave every indication he would help us try to solve the problem, but apparently he received an offer he couldn't turn down."

Weser denied that he left as a result of the Paul Marwick management report.

"I really was planning to leave," Weser said.

"The report didn't scare me away. I left for personal reasons. I supposed over a year ago that a study be made

The report was dynamic in terms of what needs to be done. The suggestions are all good. The recommendations that were made were in keeping with professional food service philosophy."

An article in the food service department which appeared in the Sun Times in late November was unflinching, said Weser.

"I think it was a poor article. It took a lot of journalistic scare tactics. The article did not accurately explain that a year ago that a study be made

Deficit here, others okay

Several community colleges with food service operations similar to Harper's have managed to break even or keep losses to a minimum.

According to Lucille Sutton, food services manager at Joliet, there has never been a deficit at the college since it opened 10 or 12 years ago.

"We have never had a problem. We usually run in the black even with slow months like June, July, August and December," she said.

Food services manager Rich Archer of DuPage County College said his food service lines break even.

The past history is that we have lost some money. We are probably going to lose a couple of hundred dollars by the end of the fiscal year.

"About 8 or 9 years ago, we lost about $10 to $12,000. Right now we are in the process of evaluating the complete price of our menus. We have not increased our prices for two years," Archer said.

Trifton's new food services manager Howard Kilesel admitted that the college had been losing money before he was hired in June.

"We did lose money. I don't know how much—I'd rather not say," he said.

"I have been here since the first of June. Right now we're breaking even, holding our own. I hope we will break even by the end of the fiscal year," he said.

Activity cards more than paper now

In an age of skyrocketing prices and shrinking dollars, it is refreshing to know that someone is letting people know exactly what their dollars can get them.

Although long on the drawing board, Student Senate and Student Activities personnel finally made arrangements to have an explanation of the mandatory student activity fee printed on the back of the student activity cards.

Now, instead of wondering exactly where the mandatory student activity fee goes, students need only flip over the card to be clued in to the benefits available to them. True, nothing ever prevented students from knowing before, except for the "long" walk to the Student Activities Office or the strenuous phone call to the office. With the information available at just the flick of the wrist there is no excuse for "blissful ignorance" on the student's part.

For too long the activity card has been a meaningless piece of paper to students. Now, at long last, it is worth much more than the paper that it is printed on.

Senate provides free service

Student Senate is providing free legal advice from practicing attorneys to full and part-time students who pay an activity fee. The service is located in the Student Activities Office, Bldg. A338, adjacent to the Game Room. An attorney will be available on Wednesday afternoons from 1 to 4:30 p.m. The service begins this week and will continue through the semester each Wednesday except on holidays. Students should make an appointment in advance by calling 242 or 243, or by coming into the Student Activities Office. Students without appointments can see the attorney on a walk-in basis, time permitting. The intent of the service is to help educate students to recognize their legal problems and to facilitate their resolution. Students must be aware that the attorney will not actually provide legal representation for them during the above hours. Instead, the attorney will answer questions on whatever problems the student has, and how their question/problem can best be resolved.

For further information, contact Jeanne Pankann, Bldg. A338.

Letters to the Editor

Student sounds off over prof's style

Dear Mr. Powell,
Your class has been one of the hardest for me to attend. By hardest I mean most uncomfortable. From the first day I entered your class you made the whole class uncomfortable by telling us that many of us should not be here and that you would be happy to cut down the class size. Obviously, following your plan the class began to shrink. A woman who sat next to me never showed up again after the dictionary test because of embarrassment. We, a few who care, grieved for her because it is hard enough to come back to school let alone find that your teacher doesn't care if you do. During the semester, two more of us almost dropped out but only through each other's encouragement were we able to hold on.

I came back to school to learn. I earn my grades through a lot of hard work and sometimes I don't understand why my grade is what they should be. If I can't understand, I go home and try to find what I did wrong so that I won't repeat the same mistake. I've never given up doing any task no matter how hard it was but have never come so close as this time.
I endured forty hours for eight years and thought that no one could be meaner than a man as a teacher. My feelings toward a good teacher is that when I score a low grade I have offended him as well as myself. There is no care in your class, nothing to grab onto, no one to go to for help only a highly perfected form of sarcasm I had intended to take a philosophy or poetry course but have been scared away from them. A teacher is to instill the love of his subject not jam it down students' throats.

I have never felt this strongly about a class. My husband is a teacher at Harper and I have some knowledge as to how class preparation and subject matter should be handled. I read some of the business essays my husband has to grade and can feel the difference between a well written essay and a badly written essay.
This doesn't give me a license to criticize but as a student I feel a tremendous loss in not being able to share in all that wonderful knowledge you possess.

As a class we could try to learn to appreciate any type of literature if it's not beyond our reach. To learn knowledge must be a little above us but no so far that we cannot even touch it.
Sometimes, when a teacher has taught many years, he forgets the values he had formed when he first began teaching. Maybe the time has come for reflections, for there are many young minds that can be awakened to the importance

Columnist wrong about California

Dear Editor,
In response to the December issue of the Harbinger on why Californians need to strengthen themselves and I have lived in Missouri and New Jersey. I have lived in California for the past nine years. Mr. Hankins expressed his views on California and I urge you not look at his article too seriously. He did an excellent job of stereotyping the people, he makes us seem like a bunch of fruit loops. He has a serious and ugly attitude toward California. It one looks for the people he described they can be found but they can be found in any state. California is not only diverse and has some of the most beautiful weather I have ever seen. I feel privileged to live there with the beautiful mountains, reduced forests, and lakes. If Mr. Hankins doesn't have to go there, I hope that the fact I drive a Volkswagen and take yogurt, nuts and berries won't be held against me. While I'm writing in Illinois.

Campus suicides lower than previously thought

(CPS)—Suicide among college students is not at the relatively high rates that most experts previously thought, according to a recent study.

Two researchers, Allen Schwartz and Clifford B. Reifer, now assert that the incidence of suicide is "significantly lower" among college students than among non-student 20-to-24 year olds.

The researchers' findings contrast most previous studies, which showed the suicide rate among students to be anywhere from 11 to 30 times higher than among others of the same age group. Schwartz and several student health officials, however, concede that suicide rates are difficult to measure and that even this study may be slanted by under-reporting.

"There are so many ways people can commit suicide and not have it detected," points out Dr. Randolph Catlin, director of Harvard's psychiatric clinic. "Some ways are obvious, and some ways are completely hidden."

"It's not hard to know if somebody takes a gun and shoots himself," says Yale psychiatrist Robert Arnstein, "but if he falls off a cliff, he may have been just a bad rock climber."

Schwartz, a psychiatrist at the University of Rochester, adds that insurance policies — companies don't pay in suicide cases — and religious or family stigmas against self-destruction may also cause under-reporting of suicide.

Yet Schwartz and Reifer believe their study — if it indeed a suicide rate of seven in 100,000 versus 17.5 in 100,000 among all 20-to-24 year olds — is more accurate than the previous research.

Schwartz claims earlier studies were flawed by a "non-random sampling of time." The studies, he says, tend to occur just after an abnormal number of suicides happen.

Campus suicides, in fact, do tend to come in bunches. A University of New Mexico research project into suicide began early in 1980 after two UNM Hospital staffers killed themselves within five months of each other in a two-week period during spring, 1980. There were five suicides at the University of Florida.

These kinds of statistical "abnormalities," Schwartz contends, help swell estimates of college suicide rates. Yale's Arnstein agrees. "The actual rate is almost impossible to figure out," he says. "If you count one or don't count one, that makes a tremendous difference."

Schwartz also attributes prior notions of high college suicide rates to the kinds of campuses studied. Those notions came from "information coming from schools like Harvard, Berkeley and Yale, where the rates are higher."

But Arnstein says suicide is uncommon at Yale. "We have one about every other year," while Harvard's Catlin doesn't know the figures. "These are not figures schools tend to publish."

In claiming that "student suicide rates aren't really different from those of other people of the same age group," Schwartz is consistent with a growing suspicion that stressful academic pressures may not be as emotionally disfiguring as previously thought.

"It really isn't fair to implicate the university completely," says L. Thomas Cummings, Arizona State's director of student mental health services. He says academic stress is more a "validating factor" than a "primary" motive for suicide.

Report food service weaknesses

was a management report based upon things that needed to be done.

The article in the Sun Times stated that it was all my fault. The problem began long before I got there. I was only there for three years.

Shortage of data processing personnel to implement changes and lack of finances made it difficult to implement some of the recommendations, said Vener.

"I think the board should sit on the board where the responsibility is. The public ought to ask what kind of responsibility the board had. The report said we were not doing a lot of things, but total responsibility was not food service. The food service does not operate in a vacuum."

Mrs. Betty Lewis is the acting food services director at present.

A search committee composed of Mrs. Lewis, Dr. Charles T. Harrington, dean of instruction, Anna A. Dolejs, director of finance, Lou Burchard, associate instructor of food services and Dr. Donald T. Sedik, professor of management is currently conducting interviews.

Several candidates were interviewed and a decision will probably be made in the next week or so, said Perry. After the search committee makes its choice, the board of trustees makes the final decision on the candidate.

Why not try the Game room?

So you've got close to 2 hours to kill before your next class begins? If you're like many, who have an untapped niche of lacking Chicago winds, and so would rather pass up that trip to McDonald's for lunch, and have surrendered to the idea of "once again" studying, and are even all cradled over "All My Children," what else does Harper have up it's sleeve to cater to those hard working students?

Why not try your hand at playing a little pool or a game of chess in the game room, located at the upper level in the A Bldg. Join over 80 people each day, of whom approximately 25% are female students and the majority of all players are considered regulars. To avoid the crowds, you should probably count on getting there before 11 or after 1, as between those hours it looks more like a Saturday at Woodfield mall, since a good portion of students have alerted that time in their schedule for lunch.

Hours are 8-4 Monday thru Thursday and hours of 3-1 on Friday. No charge for chess set rentals is required, however your student activity card will be held with an employee during that time you play. There is a fee of $1.50 an hour to all pool players. A minimum of 2 people must be at each table, with no more than 4 players. Your money will be going directly back into the game center, through the salaries of those employees and towards the maintenance of its equipment.

Although, some take it rather seriously, others have found it to be an especially great way of meeting people. The freezing temperatures may also put a temporary freeze on your brain, so if you want to relax for a while, come and enjoy the game room.

Harper deficit solvable

Elgin Community College went from a $30,000 loss in two years to a gain of almost $100,000 said Phil Nake, director of food services here.

"Two years previous to the last fiscal year, I inherited about a $30,000 debt, one year a little over $20,000 and another year a little over $10,000," he said.

Last year we did a lot of cost studies and menu studies in the fiscal year of 79-80. We came out in the black a little below $10,000.

"The Vice President of Business Administration and I established our own accounting system," he said.

Zuke's experience in hotels and chains also helped him in setting up the system.

"We have reduced prices a little this year to get the cost effectiveness back to the student. Our goal financially is zero to $3000 ahead."

In addition to the cafeteria, Elgin has a snack bar that serves hamburgers, hot dogs, snacks and chips.

"Our snack bar loses, but we view the snack bar as a service for the college community."

Strong controls and a watch on merchandising and promotion are the secret to profits, Zuke said.

"I might add," he said, "in defense of Harper and Cliff, that it really is a hassle to run the food service. Community colleges have a harder time because they don't have a captive audience."

"Altered States" a new science fiction thriller

by PETE WICKLUND
I've seen the east, and believe me, when it's all over there are no peppy gates. Actually, what I really saw was an interpretation of how "if all ends" through "Altered States" a new film directed by Ken Russell ("Tommy"), "Women in Love" from a Paday Chayetsky "Networks," "The Hospital" screen play "Altered States" is not solely about where we go after death in fact the after death is only one of many implied ideas within the film. Also represented in Hell, Heaven Adam and Eve, and primal man, among things.

"Altered States" is the story of a Harvard professor, Edoardo Jessup, played brilliantly by unknown William Hurt, who with the help of a drug imported from a Mexican Indian tribe, an isolation tank, and after coming the help of his posited wife, Blair Brown, and a couple of Harvard colleagues, goes off on a "trip" to find answers to life's "unanswered questions." What results is that Dr. Jessup has come across a fantastic discovery. This discovery proves to be much more than just another weird, psychotic "bad trip" from an overdose of Mexican mushrooms. Apparently Dr. Jessup has come across another dimension, a dimension that holds the secrets of life, death and the evolution of man. What's more bizarre is that Dr. Jessup brings this experience back to reality with him. This dimension, or power, or whatever it is, also produces fantastic amounts of energy so powerful that the others in Dr. Jessup's experimenting group also experience a life phenomenon, though they're not always willing to admit it. Russell handles the transition of the past to the special effects "transformations" masterfully. The film is also structured so that many surprises present themselves throughout the story. To divulge these surprises might ruin some of the initial "shock" for the viewer, but a big clue is genetic regression.

Film review

What is important for viewers of "Altered States" is not to stereotype the film from the onset. Some of the surprises may have the viewer believing he is in store for another of those awful horror or suspense films that have plagued the screen in recent months. This is not so. True there is an element of horror in the film. The same is true for suspense. But there is also the classic story of the handsome young scientist who lets his seemingly evil work take over his entire life. And there is the love story of Dr. Jessup and his wife and how Jessup's adamant attitude about his work begins to tear their relationship apart, but ultimately brings them closer together.

The Russell-Chayetsky collaboration, which apparently wasn't always roses during the filming, has conceived a brilliant film, one of our equal caliber, to Stanley Kubrick's 2001. The film is ultimately Russell's. Russell replaced Arthur Penn as director and reportedly changed the original screen play so much that it angered Chayetsky's changed name for the credits.

The film is extremely fast paced to the point where viewers may think they have been sitting only a few minutes through the standard length feature. However this fast pace might be the only short coming in the film. The story is supposed to entail a period of a dozen years beginning in the late 1960's. Character's costumes, hair styles, change little through this sequence and age unconvincingly. Still, more damaging may be that some of the scenes from the early days are shot in the street where the surroundings were not made to look late 1960's or early 1970ish. At one point in the film which is supposedly 1972 or so, a 1978 Cadillac drives by. Still the film that until an inevitable second viewing.

The film easily overcomes the time problem with outstanding, mind-boggling visual effects and with superior acting. One may get frustrated with trying to comprehend parts of the dialogue, or one may derive different viewpoints about Dr. Jessup's trips, but no one will leave the theatre disappointed. One will probably find themselves thinking and talking about this film for a long time to come. "Altered States" which is rated R opens tomorrow at Woodfield and throughout the Chicago area.

See it all in Berkeley, California

I suppose that I'm lucky because I get to travel across the United States and back, many times. But, after my last trip to Berkeley, California, I think I've seen it all.

Berkeley, as you know, is hippie heaven. All good hippies live there if they've been good hippies all of their life. Some people say that Berkeley is actually hippie hell, but I would have to disagree.

Anywhere in Berkeley, you can find any type of drug your hippie heart desires. You can even find some drugs that some hippies haven't tried, only because some other hippies have just invented them.

Oh, you say that I'm being too critical of my fellow man. You say, just because I have short hair, and the hippies

Mike Simkus
... abstract analyst

have long hair, my opinions of hippies are unjustified. Well, it's not true.

"Hey, man. Can I use your job?" Said a bleary-eyed, wabbling hippie to my friend who was sitting on the front porch steps of the house, where my friend rents a room, to go to school at the University of California-Berkeley.

"No, I rent a room here, and the owner has house rules," said my friend very curtly.

The hippie continued to wobble in front of my friend. The hippie didn't say a word, he just stared. "I suppose stared is not the right word. The best word would be somnambulated."

"Hey, what the hell do you want?" said my friend annoyed by the wabbling hippie.

"Hey, man. You wouldn't mind if I peed on the side of the house, would you man?" said the hippie.

My friend was speechless. My friend was a man to this type of behavior. You know, you just don't see this type of thing on T.V.

After much thinking by my friend, he uttered to the hippie, "You better get the hell out of here."

The hippie said softly, "Be cool. Be cool."

Ah, you say that's only one case, right?

I look & walk down the infamous Telegraph Ave. A hippie stopped me and asked, "Got a dime, nickel, or a quarter?"

Very quickly I thought how much it would cost me each time I gave any hippie on Telegraph some spare change. I decided that the toll was too steep, and resorted to my favorite retaliatory phrase.

I usually use the phrase when being hounded by the moonies, or the bare-kristmas in the airports. And the phrase, nine times out of ten, works.

I said, "How do you sleep?"

The hippie pointed to the sewer cap.

I was dumbfounded. What do you say to that? Ah, yes, the only thing you can say.

I said, "If you test my urine for diabetes, I've got a nickel."

"The hippie said, "What? Are you crazy, man?"

"Okay, so you're still not convinced, right? Here's my last piece of evidence.

Underneath Sather Gate, (The entrance to U.C.), a man dressed in a Nazi uniform was practicing his nazi speeches. He said things like "Die is de end. Only you can stop Trotsky."

Perhaps you didn't know, but Trotsky has been dead since 1940.

Well, I'm glad I'm back home. I'm glad I go to school at Harper, and not the University of California-Berkeley.

You know, if the Rusky's do drop the bomb, like Rommie's people are telling us that they will, let's hope it's on Berkeley, California.

The Kings fare well with debut album

With the release of the "Kings Are Here," the double song hit, "The Beat Goes On/Switchin' to Glide" has been riding high on the charts ever since. The Kings are David Diamond, Sonny Keyes, Aryan Zero and Max Styles.

Until recently discovered by Bob Erwin, who took it upon himself to produce their premiere album, this Canadian group has been performing in bars and nightclubs. Erwin had just finished working on Pink Floyd's "The Wall" when he happened to chance by when the Kings were rehearsing a production studio. He assisted the group with his creative force and in adding the right techniques that is so apparent.

I listened to the Kings responses from questions being barraged from an ever eager college radio crowd at the Loyola Radio National Conference held in November. With tape recorders in hand the hippie college beings fired somewhat stily and repetitive questions. David Diamond, the leader of the group, responded mildly saying that he felt great but their album was doing so well that, yes, Beat Goes On/Switchin' to Glide was planned to be released as a double song mix and that they will be going on tour in January. If these questions were not enough, some geeks in the back of the room just had to ask them if the group "partied."

Curt Ackman on music

"Their music is described as 'best rock' and it seems this term seems to fit appropriately. Other cuts on the album that deserve praise are "My Habit" that tells of their urging desire to play and perform music and "Run Shoes Running" another harmonious heavy that chants that we are in a race with time and society.

Watch for their next album and if it compares with the first, I believe the "Kings Are Here" to stay.

Dynasty ahead for Eull - maybe

Harper may finally have a sporting dynasty. Well, maybe. Before I develop my thesis further, let me first define the word "dynasty," an unfamiliar word as Chicago-area sports fans might be.

As unfamiliar with the word as I am, I turned to my trusty Merriam-Webster pocket dictionary where (on page 155 for reference) "dynasty" is defined as "a powerful group or family that maintains its positions for a considerable time."

To become better familiar with the word, let us look at some real-life examples, and more familiar real-life non-examples of "dynasty."

The Cubs are not a dynasty. The White Sox are not a dynasty.

The New York Yankees are a dynasty.

The Bears used to be a dynasty.

The Green Bay Packers used to be a dynasty.

The Pittsburgh Steelers are a dynasty (before this season, anyway).

The Black Hawks are not a dynasty.

Mike Bambach

...on sports

The Montreal Canadiens are a dynasty.

The Bulls are not a dynasty. The Boston Celtics are a dynasty.

The Philadelphia 76'ers are a dynasty. The Philadelphia Flyers are not a dynasty.

John Carter is not a dynasty.

John Geich tries to be a dynasty (sorry, I couldn't resist).

Iron is not a dynasty. Ancient Rome was a dynasty.

Okay, now that dynasty has been sufficiently defined in the sporting sense, I will continue my thesis, which read: Harper may finally have a sporting dynasty.

That dynasty, or potential dynasty, is the men's swim team. First-year coach Steve Eull has his team at 3-0 in dual meets so far, plus a fifth-place team finish the state Division

III swimming championships. Not bad for a two-year, NJCAA's member community college.

It might be considered impressive, even ironic, a first-year program turning in such a remarkable performance under a first-year coach.

It is not, however. Successful first-year programs are no longer a novelty. Neither is that of successful first-year coaches. In fact, it is becoming a time-worn theme that is losing its singularity.

Last year, both of the two first-year coaches, one from a first-year program and the other from an established program, turned in very impressive first-year numbers.

A brief review: Soccer coach Sander Szabo, in his first-year, took the first-year soccer program to an 11-4 record, runner-up in the state playoffs, and an NJCAA Midwest Regional playoff berth. It was, at that point in Harper sporting history, the best performance by a first-year program, as well as a first-year coach.

Enter Wally Reynolds, baseball coach. Reynolds took a freshman-oriented squad to a 3-10 record (overall) in his first year as a coach. At that time, it was the best record (overall) for a first-year coach.

Now there is Eull, 3-0 and a Division III title in his pocket. The NJCAA's haven't even rolled around yet. The anticipation of what Eull could still accomplish this season is staggering. But it is only a beginning. Time has a way of replacing enthusiasm with cynicism. The novelty wears off. Suddenly, there are weaknesses found in what seemed an invincible sporting machine.

So was the case this fall when the soccer team breezed through an undefeated regular-season and still flat in the first-round of the state playoffs. These were the pre-season favorites to win the state title, and suddenly—nothing. Admittedly, it wasn't entirely unexpected. But it was so sudden.

Eull does have the ingredients of a junior college swimming power: only three other schools in the entire state — Dupage, Lincoln, and Wright — compete in swimming. Eull also has the benefit of a jewel of a facility, a ton of local talent to recruit from, and, yes the novelty of having a successful first-year program. That novelty is a nice intangible — none of the established swimming powers' know what to expect from Harper — but Eull won't have that again.

A final item, that will probably work in Eull's favor: Harper's athletic policy isn't whether you win or lose, but how many athletes from area high schools got to play. This will be, in fact, an advantage to Eull, who will be able to recruit freely from what is debatably the best area in the Midwest for high school swimming.

Now, with the most important ingredients gathered, it will be just a matter of time before Eull has a dynasty — maybe.

Students still think campus protests 'have a place'

(CPS)—A survey of students at 153 colleges and universities nationwide suggests the American student body still believes campus protests of the status were worthwhile.

Of the 937 responses to the survey sponsored by Embart, Inc., a "manufacturing" firm based in Connecticut, 80 percent agreed that a "laughable gain was achieved by the campus protest in the 1960s." Over 84 percent believe that student demonstrations "have a place on college campuses today."

In terms of their own futures, the respondents generally looked forward to the new decade. Only two percent expected to be unhappy in the next few years, while 63 percent said they expected to be happy in the 1980s.

John Budd, an Embart spokesman, said he was surprised to find that students were not as conservative as other reports have indicated. He noted that 73 percent of the students feel that large corporations have "too much influence" in the United States, and that over half think that large corporations should be regulated more strictly by the federal government.

Embart's questionnaire, developed in conjunction with the Foundation of Student Communications in New Jersey, was sent to 200,000 students, most of whom were upperclass liberal arts majors. Budd had no explanation for the small response of only 327 to his queries.

Harper welcomes Triton with blistering defeat

by JOE KOST
Last Monday night the Triton Trojans came to Harper to play a basketball game.

They came with their power all 113 record that speaks for itself and rather loudly too. They came with an unblemished 4-0 conference record.

They came with a firm grip on first place in the 'AC' and hopes of a conference championship.

They came with their fans, parents, students, friends and other allies that would help cheer them on.

They came with thoughts that beating Harper would be no major task.

They came just the same as Triton came to Harper several months ago in a football game where Harper was supposed to bow over and let the Trojans win. But Harper didn't bow over and they pulled off one of the biggest upsets in the season of football.

And yes, once again Triton came to Harper in attempts of beating a team that they were rated over.

And once again Harper was waiting to pull off another upset.

Harper turned in one of its finest performances all season by pounding Triton into the ground, 69-36.

Triton never really seemed to be in the game at all, at least the Hawks made it seem that way.

Harper controlled everything

Commentary

Throughout the course of the game, Harper out ran, rebounded, passed, shot, and most of all, out clamed the favored Trojans.

Sue Hoday, gave the Hawks on top in the first quarter by connecting 5 of Harpers 15 points.

Maryann Larsen may have turned in the finest performance of her career against Triton. Larsen pumped nine points through the net in the second quarter to give the Hawks an enjoyable 10 point lead at half time, 27-17.

Harper increased their lead to 20 points in the third quarter on key baskets by Hoday, Cheryl O'Hara and Deanna Deiber.

Harper seemed to slack off a bit in the fourth quarter but when you're winning by 20 points, its rather hard to keep a killer instinct to score.

Hoday lead Harper in scoring with 17 points. Hoday was also a very pleasant surprise on the court after missing out on some games due to an illness. Hoday hustled up and down the court and lead both teams in rebounds.

Maryann Larsen played what might be called an excellent game. Her 18 points displayed that Larsen can also score besides just the steady rebounding that she has been known for.

Cheryl O'Hara pumped in 11 points after coming into the contest off of the bench. For a few minutes in the second quarter, O'Hara had four points, one assist, three rebounds and four steals.

Deanna Deiber also turned in an excellent performance bringing the ball down the court and leading the team to several key scores. Deiber added 10 points to the Hawks effort and also had several assists.

Sue Mischler put four points up on the boards for Harper but her talent in the rebounding department helped the Hawks out greatly.

Karen Demoss assisted with talent in the Harper win also by adding seven points and several assists.

A surprising note for the Hawks in the game is that Kim Place saw a limited time of action. Place is one of the Hawks top scorers and all-around players and her missing from the lineup could really have been a fatal mistake.

"I don't really know why I didn't play more," commented Place on her absence from the game. "My shot wasn't on exact target and I think that may have been the reason."

As of now the female Hawks are in the same situation as their ally male Hawks. Both need to go undefeated in their conference for the remainder of the season in order to clinch a championship.

"I think that we can win the conference if we just play as good as we did last night," commented VV Weidner. "We know that we can beat Juliet

"IT'S THE MOST POINTS I've ever scored in my life," commented Maryann Larsen on her 18 points last Tuesday by Harper's 69-36 victory over Triton.

even though we lost, we still should have won that game."

"Our only real problem is if we have trouble with Juliet but outside of that I think that we're on our way," said

Weidner.

Thursday night the girls will play at home in a conference game against Illinois Valley. The game will start at 5:30.

Gymnastics teams strives for perfection

by JOE KOST

Striving for perfection is the goal of every gymnast.

Harper began their strive last Friday in their first conference meet of the season.

Despite shining performances by the Hawks, Harper finished behind Triton in the meet, 79 to 70. Daplage finished third in the conference meet.

The main factor that hurt the Hawks and forced them to finish in second place rather than first, was the rule that makes each team enter four girls into each event. Since Harper's roster was recently cut down to just five girls, they are forced to take 6's in events and that affects the score.

Mary Reckert and Denise Brewer, both freshmen from area high schools, were forced to resign from the talented squad days before their first meet because of requirement rules.

Of the 12 ribbons given out in the meet, (three different place ribbons in four separate events), Harper walked away with five of them.

Sandy Colgiater, a returning sophomore from last year's squad, placed second in the vault scoring a 6.6 by the judges.

Colgiater placed first in the uneven bars competition. Her score on the bars was a 6.5.

Mary Beth Black, one of the most graceful gymnasts on the team, placed first on the balance beam competitions. Last year Black went to the national championship for her performance on the balance beam and this year seems to be showing improvement over the championship work from last year.

Black also finished third in the floor competition. Black received a score of 5.00 for her performances as a floor dancer.

Another returning sophomore for the Hawks this season is Cindy Curtis. Curtis also went to the national championship last year but her performance was in the floor routine.

Curtis took second in the floor show with a score of 5.2.

Both Curtis and Black would have received higher scores for their performances in the floor routine but the change in rules has made the scoring different. This year the judges are going according to Olympic rules which state that certain moves and maneuvers must be completed in the routines and in certain order.

This is Curtis' first year on the balance beam and according to coach Linda Mustari, "she is improving all of the time."

Harper will compete tomorrow night when they'll travel to Triton to face the Trojans in a rematch. Also appearing in the meet at Triton will be Oakton and Waboussac.

After the Triton meet, Harper's gymnists will have a week off and then travel to Oakton to face Triton once again and Truman college, January 25.

The Hawks will then travel to Kishwaukee on February 6 to face Elgin and Oakton.

The N.J.A.A. Regional Championship will be held on February 14. The meet place has not yet been determined.

GYMNAST CINDY CURTIS works on perfect pose during practice. Curtis placed second in the floor routine in last Friday's gymnastic meet.

Intramurals Basketball leagues forming

The Harper College Intramural Department is sponsoring two basketball leagues this winter. One league will be on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 8 p.m. and the other league will be on Friday afternoons at 2 p.m. Due to facility availability we can only have six teams in each league for a total of 12 teams. The first six teams to turn in their roster for each league will be accepted into that league. After the leagues are full, other teams will be put on a waiting list. Roster forms are available in the P.E. and recreation office in Building M. Individual players may sign up at the same office to have a chance to be added to a team's roster. All participants must be Harper College students, faculty or staff. Each team must designate a captain. Varsity players are not eligible. The Friday afternoon league will begin on Friday, January 30, 1991, at 2 p.m. with the Tuesday/Thursday league beginning on Tuesday evening February 17, 1991 at 6 p.m. Rosters may also be picked up in the P.E.A.R. office in Building M. There will be a mandatory meeting of all team captains or their representative on Wednesday afternoon January 23, 1991 at 3 p.m. in the conference room of Building M. (M-21). For more information contact Wally Reynolds in M-222 or call 207-3000, ext. 467.

Committee blocks Senate stop sign proposal

by BETTE WICKLUND
Attempts by the Student Senate to install a stop sign for out-bound traffic at the South entrance of the campus have been stalled while an investigation of the necessity of such a sign is conducted by the Environmental Safety Committee.

The proposal for the sign was made by Student Trustee John Malkowski after hearing complaints from students about traffic backing up along the perimeter road during peak traffic hours. This backing up occurs when cars wishing to ex-it the campus via the perimeter road are forced to wait for on-coming traffic while attempting to turn into the south entrance. Traffic is simultaneously by bus at this time while cars are entering and leaving Algonquin Road. The proposed sign would in effect create a three way stop, identical to the one at the Fidelity Avenue entrance, where presently only cars on the perimeter road are forced to stop with signs.

The Senate polled students on the proposal through a poll distributed by each division office. Out of 1210 responses, 700 students approved of the sign, 297 were opposed and 133 were indifferent. Malkowski felt that the indifferent responses were made by students who rarely use, or simply did not use, the Algonquin entrance.

With results of the poll in hand, Malkowski contacted Donald Stitt, Director of Building and Grounds, who told Malkowski that a stop sign was in possession of his department and that the installation would be no problem.

The Environmental Safety Committee, a joint administrative student committee, has questioned the need for the sign stating that the traffic lights at Algonquin Road at the campus entrance had been recently re-timed, with presently, more time allotted to drivers exiting the campus.

The committee and Malkowski are presently studying the situation in more detail. Stitt, Malkowski doubts that the time change in the lights has done little to alleviate the problem. "I watched the area one evening and found cars backed up to J Building," Malkowski said. "He contends that the situation is also causing other problems. "I discovered that some drivers are disobeying existing signs all together, probably due to the frustration of waiting for an opening in the traffic," Malkowski stated. This means that some drivers are "racing" incoming cars to the intersection.

Malkowski is convinced that a majority of students are aware of the proposal for the sign, but he admits there might be a handful of complainers when and if such a sign is constructed. "I believe a large population of students know that a sign has been proposed," Malkowski said.

HBINGER

1400, largest concert crowd

Harper's Student Activities had a record shattered Friday night when 1400 people attended the concert performed by the rock group Survivor. It had been the second time Student Activities had planned an event in Big M, since the building's opening last year. With the added capacity that a Big M program could accommodate, Harper could very well shatter every existing record for Student Activities events this year. Ticket sales were very good all last week. Twenty-five minutes before the concert was to begin, the show was declared a sell out. Kris Piepenburg of Program Board said, "We Program Board decided that we would cut-off tickets at 1400."

As soon as the 1400 tickets were sold, Kevin King, Public Safety, began to close off entry to the Harper parking lots to people who did not have tickets. Up until this year, most Student Activities had done modestly well. This year, almost every program has done better than expected. Fred Waters, student activities program director said of the continuing successes, "It's due to the combined efforts of all the students involved in student activities. It wouldn't have been possible to have been successful without the efforts of those on Program Board, WHCM, and the Harbinger. It has been a 100% effort by all. Surprisingly, many of those in attendance were from area high schools. Stan Smith, travel of from Glenbard South to come to the concert. Stan said, "I like the idea of coming to Harper for a concert. It's better, and much safer to come here than go to Chicago. And besides, it doesn't sound too bad here at all."

Carol Berg, sophomore, thought that there were too many outsiders. She said, "I've seen many burn outs. I've seen a couple of punks. They couldn't be from Harper, could they?"

Fann Locke, sophomore, expressed her enthusiasm for a Harper event which generates large crowds, positively, as did many other Harper students. "It's great. We should try it again. I'd like to see an outside concert this spring. One of the reasons for the huge success Friday night was because the group Survivor had local radio airplay with their hit single 'Somewhere in America'."

Jim Peterik, Survivor guitarist and keyboardist, said, "Look, since the drinking age was raised to 21, the under 21's have no place to go to see a gig and coming here. And, one of the largest groups of under 21's are the area college students."

Another contributing factor to the success was that ticket prices were very economical. Prices were set at $1 for a student with a Harper ID, and $4 for the general public.

Michelle Destchadeles, freshman, said, "I'll come again and again. You can't beat the price."

Throughout much of the concert by Survivor last Friday night, Public Safety made their presence felt.

As soon as ticket bearers entered Big M, they were greeted by three public safety officers.

Earlier in the week administration and program board officials decided that public safety could screen people entering the concert for alcohol or any illegal substances. "But, as Kevin King of Public Safety said, 'only if probable cause is apparent.'"

King said later that only 50 individuals were screened, and that no one was detained from entering the concert.

"The crowd was very orderly," said King. Throughout the event, a few public safety officers were walking on the main floor. Public Safety placed its officers through strategic positions in case of any accidents.

As one officer put it, "The crowd numbered 1400, we numbered 14. And, there were no problems. Not even one bite."

Registration up once again

The total student head count for this term will probably be 17,853. That is a 16 percent increase when compared against the figures from Spring '80," said Steve Catlin, Acting Director of Admissions.

Dr. John Lucas, Director of Planning and Institutional Research made the projections based upon the enrollment and total enrolled credit hour figures that have been compiled thus far," added Catlin.

There has been a 13.8 percent increase in the total number of enrolled credit hours when compared to the same figures of Spring '80. And, there has also been a 19.12 percent increase in the amount of full time students.

"We're still hypothesizing that the economy has caused more people to come to Harper. It's interesting to note the increase of full time students. It could mean that more students are staying on here at Harper longer before transferring to another institution. It could also mean that many people can't find jobs, and when that happens, people frequently come back to school to get re-trained, or to learn a new field entirely," Catlin said.

Audit resolution a step in the right direction

by WENDY WINKELBAKE

The semester is young and for the most part everyone is working and studying as they should. But when the going gets tough the tough don't always get going.

If a student finds that he just isn't going to make the grade he may decide to withdraw from class. But more inventive students who cared to look through the student guidebook found another out: the audit. The current audit policy allows students to audit a course up to the last day of the semester. Thus, the student doesn't have to take a failing grade and doesn't have a withdrawal on his permanent transcripts.

Realizing that the current policy is out of line, the Faculty Senate recently proposed that Harper establish a more conventional audit policy that would let it keep step with major learning institutions.

The proposed resolution would demand that a student declare his intent to audit the course at the time of registration or get specific permission from the instructor of the department head. Unlike the current policy, the resolution would require a student to attend the class and that the instructor assign the audit grade.

This tightening up of the audit policy is essential if Harper is to keep pace with rising educational standards. Eliminating an easy out that doesn't cause the student any harm will not only bring Harper's standards closer to those of four year institutions but could possibly make students take courses more seriously and seek out the extra help that can boost them over hurdles encountered.

Auditing a course should not be discouraged, many wish to attend class solely for their own benefit and do not want credit for it. But, as with all systems, someone finds a way to do it to the disadvantage of the rest of the community.

Faculty Senate president stand up for prof

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor: For the Harbinger to allow itself to become the mouthpiece of the disgruntled is a mistake. The complaints of a student about his or her teacher belong between that teacher and that student. Each of us, whether student or teacher, deserves the respect of the press, and the Harbinger has erred in printing last week's letter to the editor. To the merits of the letter, I can respond fully. I am a teacher. And no one is louder on teachers than another one of our ilk. To explain why Bob

Powell is a good teacher is not my am here, his many, many students over the years are testimony to his classroom teaching. His wit, his delight in ideas, his interest in students are well known. A couple of years ago when Bob was sick, the office was deluged with students asking about him. At that time, those of us amassing the phones might well have wished Mr. Powell were a little less well thought of. But many teachers are good teachers in the classroom, as is Bob Powell. What is outstanding about Bob, I think as a fellow teacher is his ability to teach other teachers about teaching. Let me explain. I came to Harper with an excellent degree with a concentration in nineteenth century British literature. I walked into the classroom and was faced with students sicker than me by many years, students who were majoring not in Chaucer but in criminal justice, students who not only hated writing but couldn't write. I was floored. I remember Bob Powell for that. I wasn't going to respond to last week's letter as it spoke for its own merits. But I want not to chastise the Harbinger or attack Mr. Pock or whatever her name really is. Last week's letter is simply an excuse for me to go public with a private debt. I thank you, Bob Powell, for being a teacher of teachers as well as of students.

Apathy not only affects students, faculty suffers from disease also

For those of you who haven't heard, there might be a stop sign going up on Perimeter Road in the spring. If you are not aware of that, your teacher might be the fault. The Student Senate gave each Division Office questionnaires which they forwarded to their faculty. There were approximately 200 courses headed out but the shocking point is on 33 were returned. The Senate appreciates the cooperation that we did receive, a thank you is due to each division and their faculty that did respond, but what about the 96% that didn't? It has been said all too often that the student body is full of apathy. I think the faculty suffers from the same disease. The students are quite proud of the teaching staff here at Harper. As teachers, they're fantastic, but in that their sole purpose, "I believe that answer is NO". Memos are passed out daily within this college, some of which should be read to the students. It might be forgetfulness, or misquoting it, but they just are not read in most of the classes on this campus. Harmony is a necessity in a home. You can't help Dad fix a leaky faucet on Saturday if you don't hear about it earlier in the week. Like home, we can't have pride in where we live if we don't know what's going on.

Correction

In the last issue of the Harbinger a letter, "Student sounds off over prof's style," was signed by Nancy Pock. In actuality the letter was written by Nancy Pock.

Subjective distortions won't change stable attitudes

To the Editor:

The gratuitous assault on the character of Robert Powell by a "Mary Pock" in your January 22 Harbinger must be offensive to every reader possessed of even a small measure of rationality and fairness.

With no facts at her disposal, the writer rambles from innumerable innuendoes, pausing along the way for a few self-advertisements. We are told, for example, that "Mary Pock" had come to school "to learn." Doesn't everyone? We are also told that her husband is a teacher at Marquette a surface irrelevancy, but perhaps his role in this shakedown (and who knows his motives bear some looking into); and that as a result of taking Mr. Powell's class, she had been "scared away from" a philosophy or poetry course that she planned to take. Why only two courses, and why only these two? Can we assume that the writer has not been scared away from courses in, say, logic or history? What of a course in logic? Or, perhaps, ethics?

"Mary Pock" also informs us that Mr. Powell purposely set out to reduce his class size, yet we learn of only one student who dropped the course after an embarrassing dictionary lesson—whatever that is. Bob Powell is a very capable teacher and I'm sure that if he set out to decimate a class he would do a better job of it than this. Of course, the assertion that he would attempt such a thing is absurd, as is the rest of the letter.

I know Bob Powell to be one of the most dedicated and respected professionals that I have ever worked with. I know this from observing the attitudes of other teachers toward him and from personal observation. You see, I have shared an office with Bob for seven years, and in this time I have learned from him and watched his students learn from him in the ways that he has carefully chosen, the testing that he has carefully devised, and in the innumerable hours of office time that he has spent with them in conference.

No subjective distortions that a "Mary Pock" could write about Bob Powell could ever lower his colleagues' respect for him. Nor could they possibly change the attitudes of the thousands of students whose lives he has intellectually nourished. I wonder what prompted The Harbinger to publish such drivel in the first place.

Sincerely,

Letter borders on character assassination

In response to the January 19 letter regarding Mr. Robert Powell, I would like to comment on the questionable judgment on the part of those responsible for determining which letters should be printed in your paper. I am certainly aware of and support the principles of a free press. I am also willing to support the right of Mary Pock to write such a letter in spite of the fact that I question many of her statements. Your paper, along with its free press rights, also has the responsibility to present a reasonably valid portrayal of the individuals about whom your articles are written. As a long time faculty member and participant in the affairs of this institution, I have come to regard Mr. Powell as one of our most effective and dedicated instructors. If your staff had bothered to conduct any kind of reasonable sampling among faculty, administrators, or students, you would have found that my assessment of his capabilities and performance is widely supported.

He has served this institution long and well and continues to do so. To print a single letter which portrays him as something else borders on character assassination. It is analogous to presenting a character portrait of Jimmy Hoffa by printing a single letter written by his mother extolling his virtues as a family man.

It would be a simple matter for your publication to find and print a similar letter regarding any faculty member who has faced literally thousands of students over a time period and who teaches a rigorous course. This would certainly produce a spectacular, if inaccurate, picture of a hard hearted, unaring faculty.

I hope your paper extends me the courtesy of printing this letter since it is the first time I have made such a request in my eleven years here. While I continue to support the concept of a free press, your failure to exercise the principles of fair play, good judgment, and good journalism earns you a D- in my grade book.

Letter meant to remind of joint commitment

To the editor:

As the husband of "Student sounds off over prof's style" I would like to set the record straight regarding the letter published in last week's paper. I feel that her personal letter to Mr. Powell was well written and contained an open, honest admission which could be shared with all faculty. Briefly, it asks them to reflect on their teaching styles, possibly tempering intellectual content with compassion.

I sent this letter without her knowledge and suggested that it be published as an open letter.

to all professors omitting names. You elected not to follow my suggestion and therefore caused embarrassment for both Mr. Powell and my wife. I also believe the impact of this letter was diluted since most readers ignore a letter addressed to a particular individual for the purpose of sharing this letter with the campus was definitely not to single out Mr. Powell but rather to remind all of our joint commitment to each other, to learn and to learn.

Brighten up the gloom of ## Spend sometime in the great outdoors at a local skating rink on a cross country trail or on a sled hill

by DANIELLA STOJANOVIC

Your car starts, your toes and fingers freeze, and you are tired of driving through the slush or gliding on the ice that water brings. Instead of complaining about the bad side of winter you can start enjoying the good side of it. And you don't even have to be in California or Florida during the winter to have a good time.

One way to get out of the winter "rout" is to get into winter sports. Skating, sledging, and skiing are just some of the fun-filled activities available to you at low costs and near locations.

Sledding:

The place to go, again, is to the parks districts and forest preserves. Cook, DuPage, and Lake County Forest Preserves offer many locations for sledding. There are many areas designated for sledding, according to Dave McKinley of Cook County Forest Preserve, but any hill will do. McKinley said sledders should remember to make sure there are no obstacles, don't go sledding near roads and highways and most importantly, don't go down hills when people are coming.

Skating:

Park districts and forest preserves offer outdoor skating facilities when weather permits. Some offer lighted and supervised rinks for both skating and ice hockey. For those who prefer indoor skating there is always the Woodfield Ice Arena in open daily and offers skate rental for one dollar.

"If you plan on buying a pair of skates for leisure use, a $51 pair will serve your purpose," says Jim White, supervisor at Woodfield Ice Arena. Top quality skates could cost over $300, he added. White also stressed the importance of wearing loose and comfortable clothing while skating. "Wear mittens in case you fall," he said.

Skating:

Cook, DuPage, and Lake County Forest Preserves are filled with unmarked areas where cross country skiing is permitted. Marked trails are also available. If you're planning on using the trails at the forest preserves, you will need some skis, since no rentals are available. An average pair of skis, according to John Pfatsch, assistant department manager at Herman's Sporting Goods, will run between $60-$100. Pfatsch advised the skier to wear warm, comfortable clothing.

The northwest suburbs is not exactly a skier's paradise, but many quality hills are a reasonable drive away in neighboring Wisconsin. Closer to home is Villa Olivia in Bartlett.

Most resorts offer rental equipment, but if you want to purchase your own, you should plan on spending about $140 for an average pair of skis, bindings, and poles as well as an additional $60-$130 for boots, according to Pfatsch. For extra safety Pfatsch suggests paying more for bindings and boots to insure better protection. All equipment should be given a tune-up before use and a hot wax at the end of the season. It is also a good idea for a beginning skier to take a few lessons before "bitting the slopes."

Some forest preserves even offer facilities for tobogganing, snowmobiling, and tubing. When it starts snowing and getting cold, get out your warm clothes and look for the nearest forest preserve or park district to brighten up a sleepy winter season.

Students feel National College Budget squeeze

DENVER, CO (CPS) — Senator Laurel Yant returned for the spring term at Colorado Women's College this month to find that there may be no such term.

Dramatic budget cuts proposed over the vacation called for a 20 percent reduction in faculty and the end of most course offerings and special programs, including the independent program. Yant requires for her major, piano performance.

Even if the school manages to operate through the spring with only a skeleton staff and curriculum, the senator estimates that she will not graduate. The professor, with whom she studied is out of a job along with 25 of the 35 instructors previously working fulltime. It is too late for her to transfer, and the New England Conservatory of Music, which has promised her a job for next fall, has informed her that her job may disappear as quickly as her diploma.

"My future is going to be irreparably harmed by all this," Yant mourns. "I'd like to nail the university to the wall." Yant is only one of over 300 women affected by the drastic budget cuts at the college. An early call on $1.3 million in dor-minary investigations forced the Board of Trustees to declare financial exigency last October, and left the administration the problem of cutting $4 million from the current budget so that the money may be used for debt payment.

Although the situation at CWC is dramatic, it is hardly unusual these days. The long-awaited national budget crunch — brought on by declining state funding, rising costs, and enrollment decreases — has finally started to hit salaries to ground a maintenance to bring out as a result.

Hardest hit are those schools that have lost state funds during the past year. Suffering financially because of the decline of its auto industry, Michigan has imposed some of the most severe cuts according to a spokesman for the American Association of Colleges and Universities. Michigan State University plans to meet the problem with salary cuts, a three-day layoff of "non-essential" employees, and a five percent reduction in the budget of every department. The layoff alone is expected to save $1 million. Wayne State University is Detroit has cut President Thomas Runser's salary to $61,000 from $72,000 yearly. Other administrators at the university have taken cuts of up to eight percent.

At Central Connecticut State College, the money-saving layoffs of student library employees in August prompted a student protest in October. The college has also made cuts in its services; campus security, for example, now operates with a student staff of seven instead of 43.

Still other kinds of services are impeded by the national financial crisis. For example, minority programs are next in line for the hatchet at Northern Michigan University. Norm Herke, dean of students, says that the college's Black Studies services has already lost one full-time staffer, while another will soon work only part-time. Together the cuts will represent a savings of over $150,000. Herke said programming and admissions would be most affected by the changes.

Despite threats to student services, alumni costs have risen faster than the rate of inflation throughout the country. College tuition statistics show that tuition at private universities increased an average of 10.1 percent in the United States. Total costs, however, rose 14.2 percent, as compared to a rise in total costs of 12.7 percent at public schools.

Decreasing enrollment compounds money problems. If the number of college students peaks next fall as is predicted by the National Center for Education Statistics, there would be an approximate decrease of 19,000 students in many as 200 schools will not survive the combination of a diminished enrollment and higher costs. The Center's report says,

"Enrollment decline means a fall-off in revenues," says Jacob Stumpen of the American Association of Colleges and Universities. "When you combine these factors with a loss of state funding, a lot of public schools are caught in a cost squeeze. All this will make the 1980s a particularly tough decade for American schools."

Colorado Women's College suffers from this same combination of factors, although it lost a loss rather than state funds. Under a proposal announced by President Sherry Manning, faculty reductions will compensate for $250,000 of the loss, while an additional $220,000 has already been cut from administrative and "other" budgets.

Students and faculty members responded angrily to Manning's plan. Within 72 hours of the announcement, students Florence Phillips and Marilyn Wright filed for a temporary restraining order on behalf of over 30 students. The request was later denied, but a lawsuit still pending charges the university with "breach of promise." The suit demands the proposal be shelved because it denies students courses and programs previously promised them in the course in mass.

The faculty has also filed a "breach of promise" suit against Manning and the school. Teachers contend their jobs were guaranteed to last-time basis. Thus far, Manning has only offered to return eight of the 25 jobs on a part-time basis.

Student sentiment runs strongly against the administration. Sophomore Judy Edwards pointed out that as no problem getting 32 students to co-sign as plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

Behind scenes feud at Superbowl

Commentary

Right about now the Philadelphia Eagles are licking their wounds and looking back to the conference championship game against Dallas and are wishing they would have lost. That way Dallas could have been humiliated in front of the entire world by Oakland. In a week filled with disasters and answered prayers, the Oakland Raiders, which are referred to by many as the Devil's team, blew their way through the SuperDome on route to an easy victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

The disasters that filled last week were the inauguration of our new president and the way the Harper Hawks put themselves out of the conference running for a championship.

The answered prayers that filled the week were, 52 home after a year and more of captivity.

One certainly has to give Jim Plunkett a lot of credit. After all, he was supposed to be washed up, a loser and an underdog. Despite all of those accusations, Plunkett delivered one of the finest performances out of a quarterback in Super Bowl history. Don't forget that Plunkett was working against the top defense in the NFL. Actually the Eagles learned a valuable lesson: Don't go to the big one unless you're ready to play good football and not the sloppy luck that has kept them going all year.

Despite the Oakland victory, the real loss came after the game and it wasn't the Eagles, that lost the painful bias. The punch this time was felt by NFL commissioner Pete Rosele Al Davis, the owner of the Raiders, made Rosele rather uncomfortable at the giving of the Superbowl trophy and that was a very entertaining little bit of filming on television.

For those of you that didn't see the locker room celebration with the Daviss's, Rosele on frontation, picture this: John Glenn giving Mike Barnbach the journalist of the year award and trying to keep a wide and

At Davis and his Oakland Raiders put a horrible one Rosele and no matter what he tries to do, Big Pete and his big man can do a thing about it. And don't be surprised if the Raiders start calling their home town Los Angeles, as soon as the court battle is over.

It was a pretty thing to say or to even think about, at least for the big boys in charge. But in sure is a lot of fun to watch a bunch of underdogs that aren't liked by anyone except their mothers, beat the snot out of a team which was supposed to be better. And it sure is fun to watch a football team owner stick the commissioner with a simple smile.

At least it feels good for us little guys to be able to strike out you home run hitters like Rosele and Glenn.

Gymnasts fall to Triton victory getting closer

by JOE KOST

The girls gymnastics squad fell to defeat once again this year and once again they fell to the Triton Trojans.

"Every time we play Triton we get closer and closer to next time we play them I think that we'll win," said Linda Mustari, head coach of the squad.

Leading by only five points and having to take two separate zeros in separate events, really effected the meets outcome for the Hawks.

"We've picked up another girl and that will take 30 say our zeros in those events," added Coach Mustari.

"Even if we only get ten points in our events, it will still help us win our meets," stated sophomore Sandy Colglazier on the new addition to the squad.

The new addition to the squad will come in the form of Cheryl Muller, a freshman out of Butte (Grove High School).

Muller will be competing in the uneven bars competition and the floor competition for the Hawks.

Last week against Triton the female Hawks placed well but couldn't pull the meet off with the empty spaces. Mary Beth Black was the only Hawk to place in more than one event for Harper. Black placed first on the balance beam and third on the floor competition.

Sandy Colglazier placed second on the uneven bars and improved her floor routine to a 5.0 but still not good enough to place.

Cindy Curtis placed second on the floor routine with a score of 3.7.

Showing constant improvement on the squad has been Kris Kandel and Sue Quinn, both helpful members to the squad.

"Sue is improving everyday but she will has a lot to learn about the sport and competition on meets," says Coach Mustari.

"Sue throws things into her performances that she doesn't think the judges will see but they see those things and they take off for them."

"The judges will also take off for something if you don't have certain tumblers or things in your routine and that has also hurt the squad this year. Mustari added.

Even though the girls finish ed second in Triton and one place over Oakland, the confidence still seems evident.

The Hawks will take this week off but will travel to face Kishwaukee next week to face Oakton and Elgin in another four way meet.

With the added gymnast to the squad, Harper should improve their team score and their competition finishing.

Whether or not the girls are successful throughout the remainder of the season is dependently up to them.

Despite with the attitude the gymnasts have and with a little luck, they'll be returning to the National Championships for the second year in a row to represent Harper as a real competitor.

Conference hopes lost in depressing defeat

by JOE KOST

Any dwindling hopes of a conference championship were all but shattered last week when the Harper Hawks fell to Illinois Valley in a very depressing game. Depressing for the Hawks as they outscored 17 from the field by 14 points but lost as they were outshot from the free throw line. Illinois made an incredible 20 of 31 from the carry strip and won the game.

Dave Strawn had an outstanding game with 22 points as the Hawks losing effort.

Earlier in the week the Hawks bowed over to the Triton Trojans in yet another giveaway of a contest. The Hawks had no credible offense that put a whopping 40 points up on the board, but the Hawks defense didn't seem to be in the game as they gave up 96 points and the game.

Tim Murray led all scorers in the game with 30 points while Fernando Gosa trailed closely with 28 points. The rest of the Hawks scoring, with the exception of Dave Strawn's 12 points, was divided among the other players rather evenly.

So just what are the Hawks to do?

Harper has a 4-4 conference record going into last Tuesday's game against Wright College.

If the Hawks can manage a couple of quick wins before the playoffs come around they could go into the games with a full head of steam and better hopes than they're holding now.

Last week the Hawks, (the players only), held a meeting to discuss the problems with the team. A lot of it had to do with the lack of the type of spirit that teams need to win games.

A change should be noticed in the future as soon as the Hawks realize that the season isn't over until they're eliminated from playoff pictures. If Harper can put their mind to it, they could be a dangerous team in the playoffs and they could determine who will win the conference.

But that's all an "if."

Attitude puts Strawn in winner's circle

by JOE KOST
After a lifetime of defeat, Dave Strawn may have found himself a winning team at Harper.

"I hate losing," says basketball star Strawn. "In high school I went to Hoffman Estates and my team was 17-75 in the four years that I played there.

"I've won more games here at Harper than I've won in four years of basketball at Hoffman," Strawn comments. "In fact I could win more games this season than I've won in my entire life.

Strawn's life as a loser began in third grade when he joined the basketball teams sponsored by his park district. Strawn scored three points that year and fell to the bottom of the teams.

"In my next year in that same league, I let everyone in scoring with 36 points and my team won the championship. That was the last championship team that I was on," says Strawn.

"When I played at Hoffman, a lot of the guys on the team used to get into me with the attitude 'we're going to lose.' That really upset me because just isn't like we someone should go into a game.

"I never go into a game with the attitude that I'm going to lose," said Strawn.

"Even though I've had a record of 17-75 in high school, I've never considered myself a loser. I went into a slump in my senior year at Hoffman. I played about three minutes in a game against Schaumburg and was taken out of the game with about 35 seconds to go because I made a half pass that helped to lose another game," Strawn recalls.

"That night I stayed up all night and did a lot of thinking about basketball and whether or not I should quit the team and the game. I thought that maybe at that time losing all of those games and all that I might have started to take on a defeatist attitude about myself."

"My dad influenced me a lot during my life and I remembered that he would always tell me 'never be a quitter.' I decided that since I had come this far that I might as well stick it out the rest of the season." Strawn added "From then on I went out to play not as someone I had been and I decided that I was going to have fun whether I won or lost," stated a determined Strawn.

DePaul coach and legend Ray Meyer also had an important position in the determination of Dave Strawn to continue playing basketball.

"In my first days of basketball camp my team was playing and since we had six guys on the team we had to switch in and out so we could all play. I went in switch out and Ray Meyer came out on the court and told me to stay in the game and play. He said that I wanted me to lead the offense and the defense. It was about 80 degrees that day and I was dead tired by night time.

"That night I saw Meyer come up to me and told me that he thought I was good and that he thought I could be good someday. He taught me a lot about my shooting and helped me improve my shooting from 23% at the time to about 50%," added Strawn.

"Two other people that have influenced my life was a couple of my old coaches, Dave Freeman, my sophomore basketball coach, never hesitated to help me out and he is what I consider a good friend.

"Another one is my track coach Dave Aley. He taught me that if I wanted something bad enough and worked hard enough that eventually you will receive it. I proved this to myself in my senior year when we went down state in track," commented Strawn.

Strawn qualified for the state competition in his senior year for the 40 and 800 relays both are school records.

This season, Strawn is a sophomore at Harper and has been the only player on the squad that has started every game this season.

"I came here last year and everyone else had credentials of different things like All conference or things like that. The only thing I had going for me was M.V.P. of my youth in my senior year and sheer desire. They told me that I was a pleasant surprise last year and that they were looking forward to working with me. This season," stated Strawn compared to high school crowds at basketball games, the crowds at Harper are much smaller and the players may find it difficult to create energy to play without the roar of the fans.

"When I first started playing here the lack of fans bothered me and it taught me that I had to generate my own excitement and I had to get myself up for the games," commented Strawn.

Being the leader of the team, the other players have given Dave the fitting nickname of "General Electric."

"One day some of the guys started calling me 'general' in practice and when they saw that the paper had called me 'general electric,'" explained Strawn.

"I like the responsibility of being a leader and I was an 'I'd rather be in a leadership role than a role of a follower, that way if something goes wrong, I'll get the blame and not someone else."

"The ultimate situation for me to be in would be if we were being by one point and I was at the free-throw line with all seconds left on the clock. That way the game would fall on my shoulders and not anyone else," says Strawn.

"I feel that I've played the best this year than I ever have played before," added Strawn. "Hopefully I'll improve on many things: jumping and quickness along with my shooting could all stand for improvement. I feel being a leader has the potential to be very good, now whether or not I use it or not is all depending on my own efforts. I learn a lot by watching and imitating others and I'm not saying that I'd be so good as them but in time it should come through."

"I came into this year looking for a scholarship for a four year school so I'll be able to continue my career in law education and I would also like to play more basketball somewhere. If I can play ball then I'd like to be able to coach a kids team when I grow up," said Strawn.

"I go into every game thinking that I'm the superior athlete and that I'm going to win. I don't get intimidated by anyone. I have losing. Losing as much as I have has taught me to appreciate winning. After my 2-2 record in my last year at Hoffman, I've learned to savor every win we have here. I've also never taken winning for granted and I'll never take any strawer or game lightly," added Strawn. "Winning means too much to me to not take it seriously," concluded Strawn. "If the talents of Dave Strawn ever match his attitude toward the game or his fellow athletes, then he'd be a very exciting and gifted player."

Determination boosts wrestlers over obstacles

by TOM LOFTUS
It has been said there is strength in numbers, but for the 1981 Harper Wrestling Hawks strength lies in determination and good old fashioned hard work.

"We don't have the numbers," stated Coach Norm Lovelace referring to the low team turnout that necessitates the Hawks to do have were mostly state place winners in high school, and they're all willing to work." And it is this important factor that has held the team close together all season, and produced an extraordinary team spirit of which the Harper College community should be proud.

Paul Laskowski, former standout wrestler at Palatine High School who presently wrestles at 156 pounds said, "Our coach stresses conditioning in practice" and he feels that this has been the key to the team's success thus far this season. This sentiment was echoed by the rest of the team members. Joe Deonta who competes at 131 lbs. added that, "By the end of the season, when it's time for the conference meet, we're in better condition than the rest of our conference foes. Anyone who has competed in wrestling, myself included, will tell you that dedication plays a key role in eventual success, but Kevin Roadenbacher (20-4 at 136 lbs.) takes it a step further. On the junior college level, to have any degree of success "takes sheer guts." You have to really stick with it. And it's definitely a lot harder than high school," said Paul matter of factly.

While the hard-working wrestling Hawks record of 2-2 in conference and 6-2 overall is respectable at first glance, it becomes outstanding when one realizes that they surrendered 12 team points at every meet; that the forfeits at the North Central invitational last weekend, the team produced a fourth place showing led by Captain Howard Leggett's blue ribbon performance; that road, lower; that they 2-1 record this year, placed his first seeded opponent in the finals at 142; that Hawk place winners are Rich Coursey (15-3) who lost to high

6-4 bout in overtime if the final point at 138 to claim 2nd place, and Kevin Bartlett (12-11), 4th at 177 pounds. Other wrestlers doing their part to contribute to the spirited team effort, along with Laskowski and Roadenbacher were Roger Barron (12-8) at 131, Kevin Murray (10-12) at

167, and Charles Boyd at 150. "This Friday night, at 5 pm in M Building the Hawks face a very tough opponent in Triton, along with Lincoln and Madison Tech, in what promises to be a very exciting meet."

Acting not a sideline but part of life for local talent

by WENDY WINKELHAKE

Actors and actresses. The mere words conjure up images of glittery Broadway parties, handshaking with the right people, fame and fortune and astringent Hollywood hairdos, not a brightly Schenectady school teacher and a refined professional musician.

Nevertheless, that is exactly what Peggy Gire and Michael Boyna are. Both are currently starring in the Theatre on Wings production of "I Do! I Do!" Although it is only the second time the group has toured the area, neither is a stranger to the stage. Gire earned her bachelor of music degree from Eastern Illinois University and went on to become "everyone's favorite alumna" of music-theater productions, according to Vaughn Jansen, dean of the School of Fine Arts. Eastern Boyna graduated from the Cal-lege of St. Francis with a bachelor of theater degree and has poured all his energy into various facets of the theater. Although she has starred in numerous productions, Gire is not concerned with fame but with the creative outlet that acting provides.

"I think of it (acting) as a hobby although it is not my main source of income. It's an important part of what I do. Working with people who are creative is the most important thing. Skill is much more of a concern than being famous."

You get involved with other people in a personal way and you share a great deal of creativity, something that is beautiful and original," Gire continued. "I think that it is really creative to start out and build another character, you show an audience the depth of a character. I think that if you pass that on to an audience, you've accomplished something creative. You can grow as a person and get to know yourself better."

"It's also a means of escape. You can do things on stage that you might not normally do, on stage you see another person and lose all of your inhibitions."

Working up to a level of creativity and a proper frame of mind often requires the actor to put in a considerable amount of time before the performance.

"I usually need an hour and a half to two hours in the theater before the show," said Boyna. "Then I know there is a show coming and I forget about the guy who cut me off on the highway, the everyday garbage that has happened. You have to get it out of your system a character. I think that if you

Policy varies at colleges

Student suspended for plagiarism

by Nora Norton

A Harper college student who officials refused to identify has been suspended for plagiarism upon the recommendation of the Student Conduct Committee.

"The unanimous recommendation of the committee was one-year suspension so that the student would be eligible to return in the spring of 1982," said Donn B. Stansbury, Vice President of Student Affairs.

"Cheating or plagiarism is a violation of the student conduct code. Any violation of the conduct code can be referred by anyone—student, faculty or staff. In this case it was referred by the instructor to the Student Conduct Committee," he said.

The instructor Dr. Frank Smith, assistant professor of English, identified the student's work as plagiarism almost immediately.

"It was copyrighted material, practically word for word except for some change and the student even copied on that," said Smith.

"I knew the student couldn't write. It took me about an hour to find the original. I was familiar with it. If I had not found it, I would have asked around and someone else would have found the reference," he said.

Smith said the student admitted cheating.

"He said he had done it to trap me because he thought I was unfair and he wanted to see if I could tell the story was copied."

One of the things that dumfounded Smith was the fact that the student showed no concern about his act.

"I was angry about the bogus work. I am very much concerned about what the dishonesty is doing in the value of the students."

"Some serious consideration had to be given concerning the rights of serious students," he said.

Smith criticized the school policy in handling academic problems.

"The situation is such that the way the school policy is set up, if the instructor advises the student that he has charges against him, he (the student) may withdraw from the class without penalty by auditing or withdrawing, making it not practical for the teacher unless the charges are made at the end of the term," he said.

"If I don't catch the student, he has an even better deal," he said.

He felt that a number of his instructors would not bring charges against students for that reason.

Dr. Fred A. Vassal, Director of Public Information, who arranges the meetings for the students' conduct committee, admits there are no definite guidelines in these cases.

"The whole purpose is to try to get the truth for everyone concerned," he said.

"You can't deprive people of rights and accuse them of being guilty until they have a hearing. If they are not guilty, you would impose a penalty on them."

"Plagiarism is a difficult one to prove normally. We have never had a hearing before for this."

Student discipline varies from one community college to another.

At Kokon Community College the charges against the student by a faculty member are brought to the attention of John Lounsbury, Vice President for Student Development.

The student can accept the action I take or ask for a hearing.

"No action is taken against the student until I have completed my investigation."

"My advice to the faculty member is to give that student a zero calculated on overall grades. This usually results in an 'R' grade so the student must repeat the course."

The student may either receive a disciplinary warning or be put on a period of probation.

"We do not have a fail grade we use an 'R' grade instead. In no case is action extended beyond a semester."

At Marquette College, complaints against a student are reported to Dr. Robert V. Murray, Dean of Students.

When a complaint arises, I call the student in for an informal explanation of charges and advise him of his rights.

The student has a choice of either a formal or informal hearing.

In the informal hearing, after questioning the student I would make some determination which would result in some sanctions such as withdrawal from the course, support of the instructor in giving a failing grade, suspension or dismissal.

"We have not suspended a student in the five years in which I have been responsible here."

I have dismissed students (bussimal) involves cutting off the student's relationship with the college. After a period of one year, the student may petition for readmission.

"A formal hearing involves a committee comprised of faculty and students who, in effect, act as a jury."

After the findings in either case, Murray said, the student may appeal to the president or to the board if he chooses.

"I find it has been a very workable system. The student usually has opted for the less formal hearing."

In the time he has been at the college, Murray said, there have only been two students formally dismissed.

According to Mrs. Margaret Wate, a representative in Student Services at the College of Lake County, there have been no formal decisions in the eight years she has been there.

There have been no suspensions, no plagiarism, no serious problems.

Normally, she said, Dr. Randolph Webster, the Dean of Student Services, acts as a mediator for the student and the instructor.

"If something serious comes up, Dr. Webster has him (the student) sign a behavioral contract which is negotiated between the student and the faculty member."

"We have not had any contracts broken," she said. Eugene Paul, Vice President of Student Affairs at Elgin College reports that they do not have a lot of serious problems, although they did have one just before Christmas.

"We have a student judicial code. The majority of cases are handled through our instructors or counseling staff."

"If it is a serious case, it involves our deans, the vice president, the instructor and the dean of the area in which the student was enrolled."

The situation he faced in December was a rare one.

"We removed the student from the program. The student was removed from the college with an opportunity to reapply after one year's leave of absence," he said.

"While a system which imagine is relatively standard at most schools," he said.

or you won't perform well. For half an hour I pace and clear my throat. I have this phobia that I will go out to sing a song and have something stuck in my throat.

The concentration, pacing and incessant gum chewing that precedes a performance has paid off for both. Boyna's diverse acting career includes portrayals of Charles in "Pippin," Murph in "Indian Wants the Bronx," Noah in "Two by Two" and Evrora in "Winnie the Pooh." In his undergraduate work at St. Francis, Boyne participated in about 20 productions. Gire earned an impressive acting record through her portrayals of Annie in "Annie Get Your Gun," Heidi in "Fiddler on the Roof," Nannie in "The Camelot" and "Carrie Pispardie in 'Carouse.'" She also starred in the Harper production of "Gays and Dolls" and "Cabaret."

Besides mastering a British accent for her role in "Cabaret," one of Gire's biggest challenges was doing a "prairie oyster," a delectable concoction of Worcestershire sauce and raw eggs, yet the bubbling broad Adelaide, a vivacious yet somewhat insecure character in "Gays and Dolls," stands out as one of Gire's favorite characters.

"I really liked Adelaide just because I think that I am a lot like her. There are a lot of people like her but they wouldn't admit it," she said.

Although both agree that perhaps one of the most rewarding aspects of the theater is the rapport that develops between cast members, it often takes more than working together in a rigorous rehearsal schedule and actual performances to bring the cast together. It need not be a pleasant experience that finally makes everything click.

"I took a bomb threat to finally bring an individualized cast together in a 1975 production of 'Cabaret,'" that Boyna participated in.

"We had a pretty good sized cast but it wasn't an ensemble play. The stars were the stars, the orchestra the orchestra. We had a separate feeling. Opening night we were picketed by the American Nazi Party and there was a bomb threat. The director told us, we had to put our coats on and go outside. We were outside for about half an hour and most of the audience stuck around.

"We went back in, we wanted to show them that we were going to do the show. It was most fulfilling. We finally came together. The audience was stunned," Boyna said.

At the end of the first scene, the cabaret owner salutes Nazi style, the audience. Although actors crave applause, the silence that followed that scene was truly golden to the cast.

"There was nothing, no applause, nothing. The audience was totally quiet. We were in the hall listening and going on. We felt so good. I'll remember that," Boyna said.

"The art is perfect for insecure people, you get to know people really well in a short period of time. It is a golden opportunity to give something, something you might not otherwise give," he said.

Although she has turned in many sterling performances, Gire's acting is not confined to the stage. In her role as music teacher at Campanelli Elementary School in Schaumburg, Gire accentuates many lessons with pantomime and general acting. But the fact that teacher is a "star" is not dweled upon. "It's not that I keep it from them. I just don't play it up. I perform a lot with the kids. They know that I am involved in the theater. For 'Cabaret' I had to wear fake fingernails and green polish and drink a raw egg and they thought that was great," she said.

The Theatre on Wings will present "I Do! I Do!," a story of married life. Friday, Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. in Big 145. The production will then be presented at Hoffman Estates High School Feb. 21, 27 and 28 at 7:30 p.m.

McGrath gives bank system tentative ok

By PIETE WICKLUND
A proposal to establish a banking cash station on the Harper campus has received tentative approval from President James McGrath.
The cash station is a system similar to the money machines or "24-hour teller" machines used by many banks. The difference is the cash station will work for customers of any bank that participates in the "Cash Station Network, not just a sole institution.

The proposal to place such a station at Harper was initiated through the office of Dr. James Perry, vice president of administrative services, in conjunction with the Mount Prospect State Bank. Perry sent letters to all the banks in Harper's district last May explaining the idea for the system.

At Harper, however, only two banks responded to the letter. The "Cash Station Network" already in operation in several areas around the country, including operations by several Chicago banks, The Mount Prospect State Bank is presently running a station at the Hawthorn Shopping Center. Customers are issued a private ID card that allows them to make transactions at any cash station in the system. The computerized system relays the transaction to the customers' own bank where the transaction is completed.
For students to use the system they would first have to go to their individual banks and apply for an identification card and operating number. Perry stated that it will be up to the individual banks as to whether or not a service charge would be passed on to customers. The Mount Prospect Bank presently does not charge their customers for using the system.
After the customer receives their card and they wish to use a cash station, they insert the card into the machinery and enter their ID number. If all is in order the cash station will activate sensors at the customers' personal place and the transaction will be completed. If there is a problem, the card is rejected and no transaction takes place.

Customers can complete most basic banking operations through the use of the cash station system. There are, however, a set of limitations. Students will be able to make deposits, withdrawals up to $100, and establish lines of credit. All materials involved in transactions is stored within cash stations and collected by messengers every day.
If and when a cash station is installed at Harper it will be the first time a system has been installed at a public institution.

Administrators at Harper are enthusiastic about the proposal. Don Stansbury, vice president of student affairs, said that most of the administration liked the proposal. "Everyone responded rather positively about the idea," Stansbury said.
Perry said that the proposal would be of "benefit to both students and faculty."
Student Trustee John Malowski was equally enthusiastic. "We're hoping a lot of students could and will use the system," Malowski said.
The tentative location for the cash station is the area on the main floor of A building across from the vending machines. The system will cost the college nothing. Installation will be paid for by the Mount Prospect Bank, who along with Cash Station Incorporated, will be responsible for maintenance of the machine station. For other banks to be involved in the system it will cost each institution about $5,000. The proposed cash station at Harper will be open during regular campus hours.

Perry stated that the administration is "ready" to the extent that we can move ahead on the project.
Apparently the Board of Trustees does not have to approve the project, but, according to Perry, if there is a contract between the school and the banks, which is likely, then the board would have to approve those contracts. Perry stated that if everything goes as planned installation could take place as early as next fall.

Wicklund picks up pieces, makes comeback

At one time or another in our lives we have a period of crisis. During this time, nothing seems to go right. It seems that you have no luck, and it appears that no one upstairs likes you. It happened to Pete Wicklund. It happened to Pete while he was first going to Harper a little over a year ago.

Pete is infamous to all those on the Harbinger staff, but his short story should be made into a short movie. It would include the things that some graduating high school seniors have to overcome sooner or later in their lives.

Pete had problems with college friends, family parents' employers, and most importantly himself. Not that that is unusual or anything. It is just a part of growing up. As Pete says, "It's reaching maturity."

"I had a double image of myself. It was an unrealistic view. One side of me could identify with college. On the other side of me was having drinks in Wisconsin with my working class hero buddies. Said Pete, as the driving seat of a WHCM song, bombarded

abstract analysis

Pete's conversation with me. "It all started when I shook hands with the high school principal and got my diploma. I was accepted at many schools. I had a good school record. My parents wanted me to go to college. I always enjoyed playing with fire trucks when I was younger. I kind of wanted to be a fire-fighter."

"When I told my parents that I wanted to be a fire-fighter, they were shocked. I began to get pains in my stomach," said Pete. As he sang, "Another time Bites the Dust" came on. Pete smiled.

During that summer, Pete worked for a smoking machine company which promised lucrative fiscal offerings, nice cars, and an endless supply of flip top beers. Pete says now, "That job made me decide to come to college. I couldn't, at that time, see myself doing that ten years from now. Pete felt like the man who fell on Karli when he first came to Harper. He was indeed, an alien. He was in many night classes because of his day job. He says, "I was petrified. Must of all, the class was filled with adults. I began to worry how to act, and how to act in the class. I think I would've had the same problem in any school."

Miss Fern came and went by, and Pete was still working 30 hours a week, attending 12 hours of class, and was a volunteer fire-fighter. "Sometimes," Pete says, "I managed to finish the semester okay. His grades were not a reflection of his past academic performance."

Pete quit his job for the "Spring term, promoting himself better grades. But instead of limiting his workload, Pete increased it. He became the News Editor for The Harbinger. He took on two part time jobs with the Daily Herald, and another with Burger King. "I started getting in over my head with work. I start to relax more with my friends at bars in Wisconsin," said Pete. Very cautiously, not wanting me to detect that this was an uncomfortable area of his life.

"As everyone knows, during the Spring term, Spring appears on the stage and the great return to Harper Lake. And as every red-blooded American boy knows, the final is full of boys or girls, no bathing suits, last cars, summer parties, and again of girls in bathing suits. Pete was no exception.

Spring took it's toll on Pete.

He withdrew from three of his classes. He finished one, and lost his job at the Daily Herald. He disappeared from his desk at the Harbinger office.

Pete then decided to become a fire-fighter. He took a class in Paramedicine at a local hospital during last summer. He says, "I got bored with class one day and walked out. I found my way to the hospital morgue. I pulled out a body. This junior comes up to me and says, 'Who are you?' And I say, 'Baron Van Fankenstein'."

"I didn't want to write the 'Pete Wicklund Story' or a post in a new serial brought to you by a commercial television station. I want only to post out that there was a man who was lost. No one could help him, he had to help himself. And he did."

Pete's back here at Harper. He's even writing for The Harbinger once again. But, it was that had to push him away. He's immense, and make some decisions.

As Pete puts it, "I'm glad I did what I did. I've got a good perspective on a lot of things." Wow, that's got worldwide applications.

Good Luck Pete.

Guest Column

Columnist's concert ideas off the wall

by KRIS PIEPENBURG

Hi! I've returned from Switzerland with fresh blood flowing in my veins. What was the first thing I read, upon my return? Oh, Simkus's last column. "What's so great about Rock 'n' Roll Anyway?" On the surface, it made sense.

My ears have suffered from the Who, and I've seen some of the bands he's seen (in another level, the column was a little divisive). Late nights of the rock concert culture. Sure, they exist, but aren't they simply giving the kids what they want? Does R.E.M. Speedwagon give any impression of being, false beyond their music? Is Gary Richrath an intellectual power? A "pilot." Perhaps

on music

they are doing what comes naturally. In writing, adolescent songs, maintaining great appearances, and catering to the identities that every suburban kid holds within. R.E.M. doesn't claim to be something they're not, they're not artists. They're not trying to fool us. I haven't been fooled. I still have friends, but false they are not. I had a positive concert experience last Friday night, at Slugs, on Clark Street. The band featured was Tom Robinson's Sector 27. Some of you may recall the socio-political Tom Robinson Band. He dumped the stance before it became false and took a new approach.

Sector 27 plays a brand of music somewhat similar to heavy metal, but it is a bit more acoustic. The beat is highly infectious, anyone on the Slugs stage (don't you verify that). Anyway, I don't want to review a concert. I wanted to meet Mike and a few other friends that Tom Robinson is one from that (don't) stand up there and pretend. The songs of Sector 27 deal with personal experiences, and

Robinson delivered them on a personal level. There was truth in his face, his hand gestures, and the way he walked quietly onstage to begin the show. The band was tight, and didn't push a lot of it on the audience. Russell Jo Burt and Robinson were high school football jackets with tennis sleeves on them. Burt played an expressive, treble-less bass, and teamed with drummer Derek Quinn to create a punchy rhythm section. Eleven year-old guitarists Steve K uses a lot of sound effects on his instruments, and thus exports the standard electric guitar sound into another area.

So Mike, don't give up. Sector 27 was entertaining without being a circus. From the opening to the close, and still now, I remain convinced. And readers and listeners, open your eyes and ears. Tom Robinson's Sector 27 is a powerful band that is sure to make a splash in the music world. Oh, and considering more poignancy and commercial success, here are Robinson's approximate words, delivered between songs: "Yes, you may remember us from last time, but we're different now. I could have gone along with Kisses (T.H.R. guitar!) and achieved commercial success, but of course I didn't."

Mike, if you still want to give records away, here is my mailing address: Kris Piepenburg, 120 N. Ashland Ave., Palatine, Illinois, 60067. No Kiss albums, please.

"Scanners" ok to watch but nothing to think about

by BILL STERNBERG

Independent filmmaker David Cronenberg, the maker of many horror films — "The Brood," "Rabid" and "The Come From Within" — has his commercial breakthrough with "Scanners," a visually exciting piece of sci-fi horror.

The story doesn't need to be explained in detail. The TV commercials give the basic premise to the movie, so all you need to do is sit back and enjoy. The film is mainly about Dr. Bluth using Cameron Vale to find the leader of the underground organization of scanners. A scanner is someone who can take complete control over the person's thoughts, body and actions.

The camera is elaborately staged in scenes of great tension. In the beginning of the story, Cameron Vale (Stephen Lack) exposes himself as scan-Cronenberg's use of build ups, gives a ferocity in which the breaking points, many of you with the consequences of the conflict. His visual skill also has the technically intricate aspect that gives "Scanners" its techno-pop look. In one scene there is a close-up of Vale's face. The close-up leads into another close-up of the other person's face. That close-up fades, but in a point where Vale's face overlaps the other person's face.

Another example is a shot of Vale strapped onto a bed. Then there's a combination of that level shots of people walking into the room. Vale occupies. Later on in the scene there is a point of the people sitting down

However his success comes in a half is fine. The dialogue is sometimes silly, sometimes very awkward. ## Harper splits with DuPage, Rock Valley

by JOE KOST
Harper shot six more free throws than Rock Valley did last Thursday. The important thing was the fact that Harper made four of those six free throws and that spelled victory for the Hawks, 77-73.

Both teams shot for 46 points from the field but Harper's extra four points from the charity strip served their purpose and lifted Harper to the win.

Harper started out rather shaky and wasn't able to score as effectively as they did against Rock Valley earlier in the year. At the half-time Harper found themselves trailing by seven points, 39-31.

In the second half of play, Harper, with the help of Tim

Murray fought back into the game and finally won Murray had 21 points in the game to help Harper improve his conference record to 5-4.

Fernando Goss, one of the leading scorers in the NAAC conference was held to just 13 points in the contest.

Dave Strawn added 11 points to the Hawks effort while Mark Monekton and Steve Todd contributed seven points apiece.

Last Tuesday, Harper managed to grab only three of fourteen rebounds and that spelled defeat for the Hawks against DuPage, 76-71.

"We were trailing most of the game," said Harper coach Roger Bechtold. "They just outscored us and outplayed us and their big men really hurt us under the basket."

This time it was the free throws that did the Hawks in. Harper shot for 11 free throws, of them 20 attempted for a cold 55%. DuPage made 16 of their 21 attempts for a cool 69%, cool enough to win the game.

"DuPage held the lead for most of the second half," said Bechtold. "We started to come back when we were down by three points with just 1:30 left in the game. We brought the ball down court and we took a good shot but we missed it."

"If we would have made the shot it could have been a different story but still we had the opportunity to win and I feel very fortunate to have had that chance," added Bechtold. Tim Murray led the Harper scoring with 22 points. Dave Strawn added 14 points to the Hawks losing effort while Fernando Goss was held to just 11 points. Mark Monekton and Steve Todd both had eight points in the loss.

This loss lowers the Hawks record to 6-5 in conference while posting a 15-8 mark for the season. Harper still has three conference games remaining that could put them in one of the top spots in the NAAC conference. Unfortunately not first place though.

Harper plays again tonight at home against Thornton College. The game will follow the Women's Basketball game and should start around 7:30 p.m.

FERNANDO GOSS was shut down last week against Rock Valley. Goss had 13 points in the game.

Harper looks to conference championship

Basketball Commentary

by JOE KOOT
The Women's basketball team at Harper College knows just what they have to do to win the NAC Conference championship this year and they're in the process of doing that right now.

In order for the Hawks to stroll away with the championship, it's going to take four more consecutive wins in the next two weeks over four different conference teams.

Rock Valley, as well as Illinois Valley, stood in the Hawks way on their non-stop route to the conference championship. Both were pushed aside by the Hawks, pushed aside to defeat.

Rock Valley came to Harper last week and was stymied by a group of victory starving Hawks. The result was an 88-38, 30 point victory for Harper's high flying Hawks.

Harper took control of the contest and never let Rock Valley get within a reasonable striking distance throughout the course of the game. Key baskets by Sue Hoday, Sue Mieschler and Kim Place helped the Hawks jump to a commanding 17-4 lead.

Harper's defense was so strict in the beginning of the game that it took Rock Valley's first three minutes to put one point up on the board and the first six minutes to get their first field goal of the contest.

After the first 10 minutes of play Harper had a 26-10 lead and at halftime Harper was winning 46-21.

The Hawks went on to outscore Rock Valley 42-38 in the second half. Harper outscored their opponents 86-34 from the field but because of an outstanding game at the free throw line, the victory for Harper was much closer. Rock Valley shot 24 of 28 from the charity strip to lose the game by only 30 points.

Leading the Hawks in scoring was Sue Hoday with 18 points. Hoday played a fine game on both offense and defense allowing Rock Valley just six rebounds in the first half of play. Sue Mieschler finished Hoday in points by two. Mieschler had 16 points in the game, 14 of those coming in the first half and most on fast breaks.

Kim Place, who had been expected to see a mid-season slump, returned to top form by adding 14 points to the Hawks victory efforts and by putting on one of the finest defensive performances in the game.

Mary Ann Larsen was the last of the four Hawks that scored in the double digits. Larsen put in 11 points for Harper nine of those coming in the second half of the contest.

Harper's real test will begin tonight at home when they'll play host to Thornton. Thornton and the two clubs clashed but Harper helped them by playing an extremely tight game of basketball.

Next Tuesday, the Hawks will travel to Triton in the second test to win the conference. Harper won the game the last time they played Triton but then the game was played at Harper. Triton came back strong in the game after being down at one point by 30 points, and losing 76 only time.

Next Thursday the Hawks will end regular season play with a game at home against Wheaton. Triton came back strong in the game after being down at one point by 30 points, and losing 76 only time.

To sum it all up, Harper's conference hopes begin tonight at home and they run until next Thursday. What ever happens is entirely up to the Hawks, win or lose, it's their decision. Tonight's game starts at 5:00 p.m.

Strong wrestling talent stands out at Harper

by TOM LOPUIS
For those of you who may not know, there is a big difference between the "professional" wrestling you might watch on channel 28 and the "amateur" version that you see in the Olympics, college, high school, and grade school. For in this sense, the term "professional" is misleading. And the Olympics, the "Clay", and all the rest are pretty good actors, but what they do for a living has no relation at all to the "professional" quality of this year's edition of the Harper Wrestling Hawks.

As they practiced hard for this Saturday's NAC Conference Tournament, to be held at Harper's own M Building starting at 10 a.m., their team unity continued to grow, despite hopes only of seeing a few individuals in the conference tournament winner's circle at week's end.

At 150 pounds, Howard "H.D." Leggett, owner 23-21, is one of the favorites to reign when Coach Norm Lovelace says, "will definitely be in the running for championship." He's acknowledged that statistics don't lie, however, and points to Triton, in eventual 29-20 victor over Harper last Friday, as being the likeliest eventual overall conference team champ when the dust clears this Saturday night, "if

Swimmers look to state

Although the men's swim team has racked up an impressive 64 dual meet records so far, it will be all uphill from here on out.

"We've been doing a lot of yardage and the guys have been swimming great," said coach Steve Eal. "We'll be putting in about 2,000 yards a day getting ready for the state meet on Feb. 20 and 21."

He really isn't worried about the competition from here on in.

And why should he? The swimmers crushed DuPage 111-23 two Fridays ago and then won the Wrigley Invitational last Friday. Seven swimmers, including two divers, have qualified for the next month's NACAA meet.

A new addition, backstroke John Dolan, is expected before the season is over.

The divers, who so far are led by Mike Schwanitz and Doug Paul Schwanitz has qualified for both the 1-meter and 3-meter nationals, while Pool compiled a 200-80 score in six dives against DuPage to qualify for the 3-meter competition. Pool's accomplishment is most impressive when considering he is in only his first year of competitive diving.

Swimmers Mark Waks and Mike Soja have qualified five events each. Waks has qualified for the 50-free, 100-free, 400-meters relay, 400-free relay, and 800-free relay. Soja has qualified for the 100-free, 200-free, and the 500-free and 800-free relays.

Mike Sheridan, who qualified for the 1,600-free, is the only other swimmer to qualify in an individual event. Todd Muesell and Mike Zwerynski join Soja and Waks on the 400-free relay, while Sheridan joins Soja, Waks, and Zwerynski on the 800-free relay.

The women's team, despite a 2-3 dual meet record, have had some outstanding performances. The Lady Hawks fell to DuPage two weeks ago, 102-58, but rebounded to down North Central 81-75, and North Park 109-84.

"It's not that the women don't have the talent," said Eal. "We just don't have enough swimmers. And we don't have any divers." That's what has hurt.

Terrí Wradlo is one second or closer to qualifying nationally in three events: the 50-free, 100-free, and 200-free. Teammate Pam McEachern won the 200 IM, 100-fly, and was on the winning 800-free relay team against DuPage. Dana Colson and Donna Gavell, meanwhile, are close to qualifying in the 500-free.

All that's left now is to finish out the regular season before the state meet and then the national meet.

The men's team will be at Wheaton this Friday in what Kall calls "our biggest dual meet of the season."

The Hawks edged Wheaton for fifth place in January's Division III championships, but only because Wheaton, a religious school, didn't swim on Sunday, the meet's final day.

"They just might have stronger people in more events," said Eal. "I don't consider our finish ahead of Wheaton at the Division III championships bowing them, because I don't know if we would have beaten them if they had swam on Sunday."

Then he adds, "They don't have better swimmers, just more depth."

But then again, it's not the dual meets that count, at least not for a state championship.

Project costs slashed, lacks local funding

by WENDY WINKELHAKE
Despite a reduction in the estimated costs of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed Project, a proposed flood control basin to be constructed on the northeast corner of the Harper campus, steering committee members remain skeptical in obtaining necessary local funding.

Although reductions could possibly make the task of obtaining the funds less difficult, the Palatine Park District dropped negotiations and have not discussed the project any further.

"They (the park district) thought it wasn't wise to go ahead with the negotiations, they thought it wasn't worth the effort with the delay of funding," said Shirley Munson, board of trustee representative to the steering committee.

The project met a roadblock in October when the committee lacked a matching amount of local financial support to that of any federal allocations granted in the construction of the flood control basin. Appeals have been made to a number of local municipalities but support for the project has been minimal. An estimated $64,000 of the $250,000 needed to complete the project had been secured by the committee last October but it has changed since then.

"Absolutely nothing has changed. We are not the ones getting the funding, it's rather not comment on that," said Munson.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Cook County sought and won approval from the board for the construction of the flood control basin in August 1979. The structure, part of a series of flood control basins built over the past decade, would cover approximately 16 acres. The board also granted the use of parking lots 11 and 12 and Perimeter Road so that the area can be used as a community recreation center.

Use of the Harper lots is necessary since the land east of Quentin Road has already been zoned for the construction of condominiums. The designated construction site of the basin was originally zoned for condominiums but was given up by the developer after federal mediation.

Stansbury: Harper caring not "hand holding" institution

by HOLLY E. KUTLER
Harper students are they loaded down upon, subject to constant praise or are they a breed entirely unto themselves?

Because of the combined costs and the diversity of courses offered, community colleges are often viewed as being advantageous to all high school graduates. The foundation of a reputable college lies in the environment created by its administration. The atmosphere in which students are educated is strictly dependent upon the administration, said Donn Stansbury, vice president of student affairs.

Stansbury sees Harper's potential environment as being an environment including equipment, facilities and quality faculty, an environment in which the faculty could provide quality education, both instructional as well as services. We serve a much more diverse population, age and interest wise.

"Harper's goal is to provide educational opportunities for the people Harper serves. The degree oriented as the four year university. Many people come to Harper to upgrade their skills, a degree isn't the final goal for all students," said Stansbury.

Specialized attention given to students at Harper, along with other junior colleges, raises the question of whether or not this private help is always to the student's advantage.

A Harper education is to be students' distinct advantage. Many programs that are offered here are career oriented, such as the nursing, dental hygiene and business internships, whereby students apply what they've learned in practical working situations. And so as a result, students receive an awful lot of good exposure to the real world. Also of importance is that a good portion of the faculty come directly from the field in which they teach. And again of benefit is the diversified student body which is responsible for an ever changing atmosphere within the classroom," said James McGrath, Harper College president.

"Students attending four year institutions don't necessarily have to get along with people. Here at Harper we foster the idea of interacting with students and faculty. The Harper student can better interact with the world," said Stansbury.

The ability to interact with people is extremely significant in influencing the direction of one's life. And other students, and people in general, see individualized attention offered at community colleges as a two year extension of high school.

"Universities don't feel that way. Many businesses have, in fact, requested that we offer certain courses. For instance, some hospitals have said that we sponsor a pharmaceutical program," said Stansbury.

"I don't perceive Harper as a hand-holding environment. I don't believe that Harper has a great desire to be treated as a hand holding institution, although we'd like to be thought of as a caring institution.

"I don't think that we can call this hand holding, but we used to mail progress reports to students. This was eventually done away with because if students were interested enough, they could just as easily get the information from their instructor. It was also very expensive and time consuming," said Stansbury.

The way that student composition and population work together to create a particular image for that school is what makes this hand-holding theory stand up strongly to many outsiders. The administration acts as a reflection with regard to its attitudes transmitted to the students.

But because they usually require potential students to meet special criteria, usually in the academic sense, hand holding is not usually associated with four year universities.

Harper, at the other end, has an "open door policy" which allows all high school graduates to enter. This, in return, provides Harper with a continual student body small enough to allow individual attention. Professors at four year universities could hardly be expected to get to know and help each of their students. Thus, it is the smaller student population at the community college level that provides this idea of hand holding, interpreted by Stansbury as caring.

Just as the caliber of students differs from college to college, so does that of the actual teaching of those students. Harper, achieving superior recognition amongst all community colleges in the country, has obtained such status as the result of the fine teaching which takes place not only within the confines of a classroom or lecture hall, but sometimes some of the greatest knowledge of insight to a course is gotten outside of the scheduled class session.

Instructors at junior colleges, such as Harper, are more interested in the actual teaching than in conducting research or preparing dissertations, like instructors at the four year institution said Karen Keren, faculty senate president.

Helping the student to work to his fullest potential is part of that teaching process. Instructors at Harper try to make themselves as available as possible to any student in search of some extra help. A student's problem pertaining to a particular course can generally be resolved within the specified office hours of his or her instructor. Yet in some instances, it may not be that easy to iron out any persistent difficulties that a student may encounter in a certain class.

That individual may be a victim of a very real problem or drawback of some junior colleges, a problem that arises when a student is thrown into a class where most of the students are better able to handle the required material and so work on a higher level. Consequently, the instructor may prepare his or her lessons on a level which they see as being the median of that class. There are always bound to be at least a handful of people who aren't capable of learning on that chosen teaching level.

It's because of its open door policy and the variety of students who attend Harper and other community colleges, which makes its extremely difficult for the instructors to accommodate such a mixture of students.

The idea of "placement exams" is being tossed about from one division to the next. Yet, there hasn't been any definite action taken so far, whereby students will be required to take and successfully pass specially designed exams before entrance to a class.

"The mixture of students creates a definite challenge for the teachers. When I talked with instructors, they mentioned that a different level of work is expected of different students. It's a challenge for the better students, and at the same time they're being along the slower students. It's the same in every situation, you can expect the same quality of work from all people.

The quality of students at Harper is not very high, practically the same as those entering Northern. There is quality in our students and we see that," said Stansbury.

Suspension justifiable action in plagiarism case

Editorial

The semester slowly winds down to a close and that term paper assigned the first week of class remains unwritten. The more industrious student finally settles down to write a paper of sorts. But then there is the more "adventurous" student that carefully schemes his way into a paper. After countless hours of searching through the library for a forgotten tale of old, he finds it.

Volla! There is the term paper he has been searching for.

But it may not even take that long search through the library. Numerous agencies across the country offer term papers on almost any topic imaginable; just send away for the catalog, pick your paper and it is on its way.

A far more serious problem than most care to admit, plagiarism hits every college campus whether on the Ivy League or community level. The temptation offered by "paper services" is just too much for some students and still others think that no one will ever remember that piece of old literature stashed in an obscure corner of the library.

But the fact is, it is remembered and the student faces more serious consequences than if he had taken the penalization for turning in a later paper or no paper at all. At the surface, suspension may seem too severe a punishment, but at a closer look it is perfectly justifiable.

By the time a person reaches the college level, he should have developed good time management skills. Having developed these skills organizing one's time and beginning a semester-long project should be no problem. The student who waits till the last minute and plagiarizes to make the grade not only cheats himself but the entire college community.

The student is cheated because he loses out on practicing important organizational skills and developing good research habits essential to any career. The plagiarist cheats the college community by not only trying to pass off someone else's work but by instilling the idea in the minds of other students. While it may not set off a rash of plagiarism, a chain has been forged and will continue to grow semester after semester.

Therefore, although a record of plagiarism and suspension could ruin an academic career, suspension is a mild punishment. The actual disciplinary action handed down by the administration, whether it is expulsion or suspension is by no means as severe as the black marks placed upon a student's record by his own pen.

Plagiarism guidelines called for

To the editor:
After reading the article on the suspension of a student for plagiarism I found myself not surprised at the severity of the action against the student, but rather, at the attitude of the administrators quoted in the paper.

It wasn't too long ago that "The Voice" reported some pretty alarming statistics regarding cheating: 70 percent of those polled admitted to some form of cheating. Many of the students polled said that "light punishment only encouraged them to cheat again."

In light of this mentality, it is hard to believe the attitudes of Dr. Moriarty, Morton College, who only dismissed two students in five years or Mrs. Wade, College of Lake County, who reported "there have been no suspensions, no plagiarism, no serious problems." Believe me, in a world where transferred income tax returns are a national past time and evading radar traps a national sport, it may seem trite, and probably sanctimonious to worry about a little cheating. But I'm worried! It remains a challenge to be honest in this world and if we can somehow contribute to shaping that virtue let's get on with it. By turning one's head on the serious problems we need as guilty as the cheater!

Dr. Stansbury, my suggestion is to give teachers some specific guidelines on handling this most serious situation. It may contribute to increased incident reporting.

Columnists analytical ability snuffs out good times

To the editor:
During the past few weeks, we have grown rather concerned over the mental health of one of your writers.

For someone who is very far from traveling across the country, it is a shame that he is so analytical about the places he goes to that it becomes difficult for him to have a good time.

His pessimistic views presented in his columns makes us believe that he is in a state of neuritis. We are writing this letter with the intent not to analyze Mike but instead to extend a human hand to help him overcome his far too mindlessness. We seem to feel that Mike will neither enjoy the simplicities or aberrations of life because he dwells on negative wave-lengths of his existence.

However, compliments to Mike on his "Why do they always shoot the good guys" article; it shows his potential.

To the readers, please refrain from sending further threat letters as you can see it has not changed his view of things but perhaps, understanding and encouragement on certain will transform Michael into an optimist.

THERE'S ONLY ONE PLACE TO GET $9,200 FOR COLLEGE IN JUST TWO YEARS.

Soon you'll have your associate's degree. And if you're thinking of continuing your education, you know just how expensive that will be.

But consider the Army. In the Army, if you participate in the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), you can accumulate $9,200 for college in just two years.

That's significant for two reasons. Obviously, that's a lot of money. But what you may not have realized is that two years is the shortest military enlistment available. Only the Army can offer you both.

VEAP is a great way to make it on your own. Since it's not a loan, you won't need a co-signer or collateral. And you'll never have to worry about making payments after graduation.

It's strictly a savings program, and the money is all yours for school.

VEAP is surprisingly simple. If you save between $25 and $100 each month while you're in the Army, the government will match your savings two-for-one. And, on top of that, you might even qualify for the exclusive Army educational bonus of $2,000.

And remember, in just two years, you'll be back in school.

"Look, Muffy, a book for us."

by MIKE SIMKUS
On Christmas morning I poured the contents of my Christmas stocking onto the top of our baby grand piano Santa Claus, I realized, gave me the book, The Official Preppy Handbook, subtitled "Look, Muffy, a book for us."

Since Christmas morning the book has rested between my Webster's Dictionary, Bartlett's Familiar Quotations and Jimm Fix's The Complete Book of Running. I have already used the book many times, and it makes terrific reading after my school work is done and I can no longer think scholastically.

I have never dressed, nor have I been an orthodox prep. You, I may become a "preppy prep."

But, I like it once thought,

Mike Simkus
abstract
analyst

probably think that you have to go to an Ivy League school, live in Connecticut, be a conservative, be a Republican, and have lots of money. Well, that's not true. Although, it would help to have lots of money, because preppy clothes do tend to cost when barrows full of money.

Can you imagine the look on people's faces when you tell them that you voted for Barry Commoner last election, when you look like the product of Harvard Law School? They would not expect that from a clean cut, all-American. In other words, a preppy.

I know it's not really right that people judge books by their covers, but nonetheless they still do. And let's face it, whenever we eventually graduate in the non-career world, it will be tough going to find the right job. Every little bit will help. I'm sorry about the cliché.

I have a friend in Conn who is a preppy, who also attends an Ivy League school, and his name is Ken. I asked Ken who he dressed like a preppy. He said, "Mike. He ham" given me a nickname yet? There is just no other way to dress. Lacoste shirts, Sperry Top-Siders, Khaki slacks, and no socks." Ken is a very orthodox prep.

By now, you maybe intrigued, but not convinced whether you want to be a preppy.

Here is a list of preppy nicknames taken from the book, pick out one: "Skip, Chip, Skip, Biff, Bink, Rocky, Jack, Missy, Muffy, Bully, Bitzy, Booky, Bomby, Cutty, Corkie, and Kiki."

Here is a list of exit lines that preppies use, pick one: "Let's bolt. We're golden. We're history. We're out of here. Let's act like a preacher and get the hell out of here."

Here is a list of places that preppies hang out at, according to the book, pick one: "Fritz That's It in Evanston, Second City, Wisley Field, Wise Fool's Pub, and Pizzeria Uno."

And here is the best reason, the most preppy sport is sailing. My personal favorite. By the way, Northwestern University offers a very good beginner sailing class which is economical during the spring and summer.

So, when you go home tonight say, "Hi, mummy! Hi, daddy. I'm #7." Translated "Hello, mom and dad, I need a vacation."

Rock isn't the only kind of music

by SCOTT WULBERT
This writing is about jazz music, and the economics of melodic and rhythmic diversities, particularly through the free-form style of jazz known as improvisation.

When analyzing popular music, it is safe to say that the most current trend can be chronologically traced back to a point of origin, that is, a style of popular music hit for the first time, a predecessor that directly overlapped the current style no matter how apart the current style may seem from its source. It is in this manner that popular music is usually spoken about, a kind of unending process.

Jazz music works in much the same way, except that instead of being on a more linear level of chronology, it is often more of an ever rising plateau that is constantly operating, the jazz artists clutch dearly the vein that is the basic substructure of their development, and often go directly back to the source for nourishment, instead of feeding on the directions of their immediate predecessors.

This process provides for a great diversity in the directions that jazz takes; however, it is far that reason that preference is shown when talking about jazz, to sort of hover above it and look hand in the places that may reveal the most information in a pleasurable form, then to start at the ambiguous sources and work upward.

Scott Wulbert

... on music

Having taken this into consideration, perhaps the best place to start is in the midst of some jazz veterans that play in the "classical" jazz format. This means they derive their sound more directly from a universal format, one that they have themselves pioneered by stretching the boundaries of musical acceptability, to evolve into a sound that is now vital. Musicians in this field are: Bill Jackson, Vibes, Oscar Peterson, piano; Clark Terry, trumpet; Niels Pederson, bass; and Joe Pass, guitar. These are artists who were considered avant-garde when they first elaborated on the traditional jazz, but now are noted more for the same qualities they relate which chronology is considered as being classical.

The aforementioned artists joined with tenor sax sideman, Ronnie Scott and drummer, Bobby Durham to produce an album that is a good example of classical jazz. The recording is titled The Pablo Allstars Jam, and was recorded live in Montreux, Switzerland at the famed jazz festival of same name, on the Pablo Record Label.

The album is an interesting conglomeration of styles that each individualize the total composition of the piece, and yet seem to mingle well with each other as complimentary figures, each paying the way for the others' musical embellishments. The songs are diverse enough to provide a sort of anthology to classical jazz. The first piece entitled,

"Love D'Kare" written by Clark Terry, is a fine example of complementary improvisation, meaning each musician masterfully paves the way for the next, a musical set-up that cleaves above the constant rhythms, and main melodic line of the song, but never reaching so far as to not be able to return in time for the next musician to phrase his melodic idea.

Bill Jackson widely known for his participation as the leader of The Modern Jazz Quartet, is able to produce a sound from his vibes that is almost unqualified in clarity and definition. His proficiency is apparent particularly on the second song, titled "Praises from Heaven," where he takes advantage of the up-beat tempo to show how he can evolve his musical progressions by starting at the melody and discreetly building the idea into a solo that weaves around the rhythm independent of the melody from which it nurtured.

Also of particular note, is the solo by saxophonist Ronnie Scott on "God Bless The Child," a Billie Holiday standard, where Scott really demonstrates his abilities. His playing is very low-key and jazzy sounding like the "Cool" jazz sound of the early fifties. Scott's sax is made to sound like a direct extension of his voice, like someone lazily weeping through a saxophone very softly. The album is good, the artists are masters of communicating certain moods, or listening experiences to the listener, and this is what music is about.

Diamond, lyrics and melodies a winning combination

by MOLLY KUTLER
 Lyrics that come calling at the door of your mind, melodies which embrace your soul through its journey, and that unmistakable voice which makes the words come alive—Neil Diamond is that man for the job.

You can sing along, cry with, dance or reminisce with the songs he has made happen for himself and the public. Yet his artistic talent doesn't stop there, as those who have seen "The Jazz Singer" can confirm. Take out the handkerchiefs, because this movie brings tears to the eyes and a lump to the throat.

In his acting debut, to very little surprise, Diamond brings total credibility to his portrayal of Yusef/Jesse Robin. At the outset of the movie, we see a man who's life hinges on Jewish tradition and the admirable love he holds for his father. In keeping with family tradition, he assists his father (Laurence Olivier) who is the cantor at their synagogue. Yet Yusef, has been secretly leading another life of singing his own music to a somewhat different kind of congregation. A yearning so strong, makes him temporarily abandon his job of assistant cantor to investigate what might await him on the other side of the horizon.

Film review

His wife turns down the many invitations to accompany him to Los Angeles, where he hopes to record his songs and gain public recognition. Having both evidently come from the same school, Jesse's (Yusef's stage name) trip and the trouble that its bound to result in, has gone greatly against his father and wife's conventional way of thinking. What started out as a 2 week visit to California has extended far beyond that.

Making several pleas to his son to return home, and continue singing for God, the cantor cries many a night over what he sees as the loss of his only son.

As the story unfolds, his wife having now left him, gives Yusef the green light to pursue the relationship with his vivacious manager (Lucie Arnaz) who has taken him under her wing from the time he arrived at the airport.

The dual conflict of father and son, and singing in a synagogue versus being received at concerts with standing ovations, has the audience in a state of perpetual curiosity. To summarize any further, would mean to strip the movie of it's intended beauty, which must be viewed by the naked eye to be fully appreciated.

Olivier's accent, timing, gestures and consistently good control of his character has ignited the spark to one theatrically fine performance.

From singing to acting, Neil Diamond has proved that he is indeed multi-talented. To say that his first shot at acting was good is an understatement. From watching people's reactions in the audience, I'd say that I'm very much in agreement with the public.

It was apparent as a gradual decaying of morals, good movies aren't all that easy to come by. "The Jazz Singer" has something to offer everyone, several songs, all of which Neil Diamond has written, many serene moments, and a spattering of comical relief. A great film and you don't have to be Jewish to love it!

Echo and the Bunnymen "Crocodiles"

It starts with some ominous, synthesized rhythms and works up to a driving tempo of twelve surprising, creative songs. I guess with a group name of Echo and the Bunnymen you have to possess some wit. When listening to their latest album, "Crocodiles" on sire records, one feels the excitement that a group such as the Talking Heads or Roxy Music emits.

Curt Ackman

...ON MUSIC

With many of the new wave releases, the album cover possesses the weirdest form of art photography. It features the Bunnymen scattered within a forest, leaning or lying next to tangled tree life in a zany-like pose. Their work on the album boils many of the same characteristics of the photography. In many cases, the music on the album can be described as artistic, amusic, and austere. Especially like those possessing what every one dictates to you and the set way society beckons us to act. Some of the titles include, "Going Up," a cut about the Nuclear Holocaust that awaits us in the near future.

In general, the basic music is uptempo, but a little too often the rhythms get rather repetitive and monotonous. Other than that, the Bunnymen met my expectations and caught my attention with tracks like "Stars are Stars" and the title release "Crocodiles".

The group has plans for a movie already underway to gain minority-like their album cover. They will attack this film in the same ominous fashion. Needless to say it should be interesting.

American Student Assn. hits dire straits, dies

by HELEN CORDES and STU HIRSCH
 Washington, D.C. (CP)—Things are very quiet at the American Student Association office near Dupont Circle in pricey northwest Washington, D.C.

"I don't know what happened to them," says a tenant from a nearby office. "About a month ago a guy from there said they were having some problems, then they moved out last week. Somebody came and changed the locks."

Indeed, the people of the American Student Association (ASA)—six months ago the flashiest, biggest and most ambitious national student group ever to reside here—has fallen on hard times, and may even be dying.

Its disease appears to be one of broken promises to its college employees, a lack of capital, and the same sort of organizational confusion that prompted reformists to break away from the U.S. Student Association in 1970 to form ASA in the first place.

"Everything's fine with ASA," contends founder, president and now lone staffer Tom Duffy by phone from Chicago. "There are no problems." He says he has not been at the Washington, D.C. headquarters for over a month because "I was making a midwest swing of col-lege."

Though they caution that Duffy's optimism has often proved justified in the past, the key staffers who have left Duffy argue there are very serious internal problems.

ASA may well continue if Duffy can send out more flashy mailings and get continued membership renewals," says former ASA Director of Development Ed Rothstein. But money has become a major problem. Rothstein says Duffy began his organization with a $15,000 loan from his father, who owns a travel agency in Barrington, Ill., and then quickly raised funds by charging a low, $15 membership fee. However, the low fee meant the group had to be continually recruiting new members to pay for its operations.

The low fee, says Rich Wintry, an ASA alternate board member and former University of Oklahoma student body president, "stimulated membership but may not have been a good idea."

Some of Duffy's aides questioned the way the president spent the money. "We spent over $20,000 just on publications for the group's national July conference," Rothstein alleges. When Rothstein left the group in November, ASA still owed thousands to the hotel where the conference had been held.

"It was a relief when the phones got shut off," Rothstein remembers, "because of creditors calling us." Money worries drove Rothstein and two other major officers from the ASA. Executive Director Jim Bernau sued ASA for $6000 in back wages when he left in October. Despite promises from Duffy, Director of Programs Eric Start never was paid on the payroll, and left after Bernau.

Rothstein reluctantly left ASA in November. When he joined ASA, "I was given the idea there would be a budget, resources, and a salary." Instead, he was put "on contract," and says ASA still owed him $1000 when he left. "But I'll never see that. I was a fool not to get anything on paper."

Duffy has apparently spent much of the time since the defections trying to raise money from private sources. Perhaps trading on ASA's reputation as conservative students' answer to the more socially active U.S. Student Association, Duffy even approached New Right direct mail fundraiser who Richard Viguere for funds, according to Rothstein.

Viguere, who could not be reached for comment, reportedly turned down Duffy. (Continued on page 6)

First year men swimmers head to nationals

by JOE KOET
The Harper Men's swim team will be taking a trip to the east future to Rochester, N. Y.

This isn't one of those trips that one takes with their camera and a ton of stamps to mail post-cards home to their friends. This is the type of trip that a determined athlete takes to prove himself against other top athletes from all across the country.

This is the NCAAs Swimming and Diving Nationals and Harper is going there to do more than just compete with other top athletes from across the country, Harper is going there to win.

Harper will be represented by several top swimmers especially Mark Waks and Mike Soja.

Waks will be competing at the nationals in five separate categories: 50 meter free style, 100 meter free style, 400 meter free relay, 800 meter free relay, and the 400 meter medley relay. Soja will be competing at nationals in the 100 meter free style, 100 meter fly, 500 meter individual medley, and all three relays as well.

Mike Zwierzynski has also qualified for the nationals in all three relays for Harper while Mike Sheridan qualified in the 200 meter free style, 500 meter free style and the 1000 meter free style.

"I think that I should break in the top ten in our relay teams. I think I can finish in the top three," said a confident Waks. Todd Musicki will go to nationals swimming in the 400 meter medley relay for Harper.

As of now, Harper's Men swim team is undefeated in dual meets and has already clinched the conference.

Swimming

Head swim coach Sieve Eul has a great deal of confidence in his team in the state meet and at nationals.

"There is no problem at the state meet," comments Eul. "There is no doubt that we'll win the state championship because there is just no one in the state that will be able to stop us."

"I think that we'll finish in the top five at nationals," added Eul.

The Women's swim team hasn't been as successful as the men this year but they still have their own individual outstanding talents.

Terri Westdale has qualified for the nationals in three separate events for Harper. The 50 meter free style, the 100 meter free style and the 200 meter free style are the events that Westdale will compete in when she travels to Rochester.

Dana Odom is another women swimmer that stands out. Odom is a freshman and she is very close to qualifying for nationals in the 100 meter free style. She is also one of Harper's top performers in the 500 meter free style and she is one of the Harwa top distance swimmers according to Eul.

The women's 400 meter free style relay is also very close to qualifying for nationals. The team consists of Westdale, Odom, Dana Gawell and Pam McEachern.

Harper will host the sectional meet this weekend. Tomorrow the meet will begin at 1 p.m. and again at 7 p.m. The meet will conclude on Saturday at 1 p.m.

Conference hopes fade in loss to Triton

by JOE KOST
Last week's nonsworn forced the Women's Basketball team at Harper to reevaluate their home game against Joliet to some other time when the weather prevailed.

The game was one of great importance at the time. The team that won that particular game could have possibly gone on to win the conference. So the Joliet game will be played tonight at Harper starting at 5 p.m.

However, the game has no real importance to either of the teams any more, at least not to Harper. The Hawks suffered a loss 'sat Thursday at Triton that puts them out of the race to be the conference champs.

Triton exploded in a final free-throw surge that finished them with an 85-71 victory over visiting Harper.

"I don't like to say anything bad about referees because they could have a bad game just like any player," said Harper coach Tom Teschner after the game. "But we made seven of our ten free-throws at attempts and that was pretty good. Triton went to the line 37 times and made 21 of those free-throws."

"I'm not trying to be mean but we had the best that we had when we played somewhere else," added Teschner. Harper was leading for the majority of the game too and held a three point lead at the half-time, 36-31.

The Hawks opened up the second half scoring four straight points to put themselves up by a margin of seven that was when the fouls started being called against Harper and Sue Hoday. Karen DeMoss and Diana Dieber found themselves in foul trouble.

Harper's command of the game was taken away and the contest became the soul possession of the referees whistle determining who would shoot the free-throws.

With 2:00 minutes remaining in the contest, Harper pulled to within four points of Triton but fouls that put Hoday, Dieber and DeMoss out of the game put Triton in the lead for good.

Leading the Hawks in scoring were Sue Hoday with 20 points and Mary Ann Larsen and Diana Dieber each had 15 points in the Hawks loss. Karen DeMoss had eight points and Kim Place returned to the lineup to add seven points to the Hawks effort.

Harper's conference record was lowered to 10-13 overall. The Hawks could play an important part in determining the conference winner when they meet the current NAC leaders Joliet at home. If Harper beats Joliet then Triton will tie with Joliet for the conference championship. If Joliet tops Harper tonight then they will be in sole possession of the NAC championship.

Harper opens their sectional playoffs next Thursday night Friday at Wright College. The teams that they'll play will be determined in a special meeting that is being held tomorrow.

"I think that we should be able to do very well in the sectionals," said Teschner. "We'll probably end up playing either Wright or Truman colleges but you never know."

"Wright can be very rough at home but I think we should be able to get by them and into the finals."

Harper can get by Wright and Truman then they'll most likely have to face Triton in the finals and according to Teschner, "We've got quite a score to settle with them."

Harper will go into the sectionals with all their players healthy with the exception of LeeAnn Rose who quit the squad a week ago due to personal conflicts.

Hawks hurting on Strawn's injury

by JOE KOST
The Harper Men's basketball team suffered two losses last Saturday when they traveled to Lake County College in an away contest.

First, Harper lost the game to Lake County, a team that possesses an 8-1 record in the Sky Way conference but an overall record of 12-12, by a score of 89-84.

In the contest Tim Murray had 27 points and Parnold contributed 25 points for Harper.

The real loss of the contest came about five minutes into the game when Harper leader Dave Strawn suffered a broken foot that will keep him out of action for the remainder of the season.

"I was playing defense and the guy that I was covering went to 'no run,'" says Strawn. "I tried to cut with him but I twisted my foot on the floor and snapped the bone off."

"I didn't even know it was broken until I put some ice on it," said Strawn. "But I do know that it sure hurt bad."

Strawn led the game when Harper was winning 14-4 and Strawn already had five points. With Strawn missing from the line-up, Harper will definitely be the underdog team in the regional. Harper plays at home tonight against Joliet. The game will start at 7:30 p.m.

They may be benched or cut, but they still dream

"Belief to be a has-been, than a never-been." Anonymous
It is very intriguing that in the hype-oriented sporting world, one rarely reads about the frustrated athlete who always remains frustrated. Perhaps it is an oversight by our friends in Plastic City. Perhaps not.

These athletes, who will never make a name for themselves in the sporting world, have a story. It certainly doesn't read like "The Horatio Alger Story or Bonno Becomes President." And maybe that's why these frustrated dreamers present such an interesting story. They are a study in reality.

This particular story is about one of the thousands, perhaps millions of athletes who will end up not as has-beens but as never-been. This is a story about a guy who will play an infinite number of pick-up games at the local YMCA, capturing bits of The Dream.

"Hey, with some work on my jumper, the coach thinks I'll make it," said my friend the other day. (That's what the coach always says.)

I smiled at him. "I'm sure you'll make it."
"You know," said my friend. "I just think I might this time I mean, I'm running out of chances. I better make it or I won't."

My friend is a good athlete. He isn't great just good. In the cold world of objectivity, he's no more than a bit player who'll always get into foul trouble. There, finally, the coach benches him. That didn't help.

"I thought that was the end," my friend said. "But later the because he could be anyone, he is representative of the dreamer chasing the dream. He is an average of other athletes anonymous. He is nameless and faceless.

"I remember when I was in eighth grade," recalled my friend. "I went out for our basketball team and almost made it. I made it past the first two cuts. Then came the third and final cut. The coach calls me and this other guy over. You know I'd like to keep you both," he tells us. "But I can't."

Then he tells me I'm the one who's a goner.
"When I was leaving the gym, the coach calls me over to see you at center, because you're the biggest guy we've got. Hey, that was all right with me. But I never played much. I did good in practice, but never in the game. Finally I quit just, and then our coach and we got a new coach. He came to me and asked me if I wanted to give another try. So I did it."

He played well, prompting the varsity coach to hunt about a starting position his senior year. He went to basketball camp the next summer. As a freshman, though, he did poorly. He got down on himself constantly. He was the one who was always in foul trouble. There, finally, the coach benches him. That didn't help.

"I thought that was the end," my friend said. "But later the coach told me not to worry. You'll be back in there," he says. "You got what it takes, but you got to get control of your game."

Then came the last game of the season. We'd won only once. Anyway, we're playing the first-place team in the league. They're big. Real big. We'll be behind early in the first quarter. In the second quarter we made a little comeback. I didn't know what happened after the second quarter because the ref threw me out of the game. Something about offending his maternal bigtines.

He laughed.
He didn't play as a sophomore, but played JV as a junior after a knee-injury had sidelined him during varsity try-outs.

"I was ready. I was shooting well. I was quicker than I ever was. And I was in good shape. Then the knee just gave out. The JV coach told me, 'We got to use you at center, because you're the biggest guy we've got. Hey, that was all right with me. But I never played much. I did good in practice, but never in the game. Finally I quit just, and then our coach and we got a new coach. He came to me and asked me if I wanted to give another try. So I did it.'

He got down on himself constantly. He was the one who was always in foul trouble. There, finally, the coach benches him. That didn't help.

"I thought that was the end," my friend said. "But later the started encouraging me about a starting spot. Man, I was ready."

Not quite. A shaky try-out raised his chances for an immediate starting spot, and then a two-week quarantine at his school knocked him out of shape.

But, in the consolation game of a Thanksgiving, Classic, he came off the bench in the final two minutes and scored two quick buckets. His team lost by 22 points, but the coach noticed his play.

He comes to me before the next practice and told me straight-out. "This is your chance to start. We're gonna look at you real good today."

"Unfortunately," he did nothing right in the practice. Finally, the coach pulled him off the first-team and put him with the second team. Then the third team. Then the bench.

It was all downhill from there. Two months later, he quit the team. I went with two of his closest friends. He eventually rejoined the team, but was never fully accepted by his teammates again.

"I never felt a part of the team after that game."

"Thanksgiving Classic. I always felt like I was the senior that would graduate in three months. I thought that's why the coaches were keeping me. I hadn't done much. So I go to the coach and tell him, 'You've got a junior that could be taking my spot on the roster. But you're keeping me instead. Why?' He just smiles at me."

He finished his varsity career with 11 points in 14 games. He only missed one shot from the field (out of five attempts).

He didn't play as a freshman in college and now, as a sophomore, he is playing only in pick-up games with his friends. "They keep me going," he said. "They keep telling me, 'You're good. Real good. Why don't you go out for the team?'"

"I guess I'll keep trying until I run out of chances. I still think I can do it." He looked down at the court. Suddenly, he didn't laugh or smile. He didn't say a word. He just stared down at the court where he had spent much of his life chasing The Dream.

Perhaps he realized right then that the dream was over.

Budget cuts a heavy blow to college students

(CPS)—Fully half the nation's college students might have to change their plans for next year if Congress passes President Ronald Reagan's plan to cut federal financial aid by 20 percent, financial aid administrators warn.

The cuts recommended by the Office of Management and Budget have private colleges in particular scurrying to devise methods to compensate for the loss in grants and loans. But all college administrators contacted by College Press Service feared the proposed cuts would destroy their enrollments.

Don Mullien, head of financial aid at the University of Montana and the president of the Rocky Mountain Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, predicts that if the cuts are approved, "Aid to part-time students will be the first eliminated. Then we'd probably have to make aid dependent on grades."

Even then, Mullien estimates that Montana still would have "about 500 hurt students," which would "unquestionably have a significant impact on enrollment."

Of major consequence in Mullien and other financial aid administrators are the recommendations made concerning Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans, and Guaranteed Student Loans.

Specifically, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Director David Stockman wants to cut 200,000 students from the Pell (formerly BEOG) program by restricting the grants to students from families making less than $35,000 a year.

Mullien frets such a move would "cut off a couple hundred students" at Montana alone, while Donald Chemele of Case-Western in Ohio asserts "it would be an incredible hardship" for those families with more than one child in college. "If you've got two or three kids in graduate and undergraduate school, even if you earn a higher-than-average income, you're going to have trouble putting those kids through school unless you can pay in installments over a long period of time. Pell Grants gave people that opportunity," Chemele says.

Stockman also wants to eliminate the National Direct Student Loans program over the next four years. The loss would pose additional problems for students hoping to "make up for the loss of a grant with a loan," says Paul Chrisman of Wichita State.

Chrisman's financial aid office manages $1 million yearly in NDSLs, some of which is used to fund other programs, like work study.

The Guaranteed Student Loan plan, however, is the largest federal aid program, and administrators predict that Stockman's recommended changes in the GSL program could cause the worst problems and most drastically affect enrollment.

Stockman proposes the elimination of the "in-school interest subsidy" program of Guaranteed Student Loans. Under the current system, students repay bank loans for tuition at nine percent interest rates, while the government pays the difference between nine percent and the regular interest rate. Under the new plan, students will have to pay the regular market rate, which now hovers between 7 and 20 percent.

Benjamin Culley of Occidental College moans that the loss of any part of the GSL program "would be a very heavy blow" to schools. Nationally, it provides $4.8 billion to students yearly.

Over 600 students get $1.25 million in GSLs every year at Occidental, and Culley warns that many of those people would have to transfer to a public school if that money dried up.

"We simply don't have the resources to make up for that money," Culley says. "One-third of our students would be affected by such a thing, and they'd have to get the money somewhere else in order to stay at Occidental."

Almost half the students enrolled at Maine's Babson College are dependent on GSLs, according to Edwin Middleton of the financial aid office. Any change in the program would "pose a threat" to private schools, she says, because students simply couldn't afford the high tuition costs of such colleges.

But if GSLs provide for 30-50 percent of undergraduates, Emory University's Herman Reese estimates that at least 60-75 percent of the nation's graduate students rely on the program.

"GSLs have a tremendous impact on the anticipated of grad students," he says, hinting that many students would have to drop out of school immediately if the interest rates and income eligibility were changed. "In the program,"

Case-Western's Chemele says that need students in particular would be hit because their costs are usually the highest. Between tuition, living, and supply expenses, Chemele estimates that an average med student at Case must come up with $11,500 each year.

"Only about a quarter of our students can come up with that kind of money without the GSL," Chemele observes. Tom Little of Emory Law School, for one, says that a GSL made it possible for him to at-

ISSC contingency plan ups standards, reduces rewards

Students promised Illinois State Scholarship Commission (ISSC) grants for the 1981-82 academic year may be awarded smaller amounts than originally anticipated due to a contingency plan recently approved by the ISSC.

"Although applications have already been processed and award letters sent out, reprocessing is more than likely according to the plan. Under the contingency plan, eligibility standards could be tightened enough to increase family contributions to 25 percent of college expenses can be affected. But those with the closest balanced budget will be most affected. A student with $400 in unmet expenses will be hurt more than a student with $2000 in unmet expenses. It's hitting students that really don't need it," said Connie Lindley, director of the student grant program.

The contingency plan measures the amount of need against such factors as family income and school expenses then subtracts any unmet level of $400 or less from the total award.

"Letters are being sent to students but students should remember that the amount stated in the letter could be reduced. For example, if a student has a $600 allocation it could be cut down to $200. Students will know by August 15. The amount of the contingency depends on the volume of applications received, Lindley said.

Students will not know the exact amount of their award until Aug. 15 since most of the evaluating will not be completed until then. Other factors involved in the late notification include the volume of applications filed for the fall 1981 semester and the expected July 1 passages of the budget appropriations by the Illinois General Assembly.

At this point, no estimates can be given on the effect that the contingency plan will have on Harper students.

"It's hard to judge the effect since we have only gotten 10-15 awards so far and we can't tell how many we are going to have," said Carol Zack, Harper financial aid specialist.

Water main breaks, cancel's Saturday's active

A water main near the entrance of Bldg. F ruptured last Friday night forcing the cancellation of classes and activities on Friday night and all day Saturday.

The break in the eight inch main was caused by pressure on the pipe from the soil shifting unevenly as the ground began to thaw after last week's warming trend in weather. Such breaks are apparently not uncommon with this area's climate. The closing of school was made due to the fact that no water was available for drinking, toilets, or beverage venting. In November of 1980 the Board of Trustees allocated $50,000 for water system projects including installation of sectionalizing valves which would confine disruption of water service to only the area where the break occurs, unlike last weekend where the whole campus lost water service. The Illinois Community College Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education recently approved the Harper Board's expenditure and the installation of the valves should be completed by fall.

Proposed budget cuts jeopardize country's future

Apparently presidential aide find a good smoke more essential to the American future than a good education.

Last week President Reagan announced his plan to cut the economy back on its feet. While the federal government will continue to support the tobacco industry perhaps the most devastating cuts come to student financial aid programs.

Presented is the elimination of the National Direct Student Loan program over the next four years, restricting Pell grants to students from families making less than $10,000 a year and hiking the interest rate on guaranteed student loans to market price.

Every citizen of the United States is guaranteed a public education but most require some type of financial assistance to continue their education on the college level. With the drastic budget cuts proposed, many will have to find other ways of funding their education. Still others may have to give up their pursuit and take on a low collar job simply due to their lack of education.

Not only is the federal government proposing drastic cutsback but the state financial aid program is revamping itself also. The Illinois State Scholarship Commission is currently working under a contingency plan. Under that plan, students will be awarded a certain amount of dollars contingent upon the amount of applications received and periodic evaluations.

The issuer of the two writs is without a doubt, the NSIC plan. It is aimed at reducing the amount of awards given to students who may not be able to meet the cost by decreasing this amount greater amounts can be given to those with larger degrees of need. No matter how the situation is viewed, students will have to alter their plans for higher education. For some it may mean attending a school not as respected and qualified in a certain field, attending a state rather than private or out-of-state school. In some possibly, no college at all. The Reagan administration pledged continued government allocations to the tobacco industry but is willing to jeopardize the education of thousands of students. If the tobacco industry supply decreases or prices skyrocket then people will just smoke less. But if today's students tomorrow's leaders do not receive a quality education simply because they can't afford it on their own, the future of the entire country is at stake.

Letters to the Editor

Without student input, senate at a standstill

To the Editor:
Throughout my workings with the Student Senate, povers often come and complain on the effort the student legislation is putting forth. They say that nothing gets done and we serve a meaningless position.

For my first rebuttal, I usually ask "Well, what is it that you want to get done or what is your main complaint?" When they usually stammer and realize that their complaint is non-existent, the person isn't so accusing. However, there are many things that the student body is not aware of; the senate is there for his and her use and we are the link with the administration in discussing the students view on policies and procedures. If a student is not happy with a situation, their first move should be to come to the representative senate so that we can discuss this with the correct party involved.

The problem with a commuter school like Harper is apathy and ignorance of the sole use of the student. In an institution with a school enrollment reaching near 20,000, I can count the students that have walked into our office on one hand. The solution to this problem is a simple one. If you have a problem or don't like the way something is run just yell and scream to your student senators until a resolution is made or a question answered. Sincerely,
Curt Ackman
Student Senator

Thanks to winter freeze helpers

To the Editor:
On behalf of the Public Safety Department, I would like to thank all the concerned and generous people who have helped us so far this winter jump-starting dead batteries and pushing out snowbound vehicles. Not only does our department appreciate the assistance, but most assuredly, so do those citizens who need the help.

'Eyewitness' wastes talent; a flop

It's been two years since we've seen Sigourney Weaver ("Alien"). Two weeks since last seeing William Hurt ("Altered States"). Now they both star in "Eyewitness," a feeble imitation of Hitchcock. Hurt portrays Darryl Reeve, a junior who finds the dead body of his employer, a very big international figure. Tony Sokolow (Weaver) is a TV reporter who's covering the murder for a news story

Reeve wants Sokolow to interview him. Not for the story, but to tell her: "I've got the biggest crush on you."

Screenwriter Steven Teasch fails in keeping the story interesting. Each level of the love story between Weaver and Hurt isn't well drawn. The foreign intrigue aspect is slow and boring. Never linking thoughts or clues together to establish pace. In total, the characterizations are stale, adding up to only cardboard quality. It's a big disappointment knowing that Teasch was the writer for the wisn and original movie, "Breaking Away," for which he won an Academy Award. This is not a great follow-up, not even a good one.

Director Peter Yates (who directed "Breaking Away") is not the right person for this kind (suspense) of film. His skills are more suited for fast-paced (non-overral) action movies like one of his earlier works ("Bullitt"). Each suspense scene is announced ahead of time, which ruins whatever build-up he may have created. The good cast Hurt, Weaver, James Woods, and Christopher Plummer are wasted in this film. Don't be an eyewitness to this dud.

Bringing government back down to size?

Before the election last November, you probably had seen one of the many propaganda type ads that major American corporations were advertising in every major American newspaper. More often, these ads were full page ads. And full page ads cost large sums of money.

These ads were trying to convince the citizens of the United States, that government had grown too big. "Help get government off our backs. Government has gotten too big. Let's bring it down to size."

Well, America bought the propaganda, and elected the people who were supposed to bring government down to it's correct size.

Last August, the National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity wrote: "They (big business) depict all public servants, and policy makers especially, as hanging loafs. They spend untold millions to tell us that the undeserving

abstract analysis

poor, with the help of government, brought on our economic ills, as we need only to tighten their belts (i.e. eliminate human and social services) and all will be well again.

"The people most affected by this belt tightening are those unemployed youths in CETA programs, elderly people on fixed incomes, owners of small family farms, handicapped persons who need special education, blue-collar workers who cannot afford soaring hospital and housing costs, welfare recipients and mental patients."

On the first charge by big business—that government is made up of hanging loafs—John DeLoran wrote in his book On A Clear Day You Can See General Motors: "Any auto analyst who studied the domestic car market during the 1960's knew well that growth was in smaller, lighter-weight and more fuel efficient cars while upper management rejected most of our programs to develop these sorts of cars in 1969 and 1970, it has been forced to reverse its position today because of the drastically rising manufacturing costs and federal mandated fuel mileage levels. The decision to go small is based on cost and government action, pure and simple. 'Nothing else'."

DeLoran quit GM because of upper managements repeated refusal to respond to the American auto needs. He is the only person ever to quit GM as vice president!

Without government action, the auto makers would be in worse dire straits than they already are.

New, let's review President Reagan's current budget cut proposals. He wants to cut federal subsidizing of the school lunch program—which will effect almost all area high school and grammar school lunch programs. He wants to cut federal subsidizing of mass transportation—even though this area has no real public transportation system, and the RTA is continually struggling for it's existence. He wants to cut federal subsidies on housing, and let the private sector pick up the tab. He wants to cut money available for student loans and grants for colleges. He wants to put all money for school education into one lump sum, thereby the local schools do with it as they see fit. But, where money was once allocated for the handicapped, it no longer will be. He wants to cut federal money for programs like: food stamps, Medicaid, unemployment insurance, AFDC (Aid to families with dependent children, typically on welfare), and CETA jobs.

Now that does look surprising like the list that the NACEO compiled in August. But, what really bothers me is the continuing question I keep hearing, which echoes inside my mind: Are these people the real cause of inflation, and our economic problems??"

I'd like to share something that the NACEO wrote, with you. They concluded: "When a sane and civilized family runs into tough financial times two things happen. The one thing that they do is to assure that those members of the family who are least able to fend for themselves are giving protection and minimum amenities for survival. The one thing that they do not do is to allow those who have more than enough and are enjoying luxuries, to continue to hoard. There are certain natural principles of behavior, of caring and decency, that have prior claim over untested game plans of economic libertarians or politicians on the make. It is the adherence to these principles that define us as human."

Today's New Wave and 60's not far apart

An Influx of oldies
New wave. The name brings to mind punked-out creatures you might find in a Bonjour action jeans commercial.

But when we look at the influence the groups of the 1960's placed on this music, we see a large similarity in sound and lyrical content. Groups like the Zombies with their smooch, "Time of the Season," had the ominous beat underlying. With the eccentric base line "ou du du tu la ash," the sound reflects many of the new wave chants and rhythms.

In 1964, Eric Burdon and the Animals released "House of the Rising Sun," an old standard that Alan Price rearranged into a driving ballad with Eric doing the eerie vocals. Like many of the '60's groups, the Doors were looking for real meaning in an era when Vietnam, sin and burning draft cards were commonplace. They countered with "People are strange," in 1967. Even the insipid T.V. sitcom "The Monkees," got in the act with a "hey" called "Words." Multitudes of others have shaped and some still form the musical theories, including Lou Reed, David Bowie and Mott the Hoople.

The music of today with Devo, Blondie and the Police cranking out success after success, has been formulated by the varied artists of yesteryear, and the hardening of times we and the youths of the 1960's faced. The musicians of today sing with meaning. They speak of nuclear warfare, the economy and of social and racial problems. Music has evolved and will evolve as more and more pioneers of the music industry step into view.

April Wine
"The Nature of the Beast," is the new April Wine album on Capitol Records. April Wine whose real credit of the past was "High Roller," seems to have the future in view with their newest release.

They've pulled together to perform the purest definition of album-oriented rock. With heavy base lines and exacting rhythms, the band gets down with straight ahead rock, and roll a concept that seems to be getting more and more forgotten. They recently appeared with Vanaveth another heavy recognized for "Love Hurts" and "Hair of the Dog." One interesting note, they've dedicated this album to John Bonham (led Zeppelin).

First year swimmers win state

Talk to swim coach Steve Eul and you might get the impression that last weekend's Region IV meet was more of a technicality than anything.

"We're looking ahead to nationals," said Eul, who was named the Coach of the Year before Friday's heats. "Our only incentive for us is to qualify more swimmers for the national meet."

Eul has been looking ahead to the NJCAA, which will be held in Rochester, N.Y., next Wednesday-through-Saturday, since the Hawks first meet of the year when they squashed Lincoln 59-51.

Mike Soja, Mark Waks, Mike Zwerinsky, and Todd Munnell each qualified in that meet, the first ever in Harper history.

Since then, the Hawks have gone 7-0 in dual meets, won two invitational, placed 5th in the state NCAA Division III championships in January, and qualified a total of seven more swimmer-divers for the NJCAA's.

The Hawks men walked away with the Region IV title, 185-183 over DuPage, and accumulated 13 individual wins. The women, meanwhile, placed a distant second to DuPage, 186-108. However, two more women qualified for the national meet. "That was a surprise," said Eul.

Teri Wendtke, who had already qualified in the 50- and 100-free before the state meet, also made the 100-free with a second-place finish in a time of 1:00.25. Meanwhile, Donna Gawell and Dana Odum, who finished one-two in the 1,500-free, both qualified for that event with respective times of 22:06 and 22:18. The other recent qualifier is Pam McEACHER, who will join Wendtke, Gawell, and Odum on the 800-free relay team which qualified two weeks ago. Mike Sheridan and Mark Waks each added another event to their portfolio of national qualifications. Sheridan, who had already qualified for the 1,600-free, 400- and 800-free relay teams, made the 500-free, during Friday's heats with a time of 5:13.10.

Waks, meanwhile, qualified for the 300-free, also on Friday in a time of 1:50.35. He had qualified for the 50- and 100-free, 400- and 800-free relays, and the 800-medy relay team before the state meet.

It was diving that produced the meet's most interesting story. Mike Schukewitz and Doug Pool, both of whom had qualified for the 1- and 3-meter diving events before the state meet, split the 1- and 3-meter state championships Saturday.

Schukewitz was ahead in the 1-meter, before he was disqualified on a back 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -a dive that is disallowed by NCAA rules. No one was actually certain of that until a call was put in to NCAA headquarters to verify the rule. "I'm just glad they caught it before the nationals," said Schukewitz, who had broken both his wrists while teaching a gymnastics class in July and not returned to diving until a week before Christmas vacation.

He also had another dive (a reverse dive  $\frac{1}{2}$ -twist) called no good. "If he had gotten either one of those dives, he would have won," said diving coach Lynn Hitchcock.

Instead Pool, who is only in his first year of competitive diving, won the 1-meter championships with a score of 327.00 to Schukewitz's 321.00 in the 3-meter. Pool finished second behind Schukewitz, 425.85-340.15.

Now it is off to Rochester, the Picture City (only because Eastman Kodak is headquartered there).

What is Eul expecting? "We really don't know what to expect, because we don't know how many schools will be there," he said.

Whatever happens is sure to be frosting on the cake of the most successful first-year athletic program in Harper's 13-year history, never has a first-year team placed 11 members to an NJCAA tournament, gone undefeated in the regular season, won a state title, AND had its coach named Coach of the Year.

After the state meet concluded Saturday, the men swimmers, led by grandeur Waks, named Eul, who was all decked out in double-knit slacks and loafers, into the pool.

That is the price of success.

AND THEY'RE OFF! Or are they? Harper's swim team is troubled with conflict as they go into Nationals. Story on Page 8. Photo by Rick Kobene

Waks quits swim team

ing is right," said Waks. "If this is what he wants to do then I'll respect his decision and I won't question it at all."

Waks said he will be sitting at home. Both Eul and Waks have different opinions on what has happened over the past season, but none of that is what really matters. What matters is that an excellent athlete such as Waks will not be going to nationals to compete because of a misunderstanding that can't be resolved. And that Coach Eul, is a shame, a plain shame.

Goss injured, Harper plays Malcom tonight

by JOE KOST

As of now, Tim Murray's chances of lasting the remainder of the season on the Harper Men's Basketball team without an injury don't look so good.

Since the beginning of the season, four of the five Harper starters on the team are gone. One moved away and three others suffered injuries that forced them to resign their talents from the squad.

The first injury came in the form of Kevin Murray's muscle problem that caused his resignation at the beginning of the Christmas tournament in Springfield.

The next injury that hit the Hawks came two weeks ago against Lake County College when Dave Strawn left the game with five minutes expired due to a broken foot. And last but not least was Fernado Goss. Goss had been bothered with knee injuries all season long but in practice last Monday, it wasn't the knee that took ill, it was Goss' ankle that went bad.

Now with Goss and Strawn removed from the lineup with the Sectionals being played tonight at Harper, the Hawks will have to play exceptionally well in order to stay alive in the Sectional playoffs.

Harper will have to rely heavily on the bench in order to avoid elimination tonight.

Skip Leuzzi, Greg Meyer, Steve Todd and Mark Montanone have all seen a lot of playing time this season, however, never before has the game been depending on their scoring to win.

Tonight Harper will play at 8:15 when they'll face the winner of the Wright vs. Malcom X game held at Harper.

State swim champ, national qualifier Waks quits team

Editor's Note - As of Wednesday afternoon at 1:00 p.m., Harper swim coach Steve Eul and swimmer Mark Waks were in process of coming to agreement on the chances of Waks participating with the swim team at Nationals. Further details will be announced next week in the Harbinger.

by JOE KOST

After leading Harper's Men's swim team to an outstanding first year and qualifying himself for nationals in several separate events, Mark Waks decided to quit the team as the result of a conflict with the coach.

The decision came last Tuesday when swim coach Steve Eul announced the members of the team that would be going to nationals.

Waks has qualified for the nationals but the problem isn't there. The problem is that Waks believes Eul is not being entirely fair and honest with the team.

"Steve Eul said to me and the team that he wanted to take as many people to nationals as he could," said Waks. "But he isn't."

The problem stems from one of Harper's relay teams, the 400 meter relay.

At the beginning of the season, the four swimmers that swam in that particular event were Mike Soja, Todd Masael, Mike Zwierzyński and Mark Waks. That group swam the 400 meter medley relay all season long and did rather well too.

Now comes the conflict. Before last weekend and the Regional competition, Zwierzyński took ill and was unable to perform in the relay or any other event so in the 400 meter medley he was replaced with John Dolan, a new member of the squad.

The relay, swimming with Dolan, took first in the regionals and beat the previous best record of Harper.

When the time came for Eul to decide the team that would be going to nationals, Eul picked the relay team that had been swimming together all season, or the team with Zwierzyński.

Both relay teams qualified for the nationals but Eul made the decision as to which squad would go.

"I want to go to nationals just as much as anyone else on the team but not now and not with Eul!"

-Mark Waks

"First of all, Dolan hasn't qualified in any other events so he can't go if he doesn't go with this relay team," said Waks.

"But Zwierzyński has qualified for two other relays so if Eul wanted to take as many as possible then he would be taking Dolan in that relay instead of Zwierzyński."

"Dolan came out for the team about one month ago and only because I asked him to come out," said Eul. "After I talked him into joining the team he did very impressive but the reason that I'm sending Zwierzyński instead of Dolan is because Zwierzyński has earned that spot all season long and he belongs on the relay team."

"Dolan wasn't supposed to even swim in that event at all but because Zwierzyński was sick I stuck him in there just to fill the spot."

Eul said that he would take anyone that qualified for the nationals with a good time and he isn't. John Dolan has qualified but he isn't going and I think that is unfair," said Waks.

"I'd take anyone that can qualify with a qualifying time," said Eul. "I'd take up to 500 people if they qualified."

John Dolan has qualified for nationals and if he were to go then Harper would be able to fill the relay and one other event with Dolan. Also if Dolan went, Zwierzyński would also go and swim in the two other relays for the Hawks. But Dolan isn't going with the team to nationals, he isn't going anywhere.

"So this whole thing would never have started if Zwierzyński wasn't sick and could have swam last week in the regionals," added Eul.

Maybe not.

"I don't like Steve for what he has done to this team," said Waks. "He lies to my face about things, and I'm quitting because of what he's done to this team. He has messed up the team, the spirit of the team and that is something that you can't have when you go into a national meet."

"We've coached ourselves this year. We've become a type of family team and if one member is down or not trying then we'll all try to help him and to get him going again. We've gotten ourselves where we are now."

"I want everyone on the team to know that I'm not trying to hurt anyone on the team and I hope they know that is true, but I can't go to nationals and com-hard they've worked and I know how hard they push us in meets but I hope they understand that I wish them the best, but I can't go now because I feel that what I'm doing is best for me." (Please turn to page 7)

Wrestling Hawks place in state

by TOM LOPTUS

All things considered Coach Norm Lovelace couldn't complain about the showing of his wrestling Hawks in the Region IV State Tournament.

"We lost six wrestlers and all six placed," Lovelace said. And he had every right to be proud.

Paul Laskowski and Captain Howard "H.D." Leggett both claimed state championships and were among four Hawks qualifying for Nationals, to be held March 5, 6 and 7 at Worthington, Miss. H.D. ran his record in 2:11 in defeating Trilon's Vince Jones in the title bout at 141 pounds.

Laskowski, however, turned in the most convincing performance. Unseeded in the tournament after dropping down two weight classes to 134 lbs., he pinned Ken Williams from Trilon at 7:11 to earn a championship medal.

Also qualifying for Nationals were Kevin Rosendetcher at 128, and 139-pounder Rich Courney. Rosendetcher made it to the final round before losing to Trilon's Ron McFarland 2-2 to gain 2nd place honors. Courney was defeated in the semifinals but wrestled back to earn a trip to Nationals as well, pinning Rick Valley's Tom Briggs to claim 3rd place. (Note: is qualify for Nationals, a wrestler must finish 1st, 2nd, or 3rd in his regional.)

Roger Barron and Ken Bartlett were also place winners in propelling Harper to 5th place in the tournament, which was won as expected by Trilon. Barron managed 6th place, and Bartlett turned a respectable 6th place showing.

At practice this week, Lovelace remarked that "Our chances at National are unpredictable. It depends on if the breaks go our way. But the attitude of these four is real strong, and they're not afraid of hard work."

Hard work has carried the Hawks all season. And with the chance to represent Harper at Nationals quickly approaching, the hard work for four dedicated wrestlers will con-

Application cut off a threat Freshman applications cut off, Keep class sizes down Cutoff puts Harper in potentially serious situation

by PETER WICKLUND and KEVIN KOTTERMAN

With private school tuition becoming more and more unaffordable in this time of economic hardship, college students are turning to state schools for next fall's term at an alarming rate. A heavy influx of applications will force three of the state's most popular colleges to make a deadline for freshmen applications this month.

Northern Illinois University in DeKalb ended accepting freshmen applications yesterday, months before their usual cutoff date. Northern implicated a deadline after receiving thousands of applications. Officials at Northern feared that required freshmen classes would be filled to capacity. Of the 26,000 students that attended Northern over 3000 are freshmen. Northern's office of admission speculated that the large amount of applications was due to unemployment, the economy, and high tuition at private institutions. Northern will continue to accept transfer student applications from students with more than 30 hours of academic credit.

Similar problems have occurred at Illinois State University in Normal. For the first time in history ISU officials have had to freeze all freshmen applications indefinitely. Applications will continue to be accepted from transfer students. However, the schools of business and applied computer science will end taking applications tomorrow. Eastern Illinois University in Charleston has also stopped taking applications. They will still continue to take transfer applications however. EIU presently has an enrollment of 6,800 students. But is hoping to cut that number by a couple of hundred.

All other major state schools have not made changes in application deadlines.

The University of Illinois in Champaign stops taking freshmen applications in November. U of I will be taking transfer applications throughout the week. The university sets high requirements for applications.

Western Illinois University in Macomb and Southern Illinois University in Carbondale have not set application deadlines either. In fact a spokesperson at SIU said that their school accepts applications up to 30 days before the beginning of the fall semester. Out of all the state schools SIU and Western are the only ones not located

There will also be no special application deadlines at the two state schools located in the City of Chicago. Northwestern is located primarily on the North side will continue to use their regular deadline of August 15 as a deadline for freshmen applications for the fall 1981 term. Northwestern has no school owned housing. The University of Illinois Chicago Circle campus located on Chicago's South side will use their standard deadline of Aug. 28, for freshmen applications except for the school of engineering which takes applications until July 17, and the schools of Architecture and Business which limit enrollment on availability.

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
Area community colleges may suffer from lack of instructors physical space due to application cut-offs by four year universities.

With fewer applications being accepted by four year schools, community colleges can expect a large influx in full time student enrollment.

"The reason four year colleges are closing is that they do not have the budget increases necessary to accommodate students that are applying. The overflow is absorbed by the community colleges and we are faced with a serious problem since we don't have the allocations either," said David Miller, vice-president of academic affairs. "We can predict that there will be a large influx in full time student enrollment."

This expected influx may lead to a serious teaching shortage at Harper. However, until the exact amount of students registered for the next semester is determined the extent of the shortage will not be known.

"The effect in terms of a possible teaching shortage is difficult to say in that we do not know the amount of students we will have. If all are business majors that will probably be more of a problem. Right now there is a large percentage of instructors that are part time," said Williams.

In terms of physical space,

Williams sees no major problems. "Assuming that most are full time day students the afternoon hours will probably be more attractive. Part time students usually prefer the early morning or evening hours. Assuming that we will have a greater influx in day students I don't see it as a critical problem."

The expected increase in enrollment is also forcing Harper administrators to re-evaluate revenue source. Although full enrollment, the college will not receive additional state funding until the 1981-82 academic year. A tuition increase for the 1981-82 academic year is a possibility now being considered by administrators.

"There is no question that a tuition increase has been considered. Tuition increases are loaded in to revenue buildings assuming that there are 7000 full time equivalent students an increase of 21 would result in a $200,000 increase. But that is offset by the fact that we've had an increase twice as much in state funding," said Williams.

Elgin Community College already experienced a 21 percent increase in enrollment this spring and expects a large fall enrollment. The most serious problem Elgin faces is physical space, both morning and evening classes are currently filled to capacity.

Private colleges not threatened by cut off

by MIKE REAGAN

Although President Reagan has proposed cuts to federal financial aid programs for college students—programs such as the National Direct Student Loan, Guaranteed Student Loans, and Pell Grants—area private colleges do not anticipate declining enrollment.

Constance Rajala, assistant director of admissions at Lake Forest College, said "Applications are as numerous as any other year. We are not anticipating any changes in our transfer deadline and requirements. It would be a good idea to apply between March 15-20. Only on the prospective transfer student be given all the financial aid possible."

At the University of Chicago, transfer applications are ahead of last year. Mr. Judson, director of transfer admissions, said "The proposed cuts have had no immediate effect on our enrollment. We expect to maintain our enrollment for quite awhile." The transfer deadline for admission to the university is July 1.

Alan Lavetto, assistant director of admissions at Loyola University said "Applications are up considerably. Because of this, we did raise our minimum requirement grade point average for the School of Education from 3.0 to 3.1. Otherwise, there are no changes in the transfer deadlines or requirements for general students." The transfer deadline for admission is Aug. 14.

Lake Forest, DePaul has changed their minimum requirement grade point average for admission to their College of Commerce from 3.0 to 3.5, due to the large numbers of applicants for admission. Father Tom Muenster, director of admissions, said "There has been no decision, yet, to change the transfer deadline for admission.

Each private college stressed that all prospective students to their college should apply as soon as possible, for financial aid determinations. Roosevelt University, National College of Education, and North Park College allow transfer students to apply one week before classes begin in late August. None have seen any effect of the possible Reagan cuts on their enrollments. And, their rolling admission's policy is normal.

Default tracing finally paying off

by PETER WICKLUND

Governmental agencies are continuing to crack down on people who have not paid back education loans with continued success.

However, persons who have not paid back loans need not fear penalties or interest payments. In fact, all that most agencies want is the payment back of the initial amount of the loan.

The beginning of the chase of loan defaulters begins at the level where the loan was issued. This could mean a particular institution, such as Harper College, or from a government education loan agency, such as the Illinois State Scholarship Commission. These agencies first used collection agents in attempting to get back their money. If the collection agents did not have any luck with defaulters, institutions send the name of the defaulter to the Department of Human Services in Washington. The DHS then sends a letter to the defaulters asking for repayment. If DHS has no luck the defaulter's name is then sent to the United States Attorney's office. This is usually all it takes to get a person to make repayment, but there are the few people who want to see just how far their luck will go.

The U.S. Attorney also has a set class operation for defaulters. The U.S. Attorney has offices in each state and those offices are responsible for chasing down defaulters in their respective states. The first thing done in default cases is for the Attorney to send a letter to the defaulter. The letter is usually enough to cause people into paying off their debts. Still, once in a while this is not enough. If the U.S. Attorney does not get a response to the letter the defaulter's name is sent to the U.S. Marshall who personally visits the defaulter.

Community college athletics no laughing matters

Community colleges are always falling in someone else's shadow.

Students must settle for a certificate or transfer to earn a four year degree. Activities are not on the same level of four year institutions simply because funding is not as large. But, above all else, the community college athletic department is under the most fire.

But Harper may stand shoulder to shoulder with the best of them. Recently 18 Harper athletes went on to state tournaments in their own specific fields. These tournaments may not have nationwide respect and national television coverage but they are important just the same. They still offer amateur college athletes the chance to compete with the best in the field.

However, before community college athletes have time to build a name for themselves, it is time to move on. Unlike four year university athletes, they do not have the time to build a reputation and gain much sought after recognition.

But whether on a four year or community college level, athletics remain an extremely important part of the campus life and should be treated as such.

Candidates share voting responsibilities

It's that time of year again. Not only are winter athletes heading to the state tournaments but student trustee elections are just around the corner.

The student trustee is the only link between the Board of Trustees and the student body and must be selected with care.

Every campus experiences an epidemic of apathy every time an election rolls around. But with effective campaigning and proper publicity the problem may possibly be cut down. Even if there is a low voter turnout after the blitz, chances are there will be better informed voters.

Therefore, the responsibility for intelligent voting lies not only with the student but with the candidates also.

Default tracing

(Continued from page 1) and inquires about the unpaid loan. Finally, if there is still no action by the defaulter to pay the debt, suit is brought against the defaulter in federal court.

Default cases were so common that a few years ago it was necessary for the U.S. Attorney to set up a special division in each office to handle such cases. "We have had an ongoing crack down on these cases for quite a while now," said Martin Lowery, Deputy Chief of Criminal collections for the U.S. Attorney Chicago office.

Present cases in Illinois number about 27. Cases exist in all states but recently Ohio began a severe crackdown after having to pay the problem for a couple of years because of lack of staff. The Criminal Collection Branch of the Attorney's office is responsible for any situation in which an individual or individuals owes the government money. Often Lowery contends that "there are too few people to zero in on cases." Lowery believes that loan default cases investigated have been stepped up because of the bad economy.

Default cases under investigation at Harper presently number 42. These cases are still being handled by the college and its collection agencies. If Harper officials can't get anywhere with their own investigation the names of the Harper defaulters will go to DHS. "We have to prove we've done everything we can do before we send names to DHS," said Anton Dolejs, for Harper. Dolejs says he refers about 40 cases annually to DHS.

Letters to the Editor

Board only considering use, ok not given yet

Letter to Editor

The Harper Board of Trustees has approved the Metropolitan Sanitary District's construction of the flood control project east of the College, and we have granted approval of the use of perimeter roads for such flood control purposes.

However, the situation with regard to recreational uses of the land surrounding the flood control basin is a bit different. Although we did approve an "in principle" agreement for the use of roads and parking lots for recreational purposes, we have not—contrary to the Harbinger story in the Feb. 19 issue—granted the size of parking lots 11 and 12 and perimeter road so the area can be used as a community recreation center."

Before this could happen, very specific and detailed arrangements would have to be worked out, not only by Harper, but with the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the Palatine Park District. The various agencies would then need formally to approve the agreement. This has not happened.

To sum up: at this point, access on these roads for flood control purposes has been granted by the Harper Board to MSD. Access for recreation purposes has not.

Simkus not a neurotic pessimist, a happy realist

To the Editor:

Rudyard Kipling, a chronic optimist and 19th century apologist for British colonialism, wrote to a young friend: "If you can keep your head while all about are losing theirs, you'll be a man, my son." A recent update reads: "If you can keep your head while all about are losing theirs, perhaps you don't understand the nature of the problem."

In defense of Mike, belabored in a letter in the editor as a pessimist, I'm here to say that pessimism is not, per se, a vice nor optimism a virtue. What is important is the intelligence to determine, in a specific situation, which is the appropriate response. Speaking as one of Mike's instructors, I'm inclined to believe that he possesses this quality in a higher concentration than members of the campus law firm, Brummer, Grevel and Givens. The discriminating person often appears pessimistic to those who have smile buttons tattooed for and all: it's a price worth paying.

Dolman's fingers not only walk, they talk

by NORA NORTON
 "Let your fingers do the talking," might be the theme in David Dolman's classes for the hearing impaired.

Dolman, an instructor in the Hearing Impaired Program at Harper, teaches English, reading and vocabulary to the hearing impaired and two beginning sign language classes.

"I would say that sign language was much more of a challenge than I expected it to be. I was really expecting it to be simple," said Dolman.

"When I started teaching I only knew 200 words and they were geared to elementary school level."

His first job was teaching at an inner city high school in Chicago. It didn't take him long to realize that 300 words was inadequate for teaching high school students.

"I really found it difficult. I would add my ED's and IN's and had to pick up the rest by experience. It was frustrating. I developed an eye twitch from the pressure."

"It was like being thrown into a pool when you can't swim," said Dolman.

"I wanted to do a good job. I thought I could be a good teacher, but wasn't able to teach properly."

"I wanted to give them something. I didn't really have the perspective to know that I was a good teacher. I would go into a classroom, but couldn't understand them and they knew it - so my authority was diminished," he said.

From the inner city in Chicago, Dolman went on to the Maryland School for the deaf in Frederick, Maryland, where he taught English.

"I enjoyed it quite a bit. It was also difficult at first because of my lack of language skills. Toward the end of the year I learned a lot," he said.

Dolman missed Chicago and the activities of a big city, however, and came back to the area.

"It takes about a year and a half of daily contact, hands on experience for the average person to become proficient in sign language. I am pretty average. I have seen some people learn very quickly in six months. It took the longer to learn so that I wouldn't clutch when talking," he said.

It is a different culture, Dolman said, and a person who is rigid in attitudes is more liable to have a difficult time around a deaf person.

In teaching students who are deaf, it is necessary to be more animated. Facial expressions, hand motions and even touch are very important.

Dolman illustrates this point in his reading class. His motions are quite vigorous as he acts out a chapter from class novella, often waving his arms around and picking up a chair. "An hour reading to my dear students is more tiring than an hour of teaching sign to my other students."

"It is more exhausting and more challenging - just to keep them with me - so they understand."

"I enjoy the balance. I enjoy teaching beginning sign classes. The students start out with nothing, but near the end of it weeks they can definitely see their progress," said Dolman.

To encourage students in his sign classes, Dolman uses sign bees (spelling bees) and stories.

He tells them short stories in sign and asks questions in sign which they then interpret orally.

"It is interesting to get someone completely deaf who has never been exposed to signing. He will learn more quickly because it is much more important to him and he usually practices more with other hearing impaired students.

"We would like to develop an interpreter program. It is only in the discussion stage at this point."

He has been encouraged by the increase in the number of students taking sign language classes over the past couple of years," he said.

Dolman received his B.S. degree at Wooster College in Ohio, his Master's Degree in Deaf Education at Northwestern and is currently working on his doctorate at Loyola University.

In the trunk? What a smooth guy!

When three or more guys get together, you can bet the main topic of conversation is going to be about girls. And you can bet that there is going to be an exchange of (if you'll pardon the expression girls) "war" stories.

There's no doubt that girls are "made of sugar and spice and everything nice." There is nothing that can turn a lousy, stinking day into a Wow! Superfantastic day quicker than a girl's smile.

Ah, but there are some girls (as there are some guys) that you just can't take seriously. And, boy, that's where all "war" stories originate.

These aren't the boy-falls-in-love-with-girl-but... kind of stories. These are better left in the hands of our friends at Harlequin. "War" stories are stories about lousy, lousy girls that, over the course of years, we remember as totally goofy. ("Hey, we've all made mistakes," is usually how a "war" story begins.) My personal favorite is the story about a girl I dated way back in '79 (just two years ago, folks). Her name is (or was in case she's deceased - which wouldn't surprise me) Algebra. Of course, I've changed her name (in case she ever reads this and puts a contract out for me - which wouldn't surprise me either!).

I met her in June on a nice, warm, romantic summer night. She was visiting (from out-of-state) a friend of mine, who had a crush on her when the two were in fourth grade. When I saw her, I definitely wanted to ask her out. She was tall, had long, blond hair (blonds have more fun, remember) and big, blue eyes. Of course, she hadn't opened her mouth yet.

When I finally got the guts to ask her out, she said "Yes." Wow! I said to myself later, "Damn, boy, you're 'real smooth'!" Of course, we all thought we were pretty cool at it! Three weeks later, I was saying, "Damn, boy were you stupid!"

The first night we went out, we saw "Prophecy" which was the summer's big thriller (along with "Dracula" which we also saw).

After the movie, I took her home (honest Mom) and I asked her out again. And she said, "Yes." Needless to say, my drive home was quite pleasant.

It was our next date, when we went to see "Dracula," that I realized I was in trouble. "Did you like the movie," I asked her.

"Oh, yes," she said. "By the way, I'm going to a seance tomorrow night. Would you like to escort me?"

"Umhm..."

"Oh come on, I'm going to go as Dracula's wife. I've got a dress all picked out. It looks like it came right out of the movie."

"Umhm..." I replied, high-pitched and fidgety. "I just love seances. Did you know that I'm a witch? Oh, yes, I remember last year my best friend's boyfriend - he was such a jerk. I got him back, though."

"Umhm, what did you do to him?" I asked, knowing I would regret it.

"Oh, I made him fall down two flights of stairs and break both his legs."

We had one more date (I can be a little masochistic) on the day of her birthday, which was one day before my birthday. The only reason I went through with the date was because I planned it a loonooong time ago (it seemed). We went up to see the Doobie Brothers in concert at Alpine Valley. I drove.

The first thing she said to me when I took her up was, "If I freak out, don't worry because I dropped some acid last night." Oh, okay. Thanks for the warning.

The climber to the whole deal came after the concert. We were sitting in the front seat of my car (there was a couple in back but they weren't sitting). I had my arm around her and she turned to me with those big, blue eyes and said, "Let's go into the trunk." (Egad!)

So I opened the trunk and she got in. "What the hell!" I said, and I joined her. But I made her promise not to close the trunk.

I dropped her off at about 3 that morning. She turned to me, with those big, blue eyes (they were red by now) and said, "Call me next week."

I haven't seen her since, it should be noted that I didn't have a date until December of that year.

Now that's a "war" story.

Iriss' album budding but no blooms yet

Wearing a lemon meringue tuxedo in varied stages of undress, Donnie Iriss' cover looks like someone you might find in a National Lampoon Magazine. He has gained success with the new album, "Back on the Streets" and his hit single "Ah! Leah."

His album didn't seem to satisfy my tastes or expectations though. Many of the cuts were repetitive and lacked much of the creative drive desired or needed to excite people.

Although most of the cuts were dull and mundane, some surprising tracks were "Shock Treatment," the story of a young man that has went through too much and is committed to an insane asylum. This was a remarkably fun song to hear, while women cackled in the background and men uttered high drawn out laughs appeared an eerie base line. Another somewhat inventive song was "You're Only Dreaming," the conflict between reality and the truth presented the hidden problem in a person's life.

Curt Ackman

Though I didn't prefer his album, that does not mean that he will not gain success in the future. I hope that "Back on the Streets" proves to be a learning experience to his creative and motivational desires. With refining and experimentation, he could acquire the formula to the road to stardom.

Animated 'American Pop' no cartoon, traces family struggle to success

"American Pop" is Ralph Bakshi's most recent animated film effort. Notice cartoon wasn't mentioned because that could conjure up thoughts of this being on the same level of what is shown Saturday mornings on T.V. It would be a mistake to have this in mind; this is not for the kids, as you concerned parents have been warned.

Bakshi's film traces the three major periods of American music: jazz, rock and roll. The movie opens with five minutes of drawn and real life stills of the three different generations. This is a disappointment, since the movie doesn't start out with any kind of movement. Plus the fact that there are real life photos in what's supposed to be an animated feature. After the opening we see a reenactment of the overthrowing of the czar of Russia in 1912. We then see the migration to America in still drawings. Bakshi attempts to tell the story by using the three generations through one family. This is a good idea, but he uses the characters as second hand to the statement. Yes, "American Pop" not only follows the three generations, but wants a statement to come out of this-how our music reflected the mood of the certain era. The statement is uninteresting and broad, since it is loaded in once in a while, without any real form. The only time Bakshi has some punch in the story is when he gets to the time of the "speakeasy" raids in the late 20's. A violent sequence twisted because of the happy scene being used "Sweet Georgia Brind" which creates an ironic tense to it. Another worthy scene is of World War Two, which shows men in combat with an energetic swing song going.

Film review

Statements are good, but not when this takes driver's seat to one important aspect of his movie. The art of Animation. Though "American Pop" has some nice human characterizations, it has a flat, dismal look to it which makes the film even more dreary to watch. Not saying that this movie should be Walt Disney storyline, but should have the same quality animation. Though this movie features music by Hendrix and The Doors (which of course caters to the young crowd), don't be fooled by the ads which imply something extravagant in the genre of animation. American Pop should not be seen, but listened to on the radio.

COUNSELORS JOYCE NOLEN and Lis O'Connell teach students the importance of setting and achieving goals through running. Together they have logged over 2,000 miles. Photo by Al Masay

No books or exams for this course, just goals

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN
A psychology class with no lectures to attend, no exams to cram for and no 10 inch thick textbook to drag around?

"Are you kidding?"
"That's the catch!"
Step back nonbelievers, that's exactly what Psy 110 is instead of pounding Freudian theories and learning principles into student heads, the course focuses on running and developing discipline with a positive self-image.

The class, a spin-off of other 110 courses emphasizing student development in unconventional ways, is taught by two counselors experienced in teaching self-improvement courses. Lis O'Connell and Joyce Nolen instruct students in the fine art of running.

On top of their experience with other classes, both O'Connell and Nolen have competed in over 40 races and share their personal problems and accomplishments in running with the class.

"What sets this class apart from other 110 courses is the established running program. We here in on one specific aspect of life. Other elements of 110 courses are used but we use running to illustrate realistic and achievable goals," said O'Connell.

Between the two of them, Nolen and O'Connell have run over 350 miles. The miles may have been painful at times. Overactive at others but they have also fostered a number of "helpful hints" that they pass on to their students. Students can get advice on how to avoid injury or simply hear first hand what it is like to set and reach a goal.

And that is what it is all about.
"The students learn the priorities of setting goals and reaching those goals increases self-image," said Nolen.
The class meets every Friday in Bldg. M. An entire hour of the course is devoted to running which, according to O'Connell, offers the student "something to concentrate on and a sense of accomplishment when they run an extra mile or a few minutes longer."

If all that running sounds like a real hassle and the idea of increasing your self discipline sets your knees to shaking, you can take comfort in knowing that all of this isn't done on your own.

After the hour of running the class moves to an informal discussion session that allows the students the chance to talk about their own progress and frustrations in running. "Whenever you identify with a group you increase your self-esteem and you feel better physically," Nolen said.

And to make that road a little easier to run on, the students set their own goals.

That's right, the final isn't any grueling marathon or a five mile sprint across broken glass in your bare feet; attendance, participation and a desire to set a goal and reach it are the main criteria for grading.

"What we stress all along is patience," said Nolen.

As anyone who has ever had the courage to strap a pair of running shoes on and hit the trail can tell you, it does take patience to build endurance and discipline to get out there and run.

The class was originally planned for the fall semester of the 1979-80 academic year but there was just too much paper work to contend with at the time.

"We worked hard on the publicity through flyers and other counselors," said Nolen.

This new one credit hour course is being offered for the first time this semester but both instructors are enthusiastic about its return next fall. However, both admit that everything depends on student feedback and enrollment.

"There is an incentive to run offered here from the class making it almost like homework," said Jeanne Kurtz, a student currently enrolled in the course.

Women top Triton at Regionals

by JOE KOTT
The Harper Women's basketball team won the Regional playoffs held at Wright College last Friday with a last second win over rival Triton, 69-67.

"We really wanted this game," said Harper coach Tom Teichner. "We had quite a score to settle with Triton and I think we proved who is the better of the two teams."

Triton had beaten Harper earlier in the season in a game that eliminated the Hawks from hopes of a NAC conference championship.

Harper trailed for most of the game, and found themselves down at the half by 18 points, 34-18. The Hawks couldn't seem to put together any offensive shooting in the first half of the contest as they went seven of 28 attempts from the field for 19%.

The Hawks fought their way back and found themselves trailing by 10 points with nine minutes remaining. Kelly Brakley by Viv Wiedner and Diana Dierber put Harper back into the game.

With :05 left on the clock, Triton had a 67-77 lead and was shooting from the free throw line in a one and one situation. The Tritons missed the free point, and the ball was rebounded by Harper's Sue Hoday who threw the ball out to Dierber who was fouled out while moving down the court.

Dierber went to the line with the clock showing :09 left but the buzzer yet to sound. Dierber missed the free throw, but before the buzzer could sound, Harper's Sue Mischler went up for the rebound and in a act of desperation, tipped the ball back up to the hoop for two points and the Harper victory. "They used their full court press on us in the beginning of the game and it was pretty effective. We turned the ball over a lot because of the pressure," said Teichner. "The thing that held us in the game in the first half was our defense."

Triton played a fast paced first half and with the help of Harper's poor first half shooting, the Tritons jumped up to a comfortable 34-18 halftime lead.

During the second half Harper played a more aggressive game and tried to get the ball inside to their taller players for the short jumpers.

Hoday turned her first half performance around in the rebounding department. In the first half, Hoday managed only three rebounds but in the second half of the contest, Hoday controlled the boards with 23 rebounds. Hoday led both teams in scoring with 25 points in the game. Dierber had 13 points in the Hawks win while Mischler added 10 points. Wiedner and Kim Place each added nine points a piece.

This win ups the Hawks record to 19-4 and enables them to advance to the State Sectionals.

Harper, rated seventh in the state, will play tonight at Elgin C. C. in the first round of the sectional playoffs. Harper will go up against powerhouse Lincoln.

Harper will have to play fast-breaking basketball in the sectionals in order to make up for the height difference that other teams possess over the Hawks.

"I don't know how we'll do there, but it will be nice just to know we got there," Teichner said. "It also feels nice to beat Triton."

18 Harper athletes compete at Nationals

by TOM LOFTUS
While most Harper students are preparing for midterm exams, 18 "finals" week for 18 Hawk wrestlers, swimmers, and gymnasts.

Led by returning Nationals qualifier Howard "H.D." Leggett, four Hawk wrestlers looked forward to a chance to compete with the best in the nation this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at Worthington, Minnesota.

"The experience I gained from Nationals last year will help me a lot," said H.D., owner of a 39-1 record to go along with blue ribbons at the conference and state meets. While modest about his chances for a National title, his teammates acknowledged him to be one of the favorites at 145 pounds.

Paul Laskowski (187.1), state champ at 154 lbs, remarked that, "we all expect to earn some points." Kevin Bandoeuter, 29.7 at 138 lbs, this season, will also be going. Rich Courney, who brings a 25-8 record into Nationals at 150 lbs, stated simply, "We'll do our best!"

The State champion Hawk swim team, guided by Coach of the Year Steve Eul, hoped to continue their remarkable first year success story at Rochester, N.Y. this Wednesday.

Corrections:
A story that appeared in last week's Harbinger incorrectly stated that diver Mike Schewitz had failed a back 1½ somersault because it was disallowed by N.J.C.A.A. rules. Schewitz did fail the day through Saturday. A whopping total of eleven swimmers and divers qualified for the N.J.C.A.A. finals in a variety of events.

Swimmers on the men's squad that will be attending nationals are Mark Waks, Mike Sola, Mike Sheridan, Todd Musser and Mike Zwerzinsky. Terri Wastlake will be entered in four events at Nationals, joining Pam McEacher, Donna Cissell, and Dana Odum on the 500-free relay team as well as swimming in the 50, 100, and 200-free. Gavrell and Odum, with qualifying times of 32.86 and 32.18 respectively, will also compete in the 100 free event.

Divers Mike Schewitz and Doug Pool hope to earn points for the Hawks in the 1- and 3-meter diving events for which they qualified earlier on in their 4 dual meet season.

A trio of Harper women's gymnasts will be competing at the NCAAA finals at Tacoma, Washington this week.

Mary Beth Black qualified in balance beam as well as floor exercise. Sandy Coligianer in vaulting and uneven bars, and Cindy Curtis earned the trip with qualifying scores in vaulting and floor exercise.

All in confidence among all three teams was at peak level and the prospects looked quite rosy indeed for Harper College wrestlers, swimmers, and gymnasts at the NCAAA finals this week.

diver, but because his feet hit the water before his head. Schewitz failed a reverse dive 1½-somersault because that dive is disallowed by N.J.C.A.A. rules. We regret any inconvenience caused by this mistake.

Waks rejoins team

Harper swimmer Mark Waks, who quit the men's swim team a week ago, has rejoined the team despite his hurt feelings for swim coach Steve Eul.

"I felt that since I was going to nationals to swim in relay events and with the team, that I had a responsibility to my friends so I decided to do my part," said Waks. Waks will be competing at nationals this week.

Merri Dee - spirited, confident career woman

by PETE WICKLUND
Doing an interview was the farthest thing on my mind Monday March, as all college students know, can become very hectic with mid-term rapidly approaching. With things seemingly under control at the Harbinger I thought I would sneak home early and dig into the gobs of homework I had or poke around a bit and continue my search for a part time job that would work around my crazy schedule. I was all set to leave the office when President McGrath appeared at the doorway. He said he had someone downstairs who I might be interested in meeting. And, as even the most amateur journalist knows, that when somebody like a President

McGrath comes to your office and says he has someone he'd like you to meet, you go.

I feel as if I have grown up with Merri Dee. I remember her from the late sixties when every Sunday morning I watched her on automobile commercials during the Gospel show "Jubilee Showcase." I don't remember why I always watched the show, most likely it was because there was nothing else much on that early in the morning. But, I did acquire two things from my watching the show: one, a liking of gospel music, and two, a liking of Merri Dee. Later, I remember Merri Dee as the newscaster that did the fifteen minute news show that came on before the Cubs games on channel nine. I always wanted to personally congratulate Merri for having to do that news slot. There must be a lot of pressure on an announcer knowing that thousands of impatient fans are awaiting their daily loss. Most recently I've listened to Merri yacking it up on WGN radio with everyone's radio with everyone's

Norvell heads Harper food service

by Nora Norton
The new director of Food Services, William T. Norvell, has set a target date of July 1 for implementing changes in food services management.

Norvell, who was hired in January, received his B.A. and Master's degrees at Murray State University, Murray, Kentucky. His last position was as a consultant of food services with the Gary Community School Corporation in Gary, Indiana.

His first order of business, he said, was reviewing the audit by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Company, and considering the changes suggested by them.

"I have been mostly observing at this point to see what changes were really needed."

Changes are being made slowly, Norvell said, because he feels that making one change may take care of several areas.

A few changes currently being effected are:

- Setting up an audit trail
- Developing standardized recipes
- Implementing a six week cycle menu
- Changing food products

"I have changed some of the methods by which we do internal reporting," Norvell said.

"I have set up a method where we can put up an audit trail to help us in handling and reporting operations."

"We now have standardized recipes being developed; and a six week menu cycle which will enhance our purchasing power," he said.

"We are in the process of changing some products. We have already made a change in the french fries."

"The first week I was here there were several suggestions in the suggestion box. People asked for diet dressing and several had mentioned the french fries. We have already made a change in the french fries."

Norvell checked the quality of french fries and decided to try another product.

"We got a different product altogether. I selected the best I thought was on the market in this area."

"I also added diet dressing as suggested."

"In my opinion, the customer is always the judge. Students are the customers," he said.

"I know about the hamburger problem. We are definitely going to make changes. In my opinion, that hamburger is never going to be right served the way it is. The psychological effect is there. It will be there until we change the format."

Norvell hopes to reopen the snack bar, but is cautious about making a definitive statement.

"It is my intention, unless something goes wrong, to open the facility, but I am still in the research stage. I am getting all the facts together to make a decision and will make one soon."

Further implementation of goals will be completed, said Norvell, as he meets with other staff members to discuss what needs to be done.

"I believe that from now until this summer we will be meeting at least three times a month. Once we get operating procedures identified and reported, we will meet less often. I will be stimulating their thoughts so they can help me on this job," he said.

"You are only as good as the last meal you put out. We probably have 2,000 credits depending upon us every day."

"If we're not getting complaints, we are pretty good," he said.

Program Board finally finds key to success

"What are you doing Friday Night?"
"I hear that Harper is showing that movie that swept the Oscars. Want to go?"

It's hard to believe that the door has finally been pryed open and success ushered in. But attendance record after attendance record has been shattered at various events this year.

But what took the key so long to be turned? Program boards in previous years have been enthusiastic and hard working just as the current board.

The current board finally picked up the doormat and found that student contact was the key to a successful program that satisfied all tastes.

It was precisely this insight that gave the board license to bring in a band with a recognizable name and films that no one had a chance to forget yet simply because they were so powerful.

Students have finally been given what they wanted for so long: a program board that does their best to meet student needs.

Hats off to the program board for finally providing the types of entertainment that students appreciate.

Harper victims hit and run accidents

In the past few months, Harper College faculty-staff, and students have been the victims of hit and run auto accidents in the parking lots. Since the beginning of Spring Semester, there have been twelve such occurrences.

As Public Safety Officers, we feel that the Harper College Community should be aware of what is happening to them.

Most people know that it is against the law to leave the scene of an accident without contacting the local police or leaving a note on the other person's car giving his name, address, license plate number and/or telephone number. Lately, few people have been responsible enough to take these actions.

Leaving the scene of an accident is a Class "A" Misdemeanor. It can carry the penalty of up to a year in prison and/or a fine of up to $1,000. There are ways of tracking people down that leave the scene of an accident, either through witnesses or phone transfers on cars.

It is unfortunate that the people who are irresponsible enough to account for their actions cause increases in your already high insurance premiums.

We are asking those people who accidentally hit another car to be responsible enough to call our office at extension 211 or leave a note on the other person's car stating your name, address, license plate number and/or telephone number.

We would also like to ask those people who see an accident occur to get a license number and call our office at extension 211. Remember, you are paying for their accidents.

Transcripts needed now not next spring

To the Editor:
It has been nearly 2 months since I first requested my transcripts to be sent from Harper to the University of Iowa. After standing in line for an hour in the Office of Admissions, I was assured that they would be sent within ten days.

So the process of waiting to see if I had been accepted began. The application, high school and college transcripts had been sent. Promptly ten days later I received a notice that Harper's transcript had not been received. I called Harper just to check that my request had not been lost. Again I was assured they were a little behind but it would be taken care of. Today, one month past that phone call, I checked with Harper and my request was still sitting there. The voice on the phone mentioned a computer breakdown, resulting in work piling up. Well, that's really a shame. Now college transfer student application deadlines are approaching and Harper is still working with January's business. It could mean resentually having to attend Harper next year.

Let me ask one question: "Do you think it is too late to request my transcripts to be sent for the school year of 1982-1983?"

THERE'S ONLY ONE PLACE TO GET $9,200 FOR COLLEGE IN JUST TWO YEARS.

Soon you'll have your associate's degree. And if you're thinking of continuing your education, you know just how expensive that will be.

But consider the Army. In the Army, if you participate in the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), you can accumulate $9,200 for college in just two years.

That's significant for two reasons. Obviously, that's a lot of money. But what you may not have realized is that two years is the shortest military enlistment available. Only the Army can offer you both.

VEAP is a great way to make it on your own. Since it's not a loan, you won't need a co-signer or collateral. And you'll never have to worry about making payments after graduation.

It's strictly a savings program, and the money is all yours for school.

VEAP is surprisingly simple. If you save between $25 and $100 each month while you're in the Army, the government will match your savings two-for-one. And, on top of that, you might even qualify for the exclusive Army educational bonus of $2,000.

And remember, in just two years, you'll be back in school.

Racial list gives students the shaft

Princeton, N.J. (CPS)—The College Entrance Examination Board has provided at least 11 colleges with requested lists of only black or only white high school students which the colleges then used in their own recruiting programs during the 1979-80 academic year.

Jan Harvey, head of the Student Search Survey, the College Board's Princeton subsidiary that actually did the lists, says the computer match-ups of colleges and the kinds of students they want is "looked on as a service, not discrimination."

He adds that requests for lists of students of one race or another are not uncommon. "Usually," he says, "it's because they offer special minority scholarships or curriculum, and high school grade points, which they want to reach the right market."

Harvey could offer no explanation of why a college

Complete air and land price per person is $497 (twin basis) and $589 (triple basis). A $100 deposit is due by March 15 with balance required by March 18.

The lists of students are compiled from people who take any of the College Board's many exams—the Scholastic Aptitude Test and other entrance exams for graduate, medical and law schools. Student characteristics are gleaned from the Student Descriptive Questionnaire filled out when the student registers for one of the tests, according to Anita Galuska of the College Board's Education Testing Service (ETS).

Galuska stresses that registrants can choose to simply ignore the questionnaire, or just answer some of its questions.

The questionnaire asks students to identify their high school grade points, how much money they expect their parents to contribute to their college

Only 30 places are available for this special trip.

Patents

A new course on Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights is being offered at Harper College March 11-May 6. It will be held from 7 pm to 9:05 pm.

The course will encompass a practical understanding of patents, trademarks and copyrights as well as how to obtain and use them. Other aspects to be covered are how to docucosts, what they intend to major in, and personal traits like gender and race. The College Board, through its Student Search Survey subsidiary, then sells the information in list form to College Board member institutions and government-sponsored scholarship programs for 12 cents per name.

In breaking the story of the race listing in its Feb 24, 1979 issue, the newspaper in These Times charges the lists enable colleges to "overlook minority students and concentrate on whites only."

Harvey disagrees, saying the system works "very much to the students' advantage" because it helps them learn of available programs and scholarships.

The lists, moreover, have drawn charges that the College Board engages in a different type of discrimination altogether.

Film review

Melvin and Howard

"Melvin and Howard" is one of the best movies of the year. It is remarkably funny, original in idea and story, but above all extremely entertaining. Although this is the film that people are turning away from. This is the most disgusting aspect of movies, how the big turkeys can stay around for week upon week, and a movie like "Melvin and Howard" disappears after two weeks never to be heard from again.

The story is about Melvin Dummar (Paul Le Mat), who supposedly picked up Howard Hughes in the Nevada desert and gave him a ride to Las Vegas. Hughes is portrayed by Jason Robards, one of the very few true actors in film today. His part is brief but not in impact. The first scene of the movie we see Robards on a motorcycle riding through the desert, attempting to jump a small lake. Hughes, in this scene, is shown as a very foolhardy person trying to rejuvenate his daring youth. However, "Melvin and Howard" pays more attention to Melvin and his troubling financial problems. He lives with his wife and daughter in a beat-up trailer home, surrounded by junk. Something of his is being repossessed constantly. This movie does sympathize with Dummar, but with a sincerity that movies of this type lack. Le Mat is terrific, because of the natural style he brings to the film. His Melvin is kind, caring, frivolous, and foolish, but there is also the essence of him being the American dreamer.

Director Jonathan Demme brings rich character emphasis to "Melvin and Howard". Everybody in the movie is not just a piece of cardboard. Mary ("Time After Time") Steenburgen is convincing as Melvin's wife, who takes on a job as a strip tease dancer in order to make some kind of money. Demme has a keen sense of logic; that lack of income can be the reason for some people who have a commitment to stay together, not to. Demme's humor has spark to it. When Melvin finds out he has the possibility of inheriting one-sixteenth of Hughes fortune ($56 million dollars), Demme shows his home quickly invaded by relatives he hasn't seen in a long, long time.

All in all, this is a great work by all parts (acting, script, direction). "Melvin and Howard" should've never been met with box office failure. So if this film, by some miracle, should return to neighborhood theaters by your house, catch it immediately.

ALL NIGHT LONG
by Holly Kutler

While Barbra Streisand can be accused of as being well-preserved for her age of forty, her tremendous ability to sing and act has followed closely in those footsteps, by far, excelling with age. Yet, to great disappointment to her fans, the quality of her movies has taken a fierce nose dive.

Streisand, in her newest movie, "All Night Long", plays second fiddle to Gene Hackman, of whom the story is centered. Although bleached blond in this recent flick, Streisand's superb acting has remained unchanged. Her immense talent still shines through, which is a talent in itself, especially since it has the difficult task of shining through a somewhat dismal script. It is obvious, through this movie, that writers are evidently running out of ideas. Ideas which are capable of raking in the big bucks.

George Duple (Hackman) has left his executive office to experiment with the other side of life. The side which isn't structured, but rather is founded on emotion. Now letting his deepest convictions control his life, he suffers the consequences of being demoted, separated and caught up in a messy lover's knot with his own son over the same woman, to whom, by the way, they are related.

The idea is a good one, but it could've been easily condensed into one half of the length of the movie. And so, it is in these fillers, where lies most of the fault. The movie is neither consistently good or consistently bad; that matter, but its sporadic humor is often hit upon so fast, that it is often lost in the audience's memory. It is only a shame that an A-1 cast was wasted on a less than adequate film.

M & R Rush survives through good and bad of rock

M & R Rush are survivors. After 11 years of playing within a band, they have emerged as one of Chicago's favorites in a recent Chicago Rocks LP the band released "Rock and Roll Chicago," a CD that attained them the number 3 berth on the Loop Top 100 poll. Now their latest effort in hand is the new album, "Reach for the Stars."

I had the chance to talk to one of the group's members while at Haymakers in Prospect Heights Carl Moszur, the group's keyboardist discussed with me at length about M & R Rush's path.

"We put the same back in high school days when Marty

Curt Ackman

on music

and Roger put together a band." Back then everyone had a name like that, "M's Long, T.W. & M's Royals, and so evolved M & R Rush."

As they ran soundchecks in the dark, the members of M & R would poke fun at one another. "Business first, then fooling around," was Moszur's interpretation of their performance antics. "Positive" was the one word that keyboardist Moszur described the group. He went on to say that the best way to get up for a concert was to run behind schedule and has to rush. "That way by the time of the concert I'm ready."

When the band finally did appear around the 10 o'clock hour they seemed upbeat to the somewhat inhibited crowd. They opened with the title track, "Reach for the Stars", which starts with a very organized keyboard progression and moves to a driving harmony. As I sat there placidly in my stool, I realized how involved I was getting with the sound. As M & R Rush cranked out tune after tune, the members seemed to get more receptive. At one instance, Paul Martin, vocalist and guitarist, jumped stool on the stage as they changed tempo. Marty Mardrosian was seen creating faces as he drummed his way through a ballad. And all of this happened while Carl Moszur topped to the keyboards.

That night after the concert I went home to listen to more of their album. This 4-song EP was something unique. The group who are still somewhat obscure has more creativity than many of their Top 50 forerunners. Plus, a sound all their own.

The band consists of John McFarland, guitarist, Roger Mardrosian, drums, Paul Martin, guitar and vocals and Carl Moszur, keyboard and vocals. When I questioned Moszur on his goals, he hoped to see the group receive a major recording contract and said the outlook is good.

With that in mind, keep your eyes peeled for M & R Rush as they "Reach for the Stars."

Waters sheds adviser role, hits wilderness road

by Daniela Stojanovic
He can be found running in Bidge, M. skiing the slopes in Michigan, playing basketball before a concert or sitting calm and businesslike behind his desk in the Student Activities Office.

Fred Waters, student activities advisor, has been at Harper for two and a half years and feels "it's time to make the break and get into something new."

"I feel I'd get stale if I stayed here another year," says Fred. "I have to get in to something different and take on new challenges."

"I've done a lot of traveling and this is the longest I've settled anywhere in my entire life."

"Now I've got the bug in me to do something different and outrageous," said Waters.

So what does this quiet, adventure seeking advisor plan on doing?

For starters, he will be taking a 700 mile canoe trip up Hudson Bay.

The two-month long trip will be a "journey through one of the few remaining wildernesses of the world."

It will take Waters (and a friend) along an abandoned route, the last 150 miles of which will be in a sub-arctic region.

Waters is looking forward to the challenge of living in the woods without the luxuries of civilization.

"I'm anxious to see what frame of mind I will be in afterwards."

Waters has done some previous canoeing and backpacking but this will be his greatest challenge.

To prepare for this trip, he has been getting into condition. His exercise program consists mainly of running which he has been doing for 7½ years.

"It keeps me healthy and I see it as a meditative relaxing hobby or interest of mine," said Waters.

Weight is another important consideration of his. His diet has changed since his younger days and he is now eating healthier foods such as fruits, salads, and yogurt and well as vitamins.

But to prepare for his trip he is trying to put on weight. "I might lose anywhere from five to ten pounds and it's to our benefit to be prepared and in top condition."

During the trip itself his diet will be very limited. The food will be nutritional and high in calories such as peanuts and granola. "I can say though that the first thing I will do at Churchill (their destination) is have a steak and beer."

What does a meek student activities advisor want to go through all of this?

"I thrive on challenges," said Waters. "We will also be bringing along a guitar and mandolin and I plan to write a lot of music."

At this point Waters is debating what his plans will be after the journey. "There's no money to be made in education so I'm looking into public relations with major corporations," said Waters.

His job at Harper has given him experience in marketing, promotion, advertising and management which he feels will be helpful anywhere he goes from here.

One thing that Waters will be missing is "absolutely, unequivocally working with students."

"This job offers me the opportunity more than any other on campus to get to know students," said Waters.

He added, "I get a lot but I get a lot back."

Albergo brings a happy note to the classroom

Teaching piano, organ and choir and doing workshops locally and nationally keeps Cathy Albergo, instructor of music in piano and choral education, all kept up.

"Right now I am very excited about a new class at Harper. We have a very important program in the works. We are going to institute a piano pedagogy option to the degree we offer at Harper."

"It was the consensus of four year colleges that it was important to start earlier than the four year program. It is a high demand area, so four year universities will accept it as a transfer."

"If Springfield approves

teacher feature

if we will start the program next fall," she said.

Piano pedagogy is designed for people who play the piano who think they want to teach. The class will show them how to teach piano for the beginning or intermediate student who wants to teach.

"It is a very innovative program at the two year college level. Harper will be one of the few two year colleges in the nation offering this course."

Mrs. Albergo is particularly excited about the new class because she received her Master of Music degree in Piano Pedagogy from Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

In addition to her piano instruction, she works with Harper's Concert Choir and the Camerata Singers. The Concert Choir is open to any Harper student. The number in the choir ranges from 25 to 45. The turnover is very rapid in the choir, she said, and there can be great differences from semester to semester.

"Last year we had large women's sections, but very few men. This year I have a very strong men's section.

The women are still strong, but fewer in number.

"At a community college, you have the students for less time. You still try to get a high quality performance, but it is more difficult since the students are here for a shorter period of time.

Difficult or not, her students from last year showed their appreciation of her work by giving her a plaque which says:

"The enthusiasm you have is contagious and your ability is simply outrageous. The gift of laughter which you possess, brings out in us the very best."

"Our smaller group is called the Camerata Singers. They are accepted by audition only. This year we have 16 singers. The number varies from semester to semester. The Camerata Singers go off campus more often. They perform for professional organizations. Last year they even performed at the Playhouse Club in Lake Geneva.

"We will be performing in Woodfield in March and in the Shakespeare Festival at Harper, as we did last year."

"I think the Camerata are getting more popular. I don't think the college realizes what a fine group of singers they are. They sang at a faculty luncheon and the faculty members seemed surprised at how good they were," she said.

Hawks end season with loss to Lincoln

The Harper women's basketball team closed out their season last week in a loss to Lincoln at the Elgin Sectionals, W.S.

Harper had beaten Triton earlier to win the Regional Tournament and to advance to the state play offs at Elgin.

Harper's game against Lincoln started out close in the first half and Harper was leading after the first 15 minutes of the contest. But Sue Hoday and Sue Muehler found themselves in early foul trouble and that is what hurt the Hawks the most.

Harper also shot very bad in the first half and that also enabled Lincoln to grab a halftime lead, 41-25.

During the second half, Lincoln forced Harper into a man-to-man defense and that is when Lincoln took over and stole the game.

"I thought that we would have done better in the man-to-man situation but they were just too quick and fast for us," said Harper coach Tom Teschner.

"We were our own worst enemy, throughout the entire game," added Teschner.

"I'm still very proud of what the girls have done this season. I don't think that anyone thought that we would have done as we have," said Teschner.

Leading the Hawks in scoring was Dianna Dieber with 20 points in the contest. Sue Muehler added 11 points to Harper's efforts while Viv Weidner added 10 points to the Hawks score.

This loss puts the Hawks record at 18-1, and leaves them about 7th in the state.

"The thing about the game and the season that impressed me the most is that not once did they give up," said Teschner.

"They just kept trying throughout the entire game and not once did they give in."

Trustee Dasher urges dropping construction lawsuit

by WENDY WINKELBAKE
The Harper Board of Trustees is considering dropping a lawsuit aimed at recovering damages sustained when a concrete spandrel fell in June, 1978.

The college filed the suit against architects, contractors, and manufacturers who worked on the building after the 13 ton spandrel fell.

George Dasher moved that the college consider dropping the suit after learning that Harper may have difficulty winning the $250,000 suit filed in May 1980.

Having already paid $17,000 in legal fees, Dasher believes that the college should stop wasting taxpayers' money on the suit.

The suit seeks to recover damages from architects Casdill, Rowlett and Srest of Hanston, and Fitch-Larkoos Associates of Chicago, general contractor, Corbetta Construction Company, roofing company, E.W. Olson, roofing materials manufacturer, Mathisen Hagler, and metal manufacturer, Sturmed Steel.

Basing his beliefs on court rulings in similar incidents in which no personal injury occurred, Dasher said that he doesn't think the college will receive any money.

The board plans to meet with its attorneys, Robbins, Schwartz, Nicholas and Liffon, Ltd., later this month to find out if there is any chance of Harper winning the suit. If chances are slight, the suit could be dropped.

The spandrel fell from a doorway in Bldg. A, in June 1978. No one was injured. Inspectors by S.P. Astrow Associates, an architectural engineering firm, revealed structural problems with the roofs and support areas of other buildings.

The board approved $1.1 million dollars last December for structural repairs to bring the college to the proper standards for a building of its age.

Bldg. M open facilities a windfall to community athletes

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN

While warmer days and sunnier skies await far off, the desire to be in shape and active for warmer days is present in Building M.

The multi-purpose physical education department is active with weekend jocks and Tuesday night basketball stars, granting and sweating their way into shape.

While offering intramural activities and physical education classes for students, the building's facilities are also open to the community to aid in the fight against a generous Special K punch or an overdose of winter blues, at prices that don't require selling a member of the immediate family to use.

For just one American dollar all facilities are open to the public.

The facilities include the gym (available for basketball, volleyball and its ten lap indoor track equipped with pace lights, six racquetball handball courts, a six lane 40-meter swimming pool and diving area and a weight room complete with Universal gym machines.

The rates vary depending on which equipment is used, but in comparison with the Dea Plaines YMCA, Harper surpassed the club for competitive prices on comparable equipment. For example, the fee for non-membership admittance is $4 for a one day session, plus an additional $4.50 for one hour of racquetball court time. At Harper the rental cost and admittance is $7 an hour for the public.

One reason for the competitive prices is the exchange in open hours at the building.

"While places such as the YMCA exist for the main purpose of offering this service, Harper most of all is for education and community use comes later down the line," said Wally Reynolds, coordinator of intramural and recreation.

"We are in a limited access situation, the class schedule is our primary concern, but if we can steer clear of offering a class at night we will."

"Along with classes, we have to contend with intramurals, concerts and school sponsored sports," explained Reynolds.

But the conditions aren't as bad as they might sound. There are regular hours set aside for open use of the building and community response indicates the program is successful.

"Our main advantage is that unlike a YMCA, the community is not overrunning our facilities."

"This allows more space for those who are using the equipment. On an average night the gym is used by about 60-80 people over a four-hour period," said Reynolds.

The building is open from 7:10 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, 5:30 to 9:30 Tuesday and Thursday and 10:00 Saturday.

Open hours are preempted when schedule conflicts arise, but as Reynolds explained, "we try to give as much notice as possible about conflicts over games and concerts. The cost for use of the pool and gym is a dollar each, the weight room cost is $2 per session and the racquetball court rental is $7. Racquetball and racquet rental service is available for $1.

Reynolds voiced confidence in the building's program and mentioned that a seasonal pass for the facility is being considered.

"It would probably run about $40 and would entitle the owner to an unlimited number of visits for the term of the card," said Reynolds.

The Dea Plaines YMCA offers an annual individual pass for $90 and a family pass for $140.

The times for open access change every eight weeks during the academic semesters according to class schedules, with the winter season being the busiest for the building.

With open community hours throughout the week, Bldg. M is a windfall to weekend athletes not able to afford a commercial health club membership. (photo by Rick Kobayashi)

Officials on the trail student loan defaulters

Cincinnati, OH (CPS)—The hunt for student loan defaulters quickened measurably last week when the U.S. Department of Justice sued 501 defaulters on GI Bill and Federal Insured Student Loan benefits.

Though default suits are currently the largest category of litigation at the Justice Department, the number of people sued in this one action is a record.

James Cissell, U.S. Attorney for southern Ohio, says "the amounts in defaults nationally for student loan programs is four times the money taken in all robberies in 1979." In this crackdown on defaulters in Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati, Cissell is suing three times the number of people he sued in a similar gangbusters action two years ago.

U.S. Attorney Jay Brant is also moving to lighten the access on defaulters in Detroit, Cleveland and Milwaukee.

"In the past we haven't put liens on property or garnished any wages," Brant says. "We're just beginning to do that."

Though the Justice Dept.

is installing computers programmed to chase down defaulters and has announced a program of releasing defaulters' names to newspapers, there may be no special new national movement against those who don't repay their loans.

"There is no centralized crackdown," Justice Dept. spokesman John Russell grumbles. "The recent suits are just pie projects of Cissell and the Detroit attorney."

Centralized or not, Cissell is aiming to recover nearly $600,000. He says it's owed by some pillars of the community. "One newspaper discovered a fellow who was district director of the Boy Scouts. We also found, unfortunately, a number of law enforcement officials, detectives on police departments, things of that nature."

Defaulters, in many cases, are "far from destitute."

Cissell hopes the U.S. Dept. of Education will cooperate in the crackdown by informing credit bureaus when defaults occur. "Surely an automobile dealer would think twice before giving credit to a defaulter, former student," he says.

Apathy cannot be blamed entirely on students

Spring heralds many things—warm weather isn't too far off, classes get harder to go to and student trustee elections are just along the corner.

The student trustee elections are the most important held during any academic year. The person elected to this position acts as a liaison between the student body and the board of trustees.

This liaison is the only contact that the board and students have and must be handled by someone with more than a few grains of responsibility.

But the same old situation arises each election, students whether they are misinformed or simply not aware of the election, student turnout is extremely low.

Responsible voting is not a one way street though. Students should be motivated enough to use their voting voice in the decision. By the same token, the candidates want to vote.

If the candidates do not care enough to really get out, pump the flesh and win the election, students can not be expected to be interested enough to vote in the elections.

When running for the position of student trustee, the candidates should be well aware of the responsibility that goes along with it.

Before they can present student opinions to the board and cast the all important student vote, they must first be aware of student opinion. And the only way that they can gain the confidence and trust of the students is to get out and win it.

Effective campaigning involves not putting up a few posters and then sitting back till election day, but moving among the students and inspiring them to vote.

Apathy is not to be blamed entirely on the student. This inspiration could come in many forms: circulating among students during peak hours, passing out flyers with their campaign platforms generally being seen and heard by students.

Possibly the best way to inspire voting would be an open forum in which the candidates could present their views. The perfect place: the student lounge during the noon hour. The seemingly perfect sponsor: the student senate.

An open forum would not only give the candidates a perfect opportunity to present their views but also to motivate people to vote.

Until candidates realize that they play a deciding factor in responsible voting, student election turnouts will continue its downward.

On Fullbright fellowship, Jauch finds Korea pleasant

Korea, the land of the morning calm. The last time I was in Korea, it was a far cry from being calm. Korea was then caught in a cold war that became very hot locally. My first sight was a frightening experience, artillery duels roared and tracers filled the sky. I had arrived at Incheon in October by troopship, and was immediately rushed to the Front Lines northeast of Seoul. I remember passing through what seemed to be a large city, where there were a lot of demolished buildings. I remember a bank, with the only item intact being the huge walk in safe, a large building with no windows or roof, and a residential area that seemed to be untouched. The year was 1950.

My wife and I arrived in Seoul Kimpo Airport in September, 1960, almost 10 years to the day from my last arrival. We watched the city below as the plane circled in its approach and I mentally compared it with what I remembered. The change was remarkable, even though I had expected a rebuilt city. The war turmoil was replaced by another kind of turmoil, progress. Seoul reminded us of San Francisco, California, with its hills, closely packed houses, streets. So, welcome to Korea, the land of the morning calm? We questioned each other about this "calm", but we were too busy the first few days to feel anything but calm. Filling out forms, learning our way around Taejeo, shopping for food, settling into an apartment, and trying to learn enough Korean to be understood a little, consumed all our time.

One day an opportunity arrived that allowed us to begin to see Korea without being overwhelmed by the rush of the city. We were guided to the Kyongju area in the countryside, we saw some of the views described in the tourist literature which we had studied before leaving the U.S.—small country villages, the Temple Pui Kiu Sa, and the East Sea coast. We described it with one word: beautiful. We had finally discovered the land of the morning calm. Since that one day tour, we have taken every opportunity to explore Korea on our own. Our travels have taken us to Seoul for a more leisurely visit. We have had time to explore the city on foot: Kyongbok Palace, Eastgate Market, Eastgate itself, South Gate, and many side streets. We have been lost, but someone has always come to our rescue. I returned to part of the Choncheon area where I was stationed at one time. We toured part of Mount Sorak, and the east coast.

We are both experienced campers, my wife and I, and have explored many remote regions in North America. We have found our self-guided tours around Korea to be a similar experience. Many roads are not on our map, and we must ask directions often to reach our evening destination. Our Korean is very limited, and sometimes it has been very difficult for us to understand. However, the Koreans we have asked for help are usually very patient, and go to great lengths to guide us.

My position as a visiting professor here at Kyongpook National University is a new experience. I expected the Korea student to be quite different from the American student. This was, I found out, part myth and part fact. I find that the students are different, but still have many similar characteristics. Some of these differences are very flattering to the Korean students. The esteem held here for the professors is one flattering difference in the U.S. usually student respect must be earned, here it is bestowed. Some of the differences I see are due to the fact that I came from a community college, many of our students are older than the professors! The community college has only three entrance requirements: that you be willing to learn, pay the fees, and fill out the proper form. Our students are rich and poor, smart and ignorant. They make the same mistakes, avoid homework and complain about too many tests. They partly love sports, and sometimes drink too much. Are you any different? America has little historical tradition. Korea has thousands of years of tradition, and yet, I see a common goal we all wish to achieve: to live in a better world tomorrow than it is today. I expected to learn much about our differences, and I feel I have learned little, except that, maybe, there isn't so much difference between us after all. I still feel my experience here is a good one.

Move over Lang, Dating Game arrives at Harper

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN
What would you consider an exciting evening? Before you answer, that question, remember be careful!

You don't want to be too tentative, but you don't want to be too dull either because you're trying to get a date out of all this. But, also keep in mind that there are about 300 people anxiously waiting your reply.

This situation was recently faced by eight Harper students who participated in a slightly bizarre rendition of the popular television game show "The Dating Game."

The event, sponsored by the program board and the college radio station WHCM, was hosted by WHCM personalities

Curt Ackman and Jerry Goldstein who portrayed respectively Jim Lang and Don Pardo, the actual host and announcer of the television show.

The show was modeled exactly like the TV show. The program was divided into two segments. The first part, a "bachelorette," through questions to three fielding bachelors it was visa-versa in the second segment.

Before each segment, a nucleus of Ackman read short biographies and interests of the contestants. After the questioner began his or her interrogation.

Mary Shulenberg had the distinguished honor of being the first interrogator. Mary's questions for the most part, were of the routine nature that one might expect to hear. However, a few other questions would probably have not made it past even the most liberal of interrogators. Some of these questions really surprised a few of the bachelors. Jim Probst, bachelor number three in the competition, seemed to collect a lot of the "off-beat" questions.

"I just didn't think it would be those types of questions," said Probst. "I didn't know what to say I mean who wants to talk about their most embarrassing experiences?"

Probably one of the wildest questions of the entire day went to Shulenberg's bachelor number two, Dave Whitt. "Bachelor number two," Shulenberg asked, "if your fiancé was Christopher Columbus what would he discover first?" This question required an avid imagination and Whitt responded quite coyly, with "Mount St. Helena." When the time came for a decision Shulenberg didn't hesitate in picking Probst.

Sam Spillers was the interrogator in the second round in which three beautiful bachelorettes attempted to field questions from a six Spillers. There was really no contest among the bachelorettes. Katie Cook was able to handle quite effectively Spillers' "prying" questions. Spillers first question to Cook was "what do you look for in a man?" Cook replied with whatever I can find." Spillers was not amused by Cook's quick answer. Spillers went on with "Bachelorette number three, what do you like to see a man wearing?" Again Cook came up with a snappy answer. "Nothing at all," she replied. Of course Spillers ended up picking Cook for his date.

Why did Spillers choose Cook? "I liked her answers over the ones of the other contestants because they were really funny," said Spillers. And, what did Cook think of Spillers' questions? "I thought they were amusing and disgusting. But, I guess if you're going to go out with a person you have to know what they're like," stated Cook.

Both winning couples were presented with $50 gift certificates to the Palm Court restaurant in "beautiful" Arlington Heights. At the end of the program both couples and Ackman gave the legendary send-off kiss towards the audience.

Afterwards, Ackman explained the story behind Harper's Dating Game. "When the game was first suggested, I was real enthusiastic. But, when it got down to the actual show time I began to have doubts about myself and how it (the show) would appeal to students," stated Ackman. Ackman added that the questions developed by Spillers and Shulenberg were their own and were not tampered with by the show's staff. "I think Mary and Sam added fun to the show with their questions being sexually sided," noted Ackman.

Ackman also said he was pleased with the turnout of the show had. "The last time there was an event in the center there was about 40 people talking while a comedian performed. But, I thought our show was pretty successful and I am pleased it went as well as it did," Ackman concluded.

Specialization in business, repair areas are open careers in 80's

by HOLLY KUTLER
For some people there is always a job in Uncle Max's self-made million dollar business.

But what happens to many others who search for a job ends behind the counter at Aunt Betina's pastry shop. Simply because they majored in the wrong area.

Surely this example could be home with many, but it can also be prevented by meticulously analyzing those factors which will be greatly responsible for the future job market.

Population growth and technology, two such overriding factors in the forecast picture, will create an influx of jobs in areas such as:

- Businesses, both those rendering services and the sale of goods.
- Additional help for companies which must now adapt to the new needs of the consumer.

- Information processing
- Solar energy
- Satellite communications

Careers expected to prosper throughout the '80's are data processing, health care and construction. Also of concern is the threat of technology leaving many jobs. For instance, jobs such as the file clerk and other clerical positions will be virtually replaced with machinery in 1990.

At present, there is talk of computers to be used by students in their home, as a school-inhibited teaching mechanism. Certainly not in store for the immediate future. This device will inevitably result in the tapering off of various school positions.

Also posing as a threat to the teaching profession is the "frenzy" on the population. Fewer people are choosing not to have children, or at least not a large family.

The only bright spot in teaching is at the high school and college level. At this level, many instructors and professors are continually being sought to teach various math and science courses. Courses that new students deal with this fast paced technological age.

On a brighter note though, some jobs will expand considerably, according to the bureau of labor, over the next 10 years. These include dental assistants, bygenists, physical and occupational therapists, home health aids, nurses, scientists, engineers and technicians in various fields, business managers, secretaries and receptionists, retail sales workers and many kinds of computer-related workers from programmers to systems analysts.

Blue collar workers can be expected to find the most growth in the following fields: mechanics, repairs, computers, office machines, appliances, cars and industrial machinery, plumbers and pipefitters, heavy equipment operators and electricians.

The overall economy is largely influenced by population distribution. Jobs should be easily accessible in the west and the south, as there appears to be a heavy migration to those areas. The employment outlook in the midwest and east coast is rather dim, only because people sweeping across the states have put a definite damper on these areas.

Constant preparation is the key to Joan Lowenthal's success as a fashion design instructor and suburban radio personality. (photo by Mike Smith)

Lowenthal spreads the news in the classroom and over the air waves

by Nora Norton

A teacher and radio personality? What more can Joan Lowenthal fit into her schedule?

Interior design instructor, Lowenthal, graduated from Northwestern University with a background in English and Journalism.

She began her training in interior design after she was married and her son was 6 or 7 years old.

After her training at the Ray Yogue School of Interior Design, she worked for ten years for James L. Adler, Interior Design Organization.

"I was extremely fortunate because the work that I did for clients involved a spectrum ranging from hotel lobbies to recreational facilities.

"I get such a great background of information not many people get. We did everything from very costly installations to budget jobs I also did work in beauty shops and offices," she said.

Because of her background, Mrs. Lowenthal tries to emphasize the importance of practical experience. She discusses the jobs she is involved in with the students in her freshman class.

"I feel it is very helpful to them to know the questions they bring to you. I tell them everything that is appropriate to learning."

Mrs. Lowenthal told of two clients, one which had no budget restrictions and the other which had budget limitations.

"In the executive offices where money was no object, I was told 'do what you want - certainly we'll check on it, but if you think it's required, we'll get it.'"

"I was limited on the design, however, because the president had a lovely, big traditional

teacher feature

desk and I had to work around it."

"In the limited budget job, I could use whatever design I wanted, using my creativity. It was much more of a challenge to stay within the budget," she said.

"In addition to teaching and working with clients, Mrs. Lowenthal is heard on radio station WBBM Thursday mornings on the Betty & Bob Sanders "Family Forum." She answers questions and discusses basic areas of design do's and don'ts.

"For example, there are certain patterns that are masculine in feeling, such as plaids, stripes and charcoal colors. Feminine colors are pale pink, mauve or pale yellow. You don't mix masculine and feminine patterns."

"Some questions are unanswerable over the air, you really have to go out and see it (the area involved)," she said. These basics are also covered in a book Mrs. Lowenthal wrote called "The All-Things, Color Blind Book of Interior Decorating."

Some of the chapters include subjects such as furniture, its arrangement and selection, correct use of color, wall decorating and window dressing.

"In spite of the various jobs she has undertaken, she has not done any installations outside of the Chicago area.

"I think it would be fascinating to not only go to another part of the country, but to another part of the world," she said.

Knocked for a Loop, Meier moves to WLS

Wearing the "local kid made cloak" with confidence, Garry Meier is "just a guy on the radio who's enjoying his job."

by WENDY WINKELSHAKE
With a somewhat pained look on his face Garry Meier looks around the narrow studio filled with speakers, microphones and a chair overflowing with supplies.

"This is lame! Well, I guess that it is better than having nothing happen at all," he said, a smile brightening his bearded face.

Although quite talented in his right, Meier, 31, is best known for his role as Steve Dahl's official sidekick.

The "local kid made good" cloak must have been tailored with Meier in mind. After graduating from Tinley Park High School, Meier moved on to a stint in college that didn't quite work.

Then, for purely financial reasons like most college students he was knocked out into the construction business.

It was while pouring concrete and pumping out crawl spaces that the idea of a career in broadcasting dawned on Meier. He thumbed through the yellow pages, set up interviews at several broadcast schools and eventually enrolled at the Institute of Broadcast Arts.

"I'm just some south-sider that happened to get into radio and have all this stuff happen. There's no rhyme or reason why things happened. If you have any talent, ambition and drive you can get anything. I believe in that very much," said Meier, confident but still a bit awed by his success.

Two months after he began school, Meier landed an all night job with WFLP. Unsatisfied with the automated system, Meier left WFLP after a year and moved to suburban WYEN with full intention of leaving after one year for a "live" rock station.

Three years later, Meier found his way into an all night slot at WLUP, (the loop) where he met the master of irreverence himself, Steve Dahl.

"At the time I wanted to do what Steve was doing but I couldn't figure out anything that outraged. When I met Steve he was doing that Popeye fightin' thing so his plans wouldn't crash into the Hancock building. I said to myself 'nothing is going to be the same after today,'" said Meier, 31.

With Meier signing off and Dahl winding up at 6 a.m., it was natural that Meier would lead Dahl into a spot.

Knowing that he wasn't cut out to be a straight newsmen, Meier still jumped at the chance to become Dahl's newsreader seeing it as his ticket off the night shift.

Insisting on a straight newscast not one interlarded with off the wall humor, LOOP management made it clear to Meier that he would have to make a decision, either be a newsmen or sidekick but not both.

Thus, Meier moved in his official sidekick status where he has happily remained for three years.

The recipient of constant second billing to Dahl, Meier insists that he doesn't feel overshadowed or in the least bit left out of the limelight.

"We both know our talents and our place on the show. It's like Johnny Carson and Ed McMahon. Now Ed might not say but three of four sentences all night, but you know he never becomes a very valuable part of the show. I see myself as the Ed McMahon of this show," he said.

Better known as Steve Dahl's sidekick, Garry Meier sees their laid back broadcast as a means of making people think about the state of affairs of today. Meier and Dahl handle the 2:30 to 7 p.m. shift on WLS-FM 96. (photo by Rich Menendez)

"I'm there and I might not say something that particular segment but you know that I am going to feed off Steve or set him up with something."

"It's a two man thing, the chemistry is magical and you know the other one is there without his saying anything," he continued.

"Overshadowing is the death of any team. If you have the thought of it that is the death of the team because somebody is going to feel slighted. There is the ego problem that starts becoming a cancer among the group and I don't want to see that happening."

It is not uncommon that during a typical broadcast Meier will be keeping the radio log, dashing in and out of the studio for last minute supplies and generally bringing some semblance of order to the studio while Dahl wanders aimlessly doing whatever strikes him at the moment.

"I started with the live breakfast club so that Steve could wander through the audience without having to worry about commercials. It's second nature now so I handle it," Meier said referring to his role as organizer.

"I don't have a major ego that needs to be as big as Steve's as far as media attention. I get enough to satiate whatever I have and that's fine. I'm not trying to be anyone than a guy on the radio who's enjoying his job," Meier said, content with his rank among celebrity troops.

Although it took two years of working with Dahl to mold his personality into the show, Meier "found himself" and is becoming an airwave comedian in his own right.

"After two years you learn how to work with the other person so well that you know exactly how the other person thinks and how you fit your personality into that."

"At first it is because you are not sure of yourself or maybe I was trying to develop my own personality but after two years I feel comfortable and it is very smooth for me," said Meier, overflowing with professional assurance.

Meier and Dahl join forces each afternoon to draw their own brand of humor to their cult of listeners. The two pilot the afternoon drive shift on WLS-FM Monday through Saturday.

With a blast of polka music and a "thanks for the ride home" linged with more than a bit of sarcasm, another broadcast day begins.

Famous for their irreverence, the dynamic duo of the airwaves picked up the rule book phrases from other afternoon disc jockeys, twisted it to fit their style and capitalized on it.

"It is a catch phrase that we picked up and we're having fun with it. We didn't use it in the morning, for some reason it didn't occur to us. But afternoon disc jockeys always have catch phrases. We like to take all the clichés the D.J.'s use and use them in our way," Meier explained.

"We were just playing around with them and now we throw them out as pure fodder for our comedic grammar."

Meier and Dahl, formerly employed by the LOOP, found their way to the personality oriented WLS team after LOOP management found it necessary to release Dahl on the grounds of assailing community standards.

Bypassing a chance to grab his own spotlight and move into the pilot seat of the LOOP's morning programming, Meier resigned from his position, without giving a thought to staying.

"I don't want to stay for a millennium. I knew way before this came down that if Steve decided to leave that I would go with him. If in fact he wanted me to, Meier said, his team-player attitude evident.

While Dahl was called upstairs to the management suite, Meier was downstairs being offered the job thus eliminating any communication that the two might have had.

"I had to assume that we were going together and I was correct in my assumption. I thought that we were close enough friends to know exactly what his thoughts were so there was no problem in saying 'I don't want the job,' he continued.

"I was actually getting nauseous at the time. It was one of those situations where someone tells you something that actually makes you sick."

"I never thought that it would get to that point. The fact that we had built up that station for two years and this was the payoff I got up, left and never came back. I made my resignation statement that night on channel two with Bob Strout and that was it," Meier said.

Dahl thought that he was on his own to sign a three year contract that he and the station had agreed to when the corps was pulled from beneath him.

"By the time that I got down to see him, it had already happened and he was coming with. I was quite flattered."

Theater a combination of blood, sweat and tears

by DANIELA STOJANOVIC

The final performance is on stage in front of a live audience. It involves a few actors, some scenery, and a performance that lasts only a couple of hours.

The bright lights, the glamour, and the fame are visible only for a few quick moments. People remember a few scenes and lead actors.

The ease and believability with which a performance is done make it hard for the viewer to imagine the hours of planning, constructing, and rehearsing that go into a show whose presence may be forgotten overnight.

Mary Jo Willis, director of theater, can only begin to explain the complications involved in putting together a show.

The performance that the audience sees doesn't even hint at all of the people involved in its production according to Willis.

The first part involves hiring a staff or professional cast including a vocal director, orchestra director, set designer, costume, choreographer and lighting designer.

Later, auditions have to be scheduled, props have to be constructed, and the cast has to go through an 8-week rehearsal period.

What is now a theatre department open to all Harper students was once a club. Willis changed that when she arrived at Harper six years ago. It is her job to decide what type of show to put on whether it will be a musical, comedy, drama, or children's theatre. According to Willis, she seeks variety and asks herself two questions when deciding on a particular show: will people generally like it and do I like it?

"If the director doesn't like the show he can't get into it," she said.

Those who plan to audition for a show must first read the script. Sometimes even that isn't easy considering the fact that musicals require the actor to send to New York for a script. Auditions can make or break a career, I like the kid who says, "I'll do anything, I'll even sweep floors," Willis said.

Being physically right for a particular part is also very important. "If you want to play the part of a sweet innocent young girl, you have to look like one first," Willis explained.

Even if someone wanted to be in the production but didn't make it he or she can still be involved. Included in the list of options are stage crew, props designing, costume making, ushering, and ticket sales.

The construction of the set is always a large job. It requires research and the building of a miniature model set. This puts the stage and setting in perspective for everyone, especially the actors who will be spending most of their time rehearsing in areas other than the stage.

This brings about a very important problem that those in theatre at Harper encounter: limited facilities.

A major problem is the absence of a dressing room. Since there is no actual dressing rooms in Bldgs. I and J, instead various rooms must be used.

Another problem involves the stage itself.

There's no way of getting to the stage from the back without going outside of the building.

Willis said. Limited space also requires actors to leave the building when finished with a scene. This could be dangerous for some performers such as dancers when they work up a sweat and then have to go out into the cool night air.

The steepness of the stairs in the lecture hall also presents a

When it comes to motivation, Willis feels she has "boundless enthusiasm."

"I'm worried more about the audience than the actors. The actors have gone through it so many times that they're used to the stairs," said Willis.

When it comes to motivation, Willis feels she has "boundless enthusiasm."

"Our attitude is: whatever it takes, that's what we'll do. And students have acquired that attitude. They do what you expect them to do," Willis said.

"I think that they get high here from just being human beings working with other human beings towards some goal."

The props and scenes that look so outstanding during a performance require many hours of design and construction just as the production itself requires many hours of rehearsal. (photo by Leri Lynn Guy) that he decided to do that. It's one of the few times in my life that anyone besides Janet (his wife) stood by my side," said Dahl, the same crazy man of the air that he is.

Immediately setting out to find another job, Meier and Dahl headed to WMET, the LOOPS biggest morning competitor. But unsure of what was happening, WMET hardly jumped at the chance to grab two of Chicago's most popular disc jockeys.

Although some negotiating had taken place with WMET, things were still uncertain when WLS made an appearance and ushered Meier and Dahl into their flock.

"There was no real doubt in my mind that we would not be able to find work. I thought if it doesn't happen in Chicago it can happen somewhere else," said Meier, with no real desire to leave his hometown but well aware that his own and Dahl's talent may lead them away.

Despite the negotiations that had gone through with WMET and possible retaliation against the LOOP, Meier doubted the MET deal from the beginning, simply because of their vagueness and lack of information.

"In my gut I thought, 'I don't want to work here.' It just didn't seem right. They were not aware of what was happening, and I didn't want to get involved in another LOOP situation," Meier said. "When I heard that John Gebron called, I thought 'that is the man that I would like to work for.' I kind of relaxed and figured that if MET didn't hire us, fine because I felt real secure in the fact that ILS was going to hire us."

"The LOOP never thought that we would get hired because of our community standards attack and we proved them wrong so that blew out their theory," said Meier, the taste of victory bittered with resentment.

Quite comfortable in his new home, the biggest transition Meier had to make was from an early morning show to an afternoon show.

Instead of having energy unfold white on the air, Meier faces the problem of running out of energy before the show and having to recharge before airtime.

"By the time 2:30 rolls around your energy might be down and you have to start all over and recapture some of it again. Most people get up and go to their job, we get up and still have four or five hours before we complete work," explained Meier, used to rising at 3 a.m. for the last two years.

Whether they listen in the show or not, most people have heard of the outrageous stunts that go on during a typical broadcast.

Although they do not follow a regular script, neither Meier, or Dahl never really stop preparing for the show. Listeners are bombarded with a free flow of conversation between Meier and Dahl who simply add in/of known facts.

Dahl's latest source of entertainment came with the execution of Indiana murder, Steven Judy. His oil of the wall sense of humor led a call to the Michigan City, Indiana, power plant to see if the lights dimmed any when the execution took place.

This type of behavior has earned the impulsive team a mixed reputation; some think that they are the greatest thing that ever happened to radio while others label them sick and crude.

Regardless of what people think, Meier sees the free style, laid back broadcast as a way to tell people into reality and make them think.

"I speak entirely for myself but I feel that there are alot of people that just don't give a damn anymore. Steve and I and the people that listen to us are out to make people think about pollution, injustice, murder, just a whole gamut of topics," Meier said.

"We are there to point out that while things look pretty grim right now there are alot of bright tomorrows out there. Steve and I give a damn and that's why we are here. People don't have to agree with us, we just want them to think," he continued.

Money is a combination factor in Meier's career. While he enjoys his job, he doesn't want to get trapped in a situation where he knocks himself out and gets absolutely nothing in return.

He has, however, reached the point of equilibrium where the breaks of scrapping together but fare balance out with the "Golden days" that he enjoys now.

"If all eventually averages out, you have to make a living but we're not out to be millionaires. We are comfortable but by no means ready to retire," said Meier, a man obviously content in his job.

Rising from a construction worker to a well known celebrity in just a few short years has not pleased Meier. He still sees himself as "some yahoos from Chicago that made it to the top."

"I'm still the same person that I was ten years ago when I was pumping out crawl spaces. I haven't gone to the deep end of celebritydom yet," he said enthusiastically.

"I feel comfortable with people and I am a friend of myself. You have to be a friend of yourself before you can go any further."

Former Harper Students place in print exhibition

Two former Harper students won recognition for their art work in the fifth annual all Illinois Print and Drawing Exhibition on display in Building P said John Knudson, professor of art.

Mariene S. Brach-Hunt was awarded second place for "Suka," a pen and ink drawing, on copper plate.

Jens Brach received honorable mention for "Lara," a pencil drawing on masonite. Mrs. Brach Hunt graduated from Harper in 1975 and went on to Northern Illinois University where she earned her B.S. degree in education and her master's degree in art. She taught in District 214 for three years and is presently teaching part-time at Stevenson High School and at Harper.

"I don't know why the listing of my drawing says it is seen," she said.

"It is not seen, but cut with a razor. It's something I started while a student at Harper. No one taught me to do it. I just wanted to do something to the paper."

Winning the award was a pleasant surprise, she said, especially because she had not thought about entering the competition. Her husband, Jens, suggested entering the show.

Brach also submitted a lithograph titled "Flute." He went to Harper around 1960, he said, and then to Northern where he received his degree in fine arts.

"At the time I went to Harper, the department was nearly brand new. The fixtures weren't complete - no place for sculpture or ceramics. The emphasis was on drawing and printmaking at that time. The strength I drew in drafting and drawing was because of that," he said.

Brach teaches art at Wheeling High School. Prior to that he taught for four years at Rolling Meadows.

David Dresbach, professor of art at Northern Illinois University, judged the competition.

The show will be in Bldg. P until March 27.

Georgetown return Libyan funding for study center

Washington, D.C. (CPS)—Georgetown University President Father Timothy Healy has returned $600,000 to the Libyan government, which for the past two years has helped fund the university's controversial Center for Contemporary Arab Studies.

Healy, who confessed he was "slow to move" in returning the money plus $41,731 in accumulated interest, said the university was giving up the support because of Libya's "accent on violence as a normal method of international policy, and its growing support of terrorism."

The day after Healy returned the money to Ali Houdari of the Libyan embassy in Washington, a major New York investment banking firm rewarded Georgetown with a $100,000 contribution.

"We were very impressed by their stand," explains Alan Greenburg, senior managing partner of Bear, Stearns and Co. "This is our little way of saying 'thank you.'"

The issue of Arab investment in American universities is not a new one. Since the founding of various Arab-funded Arab studies centers in the U.S. in the mid-seventies, academic critics have feared that the centers are familiar with the principles of academic freedom, which forbid certain points of view, and close their doors in particular to Jewish students and faculty members.

In June, 1979, for example, such fears forced the University of Southern California to drop its plans to accept a $7 million gift from Saudi Arabia to establish a Middle East Studies Center.

Two months later, the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies returned the unused portion of a $600,000 grant from the East-West Foundation because the foundation tried to bar Israelis from participating in a grant-funded seminar.

Those and similar tussles in Texas heightened the controversy at Georgetown, where columnist Art Buchwald, among others, called the Libyan gift "blood money," and where the appointment of Palestinian Hisham Sharabi to the Libyan-endowed professorship was roundly criticized by Jewish groups.

Silverman contends the center's operations might raise questions about its feelings toward Israel, but that "there's no evidence to suggest that outright discrimination is practiced at the center."

Healy's refund doesn't eliminate Arab investment in the center. In the largest single gift given GJ by a foreign government, Kuwait donated $1 million to the center last fall. Oman added $1 million plus an undisclosed amount in scholarships shortly thereafter.

Since the center opened in 1975, the United Arab Emirates has also funneled $1 million into the center. Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Jordan and Egypt have pitched in over $45,000.

"Our critics were worried that there would be certain bad influences in accepting Arab money," Fulghum remembers. "Then they suddenly realized there was no substance to that."

If "El Salvador" were a movie

BAMBACH HARPER

If the current situation in El Salvador were a movie, the promo might go something like this: "El Salvador" - A Ronald Reagan production of Lyndon B. Johnson's thriller, "Vietnam," starring Gen. Alexander Haig as himself and Richard M. Nixon as the President. "El Salvador" - you don't know what international conflict means until you've seen this movie.

Some of us more fortunate 18 and 19 year olds may get front row seats for the premier of this internationally renowned thriller in fact, we might even show up in the movie's script. Of course, I am being cynical. There won't, there can't, possibly be another Vietnam. I mean, there just can't, no way, no.

I belong to the latter part of the generation that grew up during the Vietnam conflict. I was barely four years old when Lyndon B. Johnson sent 500,000 troops into South Vietnam in 1965 that commenced direct American military involvement in Vietnam.

I remember a day in 1971, while living in Marietta, Georgia, a Phantom jet flew over our neighborhood from McCoy Air Force Base outside of Atlanta. A friend and I watched the plane fly overhead.

He asked me, "If the war was still going on by the time we have to register for the draft, what service would you join?" "I thought for a moment, 'Air Force.' I said, watching the Phantom jet fly out of sight."

I also remember watching Walter Cronkite report the figures of dead soldiers, wounded soldiers, planes shot down and soldiers missing in action. It never did hit me. In fact, Vietnam has never really hit me. Even now, I don't understand it.

"Why?" I ask myself. When I was growing up, I really thought we, the USA, were working for world peace. And then, they were trying to take us over, make us slaves for their evil designs, and take away our jelly beans.

That was long ago and far away. It's totally incomprehensible to me that people would actually want war. And yet, that's the feeling that I get.

The El Salvador conflict was recently simplified for me by a respected member of adulthood. I was told that we, the good guys, could clean up the El Salvador mess real quick - no problem. The only catch is that we would have to send U.S. troops down there to help the El Salvador government - which is, of course, a dictatorship.

Now, if U.S. troops don't go soon, the good guys will fight the bad guys (leftist revolutionaries or communists) until U.S. intervention is imperative to save off communism.

That's how El Salvador was explained to me. Just as Vietnam was explained to another generation.

It's as simple as A-B-C. Or W-A-R.

Baseball relies on sophomores

by KEVIN BUTTERMAN
A season of rebuilding is one way baseball coach Wally Reynolds might look at the upcoming season, considering the loss of four top players who moved on to four-year schools after graduating from Harper.

However, Reynolds sees no reason to limit the team to such negative a view. "Our record may not be as good as last year but we're going to try for 25 wins." Last year the Hawks finished the season with 34 wins, and a new record for Harper. The season end also brought graduation, and four of the top players moved on to top baseball colleges. Two players went to Evansville, one to Florida and one headed for Arkansas on a baseball scholarship.

With seven returning sophomores from last year's team as a backbone to the 14 other players, Reynolds believes his team has only two major flaws. First one can be solved only with time. That is the lack of experience in the outfield as well as behind the plate. The second problem is related to the first. The position of catcher is open at this point, and as Reynolds admits, a lot depends on how consistent the pitchers and catchers are.

The fact that the problems are so related is a bit helpful to resolving them. For instance, in the outfield the centerfield position is held down by Casey Moore, a sophomore batted highly upon by Reynolds. Moore's experience, knowledge, talent and leadership will play an important part in the defense of the outfield which will be supported by an experienced infield headed by players Brian Sanders at third base, Bill Moran at first, Frank Artile at second and Art Avermann on the pitchers mound. Brian is a strong runner, hitter and has a very strong arm but Brian is inconsistent. He can make a difficult play look easy, and an easy play look difficult.

At the mound the Hawks will be led by Art Avermann. Another returning player, whom Reynolds has much confidence in. "I think this year he will live up to the potential," said Reynolds.

Avermann also voiced confidence in the team and added he felt strongly about the team's ability to achieve a fine season. "I think the freshmen can handle the schedule and they are all working hard."

The experience comes with time, but the consistency that Reynolds is attempting to build behind the plate is also needed in the outfield. Look towards sophomore Casey Moore to play a key part in the Hawks defense. His combination of experience and leaders should prove to be invaluable to the Hawks performance.

Baseball Coach Wally Reynolds

"I'm depending on Casey and my infield and with their knowledge to hold the defense together," said Reynolds. Coordinating the defense of the outfield with the infield is more experienced, and one of the team's outstanding players is positioned at third base.

Brian Sanders is another player Reynolds looks towards in assist as a strong runner, hitter and also with a very strong arm. However, Brian is at times inconsistent. Reynolds also added that Sanders is one of the team's most talented hitters, and a definite asset to the team.

If the inconsistency is the problem, just how will Reynolds attempt to correct that problem? "We have good players, and I'm using their talent gauge against the methods used by the top schools to use in our training," said Reynolds.

With the season opening next week, who does Reynolds look for in the team to form the main stability? "My best players are Bill Moran, Frank Sarillo, Casey Moore, Ron Laramie, Art Avermann, Brian Sanders and Dan Dowjoko." It is probably no coincidence that all of those players are back for their second season, and all but Moore play infield positions.

As far as the connection between the mound and home plate goes, Reynolds says the position is still open, and that the plate will be played with an open eye throughout the year to determine who will nail down that position. Shortstop Ron Laramie, however, said that Dave Loch moves well behind the plate, and has a strong arm set to the position.

"I'm depending on the infield to hold the defense together," said Reynolds. Over all to the confidence Reynolds is confident the team will hold it down in play.

"I'm confident without a doubt we'll have a winning season. Last year we finished winning the last 11 of our regular-season games, and I'm looking to continue that streak this year," said Reynolds in an interview.

Even with the loss of last year's talent, Reynolds is confident that this year's freshmen will balance out the disadvantages of experience.

"I am very pleased in the type of players we have this year. They have a good attitude and they're very coachable."

We also make sure they take care of themselves academically and physically. "With both of the last two points being very important, Reynolds is as concerned with both. "We make sure the boys get to class and keep up their grades, but if we can stay injury free, we are going to have a very good year."

Although facing a tougher schedule last year, Reynolds is certain his team will perform competitively. "Our schedule is about 50% tougher this year, but our sophomores know who it will have to be with them."

"I can't think there is a team that will show up here and blow us off the field of course we'll have a legitimate chance of beating."

Over all, Reynolds believes the team will improve in batting and running throughout the season, and compare with last year's team avg. of .263 which was fourth in the nation. "Hopefully we'll get a good start and continually improve our treatment with more experience."

Reynolds said that Triton and Joliet are the two teams which will offer the most competition to the Hawks this year.

Kutler challenges Malkowski for trustee seat

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN
Two Harper students have announced their candidacy for the position of Student Representative in the Board of Trustees.

As of March 23, incumbent

John Malkowski and Holly Kutler, a business administration major had filed petitions with the student activities office.

Kutler believes the problem of student cheating to be the major issue of 1981. "I think if some instructors knew which students were cheating, they would be pleasantly surprised," stated Kutler.

Kutler said that she did realize that the problem of cheating was nothing new, but believes that if more people were aware of the problem more would be done to try to stop it. One solution proposed by Kutler is the forced closing of classrooms by monitoring of classrooms by their instructors.

If elected Kutler said she would like to see a program developed to establish entrance exams for 100 level classes.

Kutler believes the lack of such exam forces instructors to teach at slower speeds, thus causing some students to become restless with classes.

This, Kutler believes is a prime reason for students dropping courses.

A third point of interest for Kutler is the establishing of regular office hours for part-time faculty. One important flaw to this proposal is the fact that many part-time teachers have other jobs and responsibilities and, that there is simply not enough open office space available at Harper. The Harbinger learned that the problem of part-time staff availability was handled by the individual instructors and their classes themselves.

When asked what she thought of Malkowski's performance as trustee, Kutler said she knows nothing of Malkowski's record and admitted she has never attended a board meeting.

I have heard that he has bought votes through buying beer for people," charged

Kutler.

Malkowski responded to Kutler's accusation by answering "The lady is full of crap."

Malkowski contended that he has never purchased alcohol for a minor.

With a year of experience behind him, Malkowski says the most important issue in this campaign is the possibility of a tuition hike next year. As student trustee Malkowski believes he can keep the possible increase down to a minimum.

Although no increase is definite as of yet, Malkowski stated that "they (the Board of Trustees) have definitely convinced me that Harper is not in the best financial condition and a tuition increase is one way around that problem.

During his term Malkowski was able to haggle one such proposed increase from an additional two dollars a semester year to only an additional one dollar a year. Malkowski doubts that further increases will be able to be avoided.

Malkowski explained that even though enrollment is up the tuition money from new students is not enough to cover all the colleges' operating costs.

If students don't want to pay more they'll have to figure out what they don't want, because without the money, classes could be eliminated, overlaid, and/or equipment could go without being updated. I don't (Continued on page 4)

Attendance a factor in new audit policy

by MIKE BARNACH

For the third time in the last five academic years, Harper's audit policy will undergo a change.

During the 1976-77 year, the school's audit policy read: "A student desiring to audit a course without credit must, at the time of registration, receive approval from the instructor of division chair."

A year later in 1977-78, the policy was changed to read: "A student who wishes to audit a course may do so by following the regular registration procedures or by completing a change of schedule form prior to the withdrawal deadline."

What has taken place since that 77-78 year is an abuse of the audit policy. Students would simply audit a course to avoid a withdrawal, which is much more embarrassing on a transcript.

The policy made no attempt to put a limitation of absences for the grade of an audit, nor was an instructor's permission required to audit a class.

That, however, will change next year. "I think we're going back to what an audit means - you're in a class to listen," said Kerens, faculty senate president. "The students will now have to get an agreement with the instructor in order to audit."

"The main change will be that the student will declare himself an auditor at the start of the semester with the permission of an instructor. The grade will also be assigned by the instructor, which is different than the automatic audit grade (S) a student gets now," said Gil Tierney, associate professor of English. Tierney has spent two years trying to change the audit policy.

Ninety percent of the audit policy has been okayed by the Academic Standards Committee (ASC) last week. The only problem now is what grade a student would receive for taking an audit. When that is worked out by the committee, the policy will be officially accepted (presumably in two weeks) and will be put into effect starting next fall.

The biggest change from former audit policies will be that attendance will have a direct effect on the student's final grade. "Students were getting audit grades and were never there to be audited," said Tierney. "I don't know why so many students started doing it. I guess an audit looks better than a withdrawal."

The Academic Standards Committee is also looking into a change in the withdrawal policy. Presently, a student can drop a class up to the week before finals. The ASC would like to change that.

"One thing we are looking at is how students drop their courses the last week of classes," said Kerens. "It takes away from student commitment to a course."

The biggest problem with the current withdrawal policy, in Tierney's eyes is that "it's too late in the semester. It's a pretty strong feeling among a lot of the faculty, but it's now universal. By moving it a little earlier in the semester, you might get more commitment on the part of the student."

Although discussion has just begun on changing the withdrawal policy, any change would also take effect beginning next fall.

Proposed family contribution hike puts student aid on hold

by WENDY WINKELHAKE

Bids by the Reagan administration to up family contribution in educational costs has put college student aid programs on hold.

An attempt to increase family contributions has led to an unprecedented 45 day on processing federal financial aid applications.

Officials report that thousands of students have already applied for aid but none have received answers. Notification of financial awards can't be expected until sometime between May and August 1981.

Recommendations concerning Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans and Guaranteed Student Loans are of particular importance to financial aid specialists.

David Stockman, office of management and budget director, proposes cutting 200,000 students from the Pell Grant (formerly Basic Education Opportunity Grants) program by restricting the loans to families earning less than $25,000 a year.

An estimated six million students are expected to apply for Pell grants, the fundamental aid program of need students. Approximately 2.8 million students, about one of every four college students are receiving federal aid this year.

Even though the Democratic-controlled House may be able to garner enough votes for a resolution to block the proposed change, it could take as long as one month leaving large numbers of college students unsure of the amount of federal aid that they will receive.

This stand still in awards was brought about by a Reagan administration attempt to rework a Carter administration formula determining the amount of family contribution to educational costs.

Pell grants are based on eighty-four family income minus allowable living costs.

The Carter resolution increased the amount of living costs that a low income family could claim by 15 percent. This resolution was handed down in January.

According to this formula, low income families would have less left over to meet educational costs.

However, a new regulation was handed down by the Education Department several weeks ago. This regulation would leave the family more disposable income to contribute to educational costs.

The Reagan administration claims that the new proposal will save $10 million in the 1982 budget. Financial aid specialists warn, however, that several hundred thousand low income students could be left without funding for their education under the new formula.

Stockman also proposes the elimination of the National Direct Student Loan program over the next four years.

Stockman also supports the elimination of the in-school interest subsidy program offered by the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

Currently, students repay bank loans used for tuition at nine percent interest rate with the government paying the difference between the nine percent and market interest rate.

The new plan would force students to pay regular market interest rate.

The administration admits that the proposals could knock approximately 100,000 students off federal aid.

Students most affected would be those from families in the $11,000 to $20,000 income range having multiple access to bank credit.

Contribution hikes could block college avenue

Spring conjures up not only images of warm days on the beach for community college students but also of the hassles of transferring to a four year school.

As if the seemingly endless calls, applications and letters aren't enough, students are now faced with another worry; where will the money for expenses come from?

In the past, students filled out their financial aid forms then sat back and waited for an answer. Within a few weeks, some monetary award was given.

Now, thanks to proposed changes in the financial aid system by the Reagan administration, any student financial aid has been out on hold.

Many students are depending on some form of government grant or loan to help meet college expenses and can make no definite plans until they know the exact amount of aid they will receive.

By putting the entire financial aid system on hold, the federal government is really putting the future of the country on hold. Today's students are tomorrow's leaders and without proper training they may not be qualified enough to take over the important positions in society.

The 45 day freeze put on processing federal aid applications can break many college plans leading students to seek other avenues.

Is there any explanation for huge flags?

There is no doubt that America is enjoying a period of nationalistic patriotism. Let's face it, the hostage situation, Charlie Daniels, and National Inquirer lawsuits are all examples of Americans standing up for America. However, are things getting out of hand? Could very well be. After all, how does one explain giant flags?

Now realize, when this reporter says giant flag, he means huge. Not just slightly above average but huge, massive pieces of cloth that would have bogged even the wildest notions of Betty Ross.

These giant flags are making their debut throughout the country at an astonishing rate. The flags show up in the most unlikely places. One might expect these tributes to pride and glory to be found in national parks or at the foots of monuments, or flying high above the final resting places of soldiers and statesmen. Instead, these flags are guarding the gates of gas stations, franchise restaurants, and garbage dumps.

Now there is nothing wrong with small businessmen showing their thanks for being able to take part in the process of commercial freedom. After all, who could forget that symbolic photograph of "Sammy Cheng's" grocery store during World War II. Remember, he was the guy that hung the huge poster in his store window that read "I am an American" right before he was dragged off to the Japanese relocation detention camp. Still, as symbolic as these flags may be they often end up being bearers of bad taste and not patriotism. When the gas station managers have raised these monsters of fabrics above their stores they have not taken in the consideration of the surrounding area. So, what ends up happening is a giant flowing wall of red, white and blue which serves as a backdrop to relation wires, smokestacks, and condominiums. Sure, even if these flags are the centerpiece of shopping centers it is still breathtaking, well mind boggling, in its driving down the road and all of a sudden have one of these flags appear on the horizon. But, in putting one of these flags above a gaudy hedge-podge of "progress" what we all want to be representative of America? One has to wonder what foreigners think when they see one of these giant flags above a gas station or ice cream parlor. Would it be something like, "no this is what freedom of expression means?"

It probably is necessary that an occasional appearance of nationalism takes place. But to what extent are Americans willing to go on bragging of national pride? No question that living in America is better than living in say, Iran, El Salvador, or the U.S.S.R., but ignore the many gross injustices that constantly occur in the land of liberty? Remember America is the home of the Klu Klux Klan. Remember America is the country of deplorable housing projects for the poor. Remember America is the country where this reporter saw a Catholic priest driving in a Cadillac and later saw the minister of an immigrant Lutheran church driving a beat up old station wagon.

None the less, Americans will always be themselves and Americans will always have their silly fads. One has to admit that a giant flag does break up the ordinariness of a day. And, who knows, maybe now that Jane Byrne is moving to Cahoon - Green the City of Chicago will put up a giant flag there. Everybody knows that place could use a little brightening up.

want to see student activities closed down, and I don't want to see teachers lose their jobs, but it could happen," stated Malkowski.

Malkowski said as student trustee he defended the students rights to his best ability. Malkowski said he had a difficult transition last year and attributed it to the poor briefing he received about the job. "I said that no matter what the outcome of this year's election he will be sure a comprehensive briefing is compiled for the incoming student trustee."

Malkowski said he spent the first six months of his term learning about the job. "I went into the first meeting and said I was planning that and that and then I learned that many of the plans were already done. You can walk in there and sound off about something but if you don't know what you're talking about you can end up looking like a real yo-yo," laughed Malkowski.

The cut off date for filing petitions is March 30. Petitions are available in the student activities office A-336.

Anti-sex discrimination laws

(CPS) - A federal court ruling that anti-sex discrimination laws can be enforced only in "those education programs which directly receive federal financial assistance" has some women's rights advocates worried that Title IX, of the higher Education Amendments of 1972 may have been badly weakened.

Federal District Court Judge Charles Jener ruled that Title IX, which forbids sex discrimination in institutions receiving federal money, can only apply to programs that directly get federal funds.

In this case, Jener ruled that the U.S. Department of Education could not enforce Title IX in the Ann Arbor School District's intercollegiate sports program because the sports program itself did not specifically get any federal funding. The school district, however, received 17 million in federal funds.

While warning that the decision's effect "is limited to the eastern district of Michigan," attorney Mary Kohn of the Women's Rights Project of the Center for Law & Social Policy in Washington, D.C. expressed "serious ramifications of this is upheld."

If the precedent is established, she sees it applying to areas beyond athletics. She feels it could hamper not only sex discrimination litigation, but federal laws that prohibit discrimination on the basis of race or national origin.

"If it's only a reading program that's integrated, this court ruling would suggest that the rest of the segregated school is okay," she hypothesized while stressing she had not seen the "Jointer decision herself." That would be terrible.

Kohn instead argues that "because institutions get huge amounts of federal funding, the whole school is covered by Title IX. Federal funding is infused into the entire school budget through tuition and fees."

Limiting Title IX to programs that directly get federal monies... usually called "categorical grant programs" would seriously inhibit women's rights efforts, says Jean King, the lawyer who represented the Ann Arbor athletes who claimed their school district favored male programs over female sports programs.

"Federal funds don't touch anything we care about," King told Higher Education Daily. "It leaves nothing to Title IX, except the school lunch programs."

Over the past several years, women in colleges have employed Title IX to sue over such issues as unfair employment practices, the harassment of students by professors, and even female students' efforts to join previously all-male marching bands and "eating clubs."

The U.S. Department of Justice is currently involved in Title IX lawsuits against the University of Alaska, alleging it has failed to provide equal opportunities for its female athletes. A Justice Department lawyer estimated that "probably 75 percent" of the government's college-related sex discrimination cases "revolve around athletics."

Indeed, the National Collegiate Athletic Association sued the government in 1976, asking that sports departments be excluded from Title IX regulation because they are not directly funded by Washington. The case is still pending.

Similarly, the U.S. Supreme Court may soon hear a case in which a Georgia school district wants to exempt all its programs from Title IX, except those in which its teachers are paid directly with federal money.

But a spokesman for the Project on the Status and Enforcement of Women in Washington speculates the direct-funding issue may be resolved by President Reagan's proposal to change all categorical grant programs into block grants. Under the proposal, state and local officials would be given federal funds, which the officials could then apply to programs according to local needs.

The spokesman, who asked not to be named, suggested the block grants "might mean that all school funding... out of one pot, so to speak, would fall under Title IX."

ADVOCATES LOANS OUT OF CONTROL

By HELEN CORDES
Washington, D.C. (CPS) - With a straight shock of dirty blond hair and wire-rimmed glasses, Rep. Tom Coleman R-Mo looks unconvincingly like a Saniter, slightly older clone of Office of Management & Budget (OMB) Director David Stockman.

And Coleman as ranking minority member of the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee, unhesitatingly misses Stockman's insistence that federal funding of student aid be cut. Consequently, he's emerging as a central figure in the political battle now opening in Congress over the proposed cuts, which could amount to some $9.2 billion in 1982, ac-ording to some estimates. In hearings opened last week, college lobbyists warned that the proposed cuts in student financial aid would prevent as many as 750,000 students from re-enrolling next school year. As many as 201 private schools could close as a result, speculated W. Richard Stephens, director of Greenville College in Illinois.

But against Stephens and the scores of other witnesses forecasting gloom are the forces of budget cutting, as represented by Coleman.

Coleman, says one lobbyist, "is the guy in the middle who's supposed to carry the moderate Republicans and conservative Democrats on the subcommittee for the Reagan plan."

The newly influential Coleman countered lobbyists' testimony by noting he was "personally very sympathetic to the financial aid problem. In fact, my National Direct Student Loan was the only way I got into school."

Coleman attended William Jewell College in Missouri. The Reagan budget proposes to phase out NDLSs over the next four years.

Reagan now agrees with Coleman because the student loan budget is "completely out of control."

Opponents of the plan react to those accusations with bitterness even at this early stage of the battle. "I find it very ironic," thunders Peter Pryor D-SV, "that David Stockman when he was a congressman voted for the Higher Education Reauthorization Act, which enables Congress to fund college programs through loans, mandated increases in most financial aid programs."

Most of those testifying against the program cuts dismissed with irony, and went straight to outrage.

"The cuts would be a serious blow" that would eliminate "choice for prospective students," drastically limit research capacity, which is an irreplaceable national resource, and "raise operating costs at a time when the financial conditions" of colleges are "particularly uncertain," summarized E. K. Fretwell, who heads the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

Specifically, the administration wants to phase out NDLSs, and make significant changes in the Pell Grants program which until recently were known as Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, or BEOGs.

If Congress approves the plan, Pell Grants would be restricted to students from families earning less than $15,000, and require that students themselves contribute 25% a year toward their education.

The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimated the new provisions would cut "approximately 100,000 students" from the program, through OMB chief Stockman aimed for eliminating a total of 260,000. The CBO's Alice Rivlin told the subcommittee the average Pell Grant award would be reduced 17 percent, or nearly $20. She estimated the savings to the government at $2.4 billion.

UNC's Fretwell testified that cutting off students from families that earn more than $25,000 negates the "Middle-income Student Assistance Act" passed in 1978. "The cuts don't take into account cash benefits with more than one child in school," adds Sen. Clifford Pelt D-R.I.

College lobbyists, more than ever upset by the Reagan proposal for Guaranteed Student Loans (GSLs). The administration wants to limit GSLs to students who can prove financial need, raise the interest rates to current market levels (currently at about 11 percent, contrasted with present special 6 1/2 percent), and stop federal help to students in paying the interest.

The proposal will do nothing less than "virtually destroy" the program, and will create such confusion that lenders, parents and students will withdraw in large numbers in a very short period of time," warned David Martin, lobbyist for the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

He predicted "90 percent, or two million, of the students now getting GSLs will quit the program."

In contrast, the CBO's Rivlin says the proposal "would reduce the eligible pool of borrowers by roughly by percent." Yet she added, the proposed changes in the GSL program might make lenders less likely to make loans under it.

Consequently, students who lose one kind of financial aid won't necessarily be able to replace it with another kind. Financial aid officers will not be referring NDLS borrowers who need $500 to $500 to the bank to apply for a GSL, testified Joseph Cram, president of the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corporation.

"The administrative costs for a lender are the same for a student who borrows $500 as they are for a student who borrows $5000." Cram explained.

"The student who borrows significantly lower amounts reduces the bank's profit, and so probably won't get a loan. But subcommittee Chairman

Paul Simon (D-Ill.) doesn't have any idea of his own what kind of cuts his committee, which will review the hearings across the country now, will ultimately make. "We may face a mandate to cut back $300 million," he says.

"Whether Congress will support the cuts will depend on the public," Rep. Pryor says. "A recent New York Times poll showed 65 percent in favor of increased student loans. They've got to let us know."

GREEKS FAIL TO TAKE OVER NEW MEXICO

Albuquerque, N.M. (CPS) - In a highly unusual case of a special interest group trying to take over control of a campus public interest research group (PIRG), a slate of PIRG candidates called the "Greek factor" has been defeated at the University of New Mexico by a group of candidates organized specifically to keep the New Mexico Public Interest Research Group (NMPIRG) from being "dominated by Greeks."

NMPIRG Chairwoman Vicki Marquer says the slate of fraternity members worried her because of a characteristically "big Greek voter turnout" in campus elections.

Calling the Greeks' ambitions a "conflict of interest," Marquer had organized a special session of NMPIRG's board of directors five days before the February 28 election to form a counter-slate.

Marquer said board members "don't want to see people who have evinced no interest in PIRG until the last day" before the election "decline" to turn in election petitions "to take control of the board."

One of the fraternity candidates agrees he had little interest in PIRG before the elections, but says he wanted to give voters an "alternative."

"We have as much right to sit in one or all positions as any other student," says Robert Beck, organizer of the Greek slate. "Seven friends from outside could run together."

Leonard Garcia, former president of the Intra-Fraternity Council at the University of New Mexico, admitted the slate was "really a bunch of Beck's friends" interested in helping Beck gain control of NMPIRG so they could make it a "more political" organization.

Garcia said the week-long feud between the two slates that preceded the voting was not spurred by any "vendettas," but mentioned that there might be some ill will in the wake of the elections.

Bored? Ponder these great thoughts!

With my mind in a mental block from spring fever I found myself having nothing else to write on this week, so I decided to turn my thoughts inward and the following to my dismay, is what I found. Out of depression I tried clearing out some things that bothered me. So here goes, excuse me if I ramble.

I've about had it with the food in the Harper canteen. I had a cheeseburger last week and well, I won't go into the gory details. For a viable alternative I heard a nifty little place out past Carpentersville called Joe's Up-N-Chuck. Of course, if I was 21 years old, I'd just go to the Smuggery for lunch. I could always try and pass myself off for 21, but I've been told (many, many times) that I just don't look like I'm 21. (Sigh)

Somebody asked me why I decided to come to Harper since I live all the way in Frank Ridge. I had to think about that for awhile, but I finally came up with an answer: I prefer Harper to Oakton. I have my reasons, believe me, and I really enjoy the 30-minute drive on the track-infested I-90 tollway.

Besides, it only costs me $17 per week to fill up my gas tank and only 90 cents a day to venture the tollway.

What is wrong with preppies? I was needed last week for an outfit that included khaki designer-jeans, a Lacoste shirt (burgundy with a navy blue alligator), and Sperry top-siders. Hey, I enjoy spending exorbitant amounts of money to feel "in-style." All I need now is a convertible sports car and a summer vacation in California - and I'll be hip Golden!

That was not e shot at California - I've never traveled there. But from what I've heard of it, I'd like to A report from Disney Land in Anaheim, where a friend of mine in Navy ROTC was last week, described 90 percent of the girls out there as Cheryl Ladd look-alikes. The other 10 percent are brunettes as Cheryl Ladd didn't get to go to the beach," my friend said. I told him not to worry - I've heard the girls in El Salvador aren't too bad, either.

My mother recently bought a bunch of Jelly-Belly gourmet jelly-beans. She voted for Ron Reagan, and I think she wants to get more involved in politics. I wonder if Reagan will ever have his own jelly bean. They could call it RonnieBelly wer beans. Or Jelly-Belly Ronnie beans. Or Ronniebeans the jelly been that stopped communism.

I hear that the Moral Majority has started burning books. I didn't know the energy crisis was that bad.

When was the last time you heard anything about the former-hostages?

Despite DePaul's hard-luck in the NCAA, turrey the last two years, it's interesting to note that the Blue Demons have won more games in the last three years than the Cubs won last year - and it's half as many games.

And, finally, to stifle all rumors to the contrary, I do not bleach my hair. It's all natural. (Sorry girls.)

Harper Tennis team hosts deep talent

by JOE KOBT
The Harper men's tennis team will "hope to do better than last year," according to their coach Roy Kearns.

"We'll be hoping to do better than last year's team, although they weren't that bad last year," said Kearns. Kearns feels that his team should finish in one of the top three spots in the NAC conference this year, basically because of the talent that the team possesses.

"The top four players on the squad are very close. They're just a coin flip away from beating each other," Kearns said.

This year the Hawks will have three returning sophomores on the squad. Ron Dudley, Jeff English and Kurt Dedrickson are all experienced in playing tennis at Harper.

"I think that we've got a team with great depth in the top four or five players," said Dudley.

One of the freshmen that will be helping the squad out this season will be Brian Buelloni, out of Rolling Meadows High School.

"Brian was a very competitive player in high school and he had a very impressive record and I see no reason why he shouldn't be able to carry that over into college," said Kearns.

Mike Lange, one of Buelloni's teammates from Rolling Meadows, will also contribute to the tennis squad this year.

"Mike has good talent but it isn't all developed yet. By the time we start competing in our dual meets though, I think he should be quite a competitor," commented Kearns.

Tom Suppes, freshman, is also a good competitor according to Coach Kearns. Along with Suppes is Dale Rothstein, a newcomer to the game of tennis this season.

Another player on the squad this year is Doug Dvorak.

"Doug is sort of a transfer student to tennis from racquetball and he certainly has the skills of a competitor," according to Kearns.

Against the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Harper fared very well.

"I think that we did very well," commented Kearns. "We had wins at doubles and they were very impressive too. Both divisions, first and second, lost the top teams and we went three sets with the University of Illinois that was very impressive.

"We were the dark horse team coming into the playing but we played very well. Many of my players were gratified by other coaches," added Kearns.

Harper's No. 1 player right now is Jeff English, but he is followed closely by the other members on the squad.

Mike Granther transferred to Harper as a sophomore. Granther is very competitive and will add to the returning strength of the team.

Mark Reed is also a very competitive athlete that is looking forward to an outstanding season.

English, Granther, Reed, Dudley and Buelloni are "five of the most competitive athletes I've ever seen, first anywhere," said Kearns.

This season the NAC looks as though Harper, with their deep talented bench, will post a chance in sweeping the conference from DuPage and Rock Valley.

"Everyone has one of two good players on their team and that alone is hard to come by. This year I feel very fortunate to have as many good players that I do," said Kearns.

This was also one of the first years that the tennis team has been able to do the conditioning that they have been doing this year.

According to Coach Kearns, the abundance of talent at Harper can be explained as a tradition.

"We're just keeping up the history of good tennis players," added Kearns.

The men's tennis team will compete in the Springfield Invitational Friday and Saturday, the 27-28 of March.

The next home meet will be April 4 against the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh at 10 a.m.

RACQUETBALL HAS become one of the most popular sports in building M as the public starts to take use of the facilities.

Women's track looks good

by JOE KOBT
According to women's track coach Renee Zetner, "It's a fantastic team. I couldn't have asked for a better bunch of girls."

This year's women's track and field team will open their season Saturday afternoon at the Wheaton Invitational.

Opening for the Hawks in the distance races will be Susan Kuehn. In the relay teams Beth Hood, Sandy Parks, Karen Stenstrom and Susan Kuehn. Parks and Hood will also be the main sprinters for the Hawks and Stenstrom will be the hurdler.

Tami Orselski and Judy Abernathy will be used in the field positions of discus, shot put and javelin. Lisa Hueck and Sue Mischler will be Harper's high jumpers for the season.

Most of the members on the squad have all competed in the state finals in high school or at national for Harper.

"I think that we should do well in the conference this season," said Zetner. "We've got more girls than last year (11 to 3), and they all are willing to work hard."

It is the best bunch of girls in the world I couldn't have asked for a better group. Now it's just a matter of no injuries and peaking at the right time," added Zetner.

Cubs, Sox; pro farm clubs

Dodgers if all goes the way the Sox want it to.

So, for the first time since 1959, the Sox looks as if they MIGHT have a chance at winning something.

The Cubs should be shot or put to sleep before they can do any more damage to the public with their sloppy baseball.

The only thing the Cubs have going for themselves in Keith Hernandez and Bill Buckner. If the Sox trade Buckner back to Los Angeles like they plan on doing, then they'll drop about another 1/2 million fans, and the only thing that has kept them out of suicide for the past few years.

A real Chicago fan would mail the Cubs a letter telling them to get rid of Rick Reuschel. It's 1981 last year, and to get rid of Jack Brickhouse. That many years announcing to the public doesn't bring loyalty, it brings motion sickness.

Then the Chicago fan would write to the Sox and wish him luck.

Then the fan would get a strong antenna so he could pick up the Brewers games and some good baseball.

But, still one can't argue that Chicago is a true 'gold mine' stacked with talent. And as any old miner can tell you, gold isn't worth nothing until you take it out of the mine and sell it.

Chicago teams; a professional gold mine to others

Kost's Kolumn

The Chicago Cubs and White Sox should quit the professional baseball league, forgive the city of Chicago for representing them as losers, and become what they have been in the rest of baseball for the past ten years

A professional farm club I once heard it said that the Chicago baseball teams are a gold mine to the rest of baseball!

True! In the past few years the Cubs have given away such stars as Bill Madlock, two time batting champ, Fergie Jenkins, an American League Cy Young winner, Burt Hooten, a 20 game winner that helped the L. A. Dodgers finish in the top spot several times; Manny Trillo, a second baseman that helped the Phillies take their first World Series from a star filled Kansas City team; and last, Miguel Dilone, a player the Cubs used as a base runner because they thought he couldn't hit!

Last year that same Dilone hit .341 with the Cleveland Indians and stole 61 bases to top it all off.

The most recent of these Chicago blunders is the Bruce Sutter trade. Of course he asked for a lot of money and for that the Cubs should let him go to St. Louis so he can hurt them with his outrageous pitch.

Also in their (Cubs) line of deals was the Kingman Connection.

The Cubs should never have traded Kingman for he was a true Chicago athlete in every sense of the word. He struck out too much and he couldn't catch a fly ball if it was stuck in his hand. For those qualities, Dave Kingman should be forced to remain in Chicago to show the world of the characteristics found here.

The Chicago White Sox have also had their share of trades that have also made Chicago look like the sucker.

Tommy John, the bionic player with the Yankees, and Steve Stone are the two best pitchers in the American League.

Both have the same background; the White Sox. Bucky Dent, one of the top shortstops in the American League, is also from the White Sox organization. But Dent was good before he left Chicago. He just got better!

Goose Gosage, Richie Zisk, Bobby Bonds, Terry Foster, Oscar Gamble, Pat Kelley, George Ortz and Wilbur Wood are some other Sox players that have gone on to bigger and better things.

The Cubs had a 64-96 record last year for an embarrassing 399 percentage. Their attendance dropped over 1/3 million last year. If the Cubs were a T.V. show they would be cancelled, stripped of their actors pension and be forced to appear on Romper Room twice a week.

The White Sox on the other hand finished with a 70-90 record for a percentage of 438.

But, the Sox did take a shot at the leading Royals, who finished 20 games up in the division, but they couldn't take it. But things may be changing for the Sox. This season the Sox will act like the Yankees and try to buy a pennant.

Already the south side sluggers have Ron LeFlore, a 257 hitter with 97 stolen bases last year.

The Sox have also received the leadership and power of All-Star catcher Carlton Fisk, a legend from the Boston Red Sox. For years Fisk had been fighting with the late Thurman Munson in bidding to be the best catcher in the American League.

It is also said that the Sox would like to grab Greg Louganis from the Phillies, but the Sox aren't willing to give up one of their starting pitchers. And, the Sox may have a shot at getting Ron Cey from the

Gillen, Dvorak to face Conduct Committee

by WENDY WINKELBAKE and PETER WICKELAND
Two student senators found in possession of alcohol on campus will appear before the Student Conduct Committee next week facing a possible verbal warning or disciplinary action.

Senators Tracee Gillen and Doug Dvorak were found in the Student Senate office between 1 and 1:30 a.m. March 12 with a small amount of alcohol in their possession.

When questioned by public safety officers, they reported that they were "talking and lost track of time." They were not caught drinking but investigating officers found empty beer cans in a waste paper basket.

Gillen and Dvorak received a reprimand from the officers but no charges were pressed. The alcohol was confiscated and the case referred to the Student Activities Office.

"An officer uses his own discretion when dealing with these cases on whether or not to charge formally for possession of alcohol. This case was handled under the college code," said Kevin King, public safety chief.

The Student Conduct Committee, scheduled to meet early next week, will hear the case and pass on a recommendation for either a warning or disciplinary action to Donn Stanbury, vice president of student affairs.

"I think that public safety handled the case well. I don't think that the officer thought it was serious enough to file an incident report," said Stanbury.

Gillen and Dvorak have been suspended from Senate activities pending the outcome of the meeting.

"They are being treated just as any student would, they are not receiving special consideration because they are senators," Stanbury said.

The Student Conduct Committee, which consists of five members, informs the students of the charges against them and hears their positions before handing down any recommendations.

Although unsure of the action that will be recommended by the committee, Stanbury said that Gillen and Dvorak face anything from a warning to a probation.

Possible disciplinary actions that the committee can recommend include:

- a reprimand which admonishes the student for his behavior.
- a warning which alerts the student that the college has been informed of his behavior and that any further violation of the student conduct code could result in either probation, suspension or dismissal depending upon the incident.

• probation during which the student's behavior is monitored by the college to determine his future attendance at the college. Probation terms may be specified according to the intent of the disciplinary action. Depending upon the incident, further violations may result in suspension or dismissal.

• suspension which bars the individual's attendance from the college for a specific length of time. Length of the suspension shall be determined by the intent of the disciplinary action.

• dismissal which expels the student from the school. Once dismissed the student will not be allowed to return. This decision can only be made by the president of the college upon recommendation from the student conduct committee.

"They can get anything from a warning to a probation. It is all recommended and handed down to me," said Stanbury.

Student Senate refused to comment on the issue.

Gravel third candidate in trustee race

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN
A third student has filed as a candidate in the race for student trustee.

Denis Gravel, a liberal arts major, filed Friday qualifying him as the third candidate. Gravel is running against Holly Kuder, a business administration major and incumbent John Makowski.

Gravel said he thinks Makowski has done a good job but has failed to talk with students and fully represent their interests. "How the heck can he say he knows what the student's interests are if he doesn't get out and get some ideas," said Gravel.

Regular outings around the campus and attempts to meet with students is one promise made by Gravel as a solution to the problem.

"I think if you spend just one hour a day of your free time you can get some ideas and I think the Harbinger has a role in stressing the importance the student trustee has," said Gravel.

The most important issue in this campaign is student tuition and the threat of an increase. Gravel pointed out he opposed a tuition increase unless "it is definitely necessary and said a one dollar increase would be reasonable.

"If the students are going to receive a quality education from intelligent instructors they're going to have to pay for it," said Gravel.

Another problem that Gravel said he would deal with is the lack of sufficient drainage on campus walkways. After rainstorms, and specifically during the thawing season,

"Anybody who has ever walked out there can tell you how bad it can get said Gravel. "The problem might be solved with some improved landscaping."

Along with these issues Gravel acknowledged that student apathy is also a problem. "I don't think that problem will ever be solved unless something dramatic happens," said Gravel.

While saying there wasn't much people could do to fix the problem, Gravel believes the quality of entertainment offered by student activities this semester was impressive and must remain high.

Gravel said he is confident that he could provide sound leadership and a knowledgeable of local government. Gravel added that success in that position would require a smooth transition and stressed he would like to see a large voter turnout even if students don't vote for him.

Perry resigns, moves to Kankakee Community College

Dr. James D. Perry, vice president of administrative services and treasurer, resigned from his position at Harper to accept a position at Kankakee Community College.

Perry accepted the position of vice president in charge of business and personnel at Kankakee.

"It's basically the same job that I have here but with the added responsibility of personnel," said Perry, a three Harper administrator. Perry accepted the job on the basis of having more responsibility and being able to move to a smaller community. He will be involved with developmental work at Kankakee, a college still in the growing process.

"They are in the growing process and I have been through that several times before. I feel that I can help in developing new policies," said Perry, who leaves Harper with no regrets.

Harper is an excellent institution and I've made a lot of good friends within and outside the college. I'm sure that I will miss Harper but this is a new challenge.

Perry turned in his letter of resignation March 17 with the official announcement of the resignation being made at the March 26 Board of Trustees meeting.

He will begin at Kankakee May 18. College officials are advertising the position now.

Lounge area—defense against student apathy

There is no doubt that student apathy is present on every campus. The only logical defense is not constantly harping on the subject or bombarding students with too many activities.

It is simply providing students with a comfortable place to "hang out."

What Harper currently terms as it's student lounge is actually no more than a glam, airy room that swallows students. It seems that where other colleges took into consideration students wishes for a lounge area, Harper overlooked them.

Other colleges at least provide students with comfortable furniture, if not television and game rooms.

Now to some comfortable furniture may seem a trivial matter in combating student apathy but it may be the first obstacle to overcome.

Instead of the hard chairs and detestable tables that Harper now provides, soft inviting furniture could be provided.

If students had a place to go where they would not be intimidated by the size of the room and left with backaches and muscle spasms from the furniture, they might possibly spend more time on campus. And if they did spend more time on campus they would become exposed to more student activities.

Therefore, students will not only have a comfortable social scene in which to gather but their interest in campus activities may be raised.

Another advantage in providing a student lounge is that senators and other student leaders would have a logical place to go to gather much needed student input.

True, Harper doesn't have room for a television lounge or game room but an obvious solution is a few readjustments in the fireplace area of Bldg. A.

It would still be located in the student center but in an area more conducive to social activity. Students would feel more comfortable in a smaller setting and make it the hub of activity.

The root of student apathy is not an uncaring attitude on the student's behalf, but a feeling of not being cared for.

Kutler denies statements in March 26 Harbinger

To the Editor:

Running for a highly regarded position, like that of a student trustee, entails being entirely receptive to those needs of the student body and of which I had the misfortune of discovering a readiness for combat.

Why is there an obviously great need for "controversy" to be the key element before a news story may be termed "interesting or in 'good journalistic style'?"

At least that was evidently the view of Mr. Botterman, who's both biases and definition of information was prevalent in his article of March 26, "Kutler challenges Malukowski for trustee seat." And being that it is highly unlikely that a newspaper ever retracts such fallacies, it was imperative that I immediately clear this up.

I was greatly angered by this supposed charge that I had made towards John Malukowski as buying votes through the purchasing of beer. Nothing of that sort originated out of my mouth, and so I strongly suggest that Mr. Botterman retract his own thoughts. Nor did I give any reference to these campaigning issues which were worthy of more recognition and thus, being more important. All are very much real, and all three, as well as some others, deserve immediate attention.

From my thoroughly educating experience with the Harbinger, both in the fall and this spring I was supposed to hopefully gain a far better insight to the proper style in which a piece of this sort should be written.

Since it is a news item, it should be treated as such, including the cold bare facts with no opinionated dressings. Declining to challenge this, in ideal of remaining within the boundaries of this format, Mr. Botterman has added his own personal comments, subsequent to relaying my thoughts on the part time faculty situation. A "flaw", as he so inaccurately refers to my proposal on this position, lies in the limited office space on campus which would prevent the establishment of office hours for those part-time faculty.

Once office space is completely maximized, we could then turn to unoccupied classrooms as a means of serving the students. By office hour, I'm not necessarily seeing that as a time to correct exams, prepare lecture materials, etc., but to assist any student in need of some help with the course. Can't a table, two chairs and a well lighted room serve the purpose?

My intentions (through this letter aren't) to better inform the student body concerning my issues, but rather to inform them of being "journalistically aware." You can never be too skeptical, but all the same, there are a lot of good honest writers left.

is Holly E. Kutler

Candidate statements leave student hysterical

To the editor:

I was amazed hysterically at the previously ran article "Kutler Challenges Malukowski for Trustee Seat."

The funny part was not at how the article was written, on the contrary, it was the quotes that left me in laughing tears.

How dare anyone condemn or insinuate anything about another person without personal knowledge or contact

What low morals and gaud one must have to speak liberally on "hear say."

And being a student at Harper I can't feel the major problem for 1981 is student cheating! Professors are not paid to be baby sitters, they are to educate adults! However I don't think group testing is wise besides getting rid of cheaters is like getting rid of Brown Noses!

Sports column leaves something to be desired

I am writing to complain by the poor writing and shoddy journalism of your sports editor, Joe Kost in the March 26 issue. In his article "Chicago Teams - A Professional Gold Mine to Others," Mr. Kost reported that the Chicago Cubs "achieved" Keith Hernandez from the St. Louis Cardinals if Hernandez was indeed with the Cubs he would have been traded. Hernandez was not acquired in the deal completed four months ago. It seems to me that four months is plenty of time to get names straight. Secondly I would like to point out that the names of eight players were misspelled they are: Miguel Dilone-Kost spelling, Dileon Burt Hooton-Kost spelling, Hooser Gossage-Kost spelling, Gossage Terry Forster-Kost spelling, Foster Jorge Orta-Kost spelling, George

Reagan shoves his own tuition aid plan

Washington, D.C. (CPS) -President Ronald Reagan's pledge to help students pay for their college education through a controversial tuition tax credits plan has been put on hold.

Tuition tax credits were missing from the president's first tax package presented to Congress the second week of March. And although Secretary of Treasury Donald Regan promised tax credits will be in the administration's next tax package, to be submitted in either late 1981 or early 1982, some congressional supporters are worried the president may not fulfill his pledge then.

White House probably will withhold support of tax credits until it negotiates with Congress about the size of the credits, and when they might become effective.

Yet there is considerable support now for the idea in Congress, which conceivably could pass a tuition tax credits law proposed in its own. Congress was about to approve a tax credits law in 1978 over the disapproval of then-President Jimmy Carter. Carter believed that tuition tax credits were too inefficient and expensive that he could double the size of which award money directly to students, and still save the treasury money.

Carter's program, called the Middle Income Student Assistance Act, over the tuition tax credit plan, which Carter increased to veto.

Since then, however, President Reagan's proposal unraveling of the Carter aid plan has given congressional support for tax credits a new life. Congress is now considering no fewer than 16 tuition tax credit bills, most of which apply to college as well as elementary and secondary schools.

Basically, the bills give tax paying students or their parents the chance to deduct anywhere from $300 to $1,000 of the amount they pay in tuition each year from their tax payments. Two of the bills allow for cash refunds if a family's total tax bill is less than the amount of the tax credit.

But taking $500 of the 1980-81 median in-state public college tuition of $820 is a lot more significant than taking $500 off the $300 average tuition at private colleges.

"Independent college students pay almost five times as much as public college students," grouches Christine Milliken of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. Tax credits, she adds, "will just exchange the tuition gap between public and independent colleges."

She laments the tuition difference will drain students from private schools, which are already suffering declining enrollments, to cheaper public schools. Indeed, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that, of the $6 billion that would stay in taxpayer's pockets if tuition tax credits were approved, about 60 percent would benefit public college students.

On the other hand, Stanford University President Donald Kenessey predicts that all colleges might "immediately" pay tuition by the same amount as the tax credit upon enactment of the legislation. Supporters assert that public colleges need the credits because higher education is often seen as a "luxury expenditure" by families, who are more apt to defer it when prices and taxes rise, as Seattle University President William J. Sullivan told a panel holding hearings on tuition tax credits in 1978.

substitutes for the direct-payment programs the Reagan administration wants to cut. Jerry Roschowitz of the American Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, argues that the $6 billion tuition tax credits would drain from the treasury will affect other student aid programs "if not by causing actual reductions, then at least by preventing increases."

"That's a fear among Catholic colleges as well," adds Patrick Murphy of the Campaign for Educational Assistance, a group formed to champion tuition tax credits. "But we're insisting that schools get every bit of financial aid and tuition tax credits. There can be no trading off."

Other supporters of tax credits, like Bishop Thomas Kelly of the Council of American Private Education, would hope that enactment of tuition tax credits laws would result in reductions of the overall level of federal assistance to low-income families.

While critics call the plans elitist because those who would benefit most would be in the highest tax brackets, supporters say they can solve the problem by installing "refund clauses" in the bills. The clauses would allow the government to return cash to the taxpayer whose tuition tax credit exceeds the total tax bill.

"We strongly support the refund provision, but it's still not a rich man's bill even with it," swears Frank Monahan of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

Though tuition tax credits would cost the government an estimated $6 billion in lost tax revenues - compared to the $2 billion in direct state costs of $2 billion now, and $500 in 1983 if they are often perceived as

Physical coordination and a little common sense best defense

Even with commercial protection devices such as alarms, sprays and whistles, the best protection against attack is quick thinking and common sense.

by KARIN J. JOHNSON
In early September of 1980, there was an attempted rape in Harper's parking lot. The girl escaped unharmed due to quick thinking, but how many women are really prepared to fend off an attacker?

Irvana Wilks and Ernie Hauser held a self-defense class the first eight weeks of this semester to teach women how to defend themselves. If all goes as planned, they will be holding more sessions in the fall. The class part of the women's program is a non-credit course.

Hauser, a fourth-degree black belt has been teaching Judo and self-defense at the Des Plaines YMCA for 20 years. Wilks a first-degree black belt, has been his assistant for the last ten years.

"We got involved with teaching at Harper because I had heard a lot of good things about the women's program. I called Rena Trevor and asked her if she was interested in having a self-defense class," Wilks said. Trevor liked the idea and the class was held on Saturday mornings for about two hours.

"When teaching a self-defense class," Wilks said,

"you have to teach basic things at first, because it's a scary thing in the beginning. It's very easy to scare people at the first session. Women don't like to hurt people, so you can't ask them to fight away."

So for the first few sessions, Wilks and Hauser would teach them the basics. "We teach the women situations where they can be caught off guard very easily like accepting rides from strangers or even dating someone they don't really know for the first time."

"We teach him to identify weapons that they feel comfortable with, maybe a letter opener or a small can opener kept on their key chain," Wilks said. "These are weapons that will not maim the attacker for life, but will give the woman an opportunity to get away."

"One weapon Wilks doesn't like to see women use, though, is a gun. "Women should not choose any weapon that they are not willing to use. No weapon is going to work unless they're absolutely committed to it. A gun can be taken away from a woman so fast, especially if she looks like she's a little hesitant to use it. And if she did use it and killed someone, then she would have to be tried."

Boy that scares me," Wilks said.

So the self-defense class deals with defending themselves with what they have. They learn strikes and kicks and counter-attacks. They learn the vulnerable areas: how to hit the face, neck, throat, groin. How to strike the arm so it'll hurt, etc. And once they learn the simpler movements and techniques, they learn the more involved combination type escapes.

"Self-defense is a labor of love for me," Wilks said. "It's important for me to be able to share the things I've learned, with others. If I can help, then I feel good."

"But if you're going to take a self-defense course, you have to be willing to hurt someone. Women in the class tell us that they practiced at home with their husbands, and they couldn't get out of say, a wrist hold. The reason for this is the lack of surprise. The guy knows exactly what's going to happen, so he's holding on," Wilks said.

"Don't wait till the choke is on. Surprise is the key element because a guy doesn't think the woman will attack him back."

Lucas devotes life to arts of teaching and learning

Teaching and learning have dominated the life of Dr. James Lucas, part-time teacher at Harper.

Lucas has five degrees, encompassing law, literature and religion. He is also a member of three bars, the U. S. Supreme Court, the U. S. Court of Military Appeals and the Ohio Supreme Court.

He came to teaching in a round about way.

"I went away from Canton, Ohio, at the age of 17 to Howard University where I spent two years. Then I went into military service, after which I went to Boston University and completed my A. B.

"I always wanted to be a teacher and went to law school because at that time, bluntly stated, because of race, there was nothing open for me."

After Lucas received his law degree, he practiced law in Columbus, Ohio, until an opening arose at Whitcomb in Springfield, Ohio, to teach English.

"This had been my aim all along," said Lucas.

"I began teaching English and Humanities on a law degree in order to become an accredited English teacher, however, it was necessary to get the actual degree in

English

Lucas taught for three years before he started working for his English degree at the University of Chicago.

"I was granted a Martin Luther fellowship by the United Lutheran Church of America to begin study toward an ultimate Ph.D. The three years of teaching was kind of an apprenticeship and I did well enough for them to give me the money to go on.

Since the field Lucas chose involved literature and religion, he had to have classes in both areas.

"I was working in a cross disciplinary between theology and literature showing the religious segment of modern British and American literature, so I had to take a second M.A. in the divinity school

"It took six years to get that M.A. in theology and literature which required you to do entire theological curriculum in addition to the work in modern literature in relationship to theology. I had to do pupil supply work and was sent for many of those picturesque places in Ohio.

"I began my teaching career in Wilbur Wright College in Chicago and soon thereafter became one of the first teachers at Harper in English and have taught on a part-time basis here some 14 years.

The biggest change in students since he first started teaching, said Lucas, is in their attitudes.

"Students over the years have tended to become more conservative but less academically motivated. The rise of the drug culture in connection with the related musical development has brought a confrontation between the traditional values of academia and those represented by such people as the immensely influential Steve Dahl.

The challenge to the teacher today is to be able to relate the traditional values upon which any culture must rest to the values of our young people

Disc jockeys-a class totally unto themselves

What inspires one to be a disc jockey? Is it some mental deviation that Sigmund Freud would explain as a deep rooted problem stemming from childhood? Or is it some form of schizophrenia that occurs when one dons a pair of broad-phones?

For the past 8 months, I have been exposed to the world of radio and its complexities and during this time have learned what is meant by the term, disc jockey. The life of the common day jock is misinterpreted and to rectify this situation, I have composed a list. This list contains a sampling of the basic stereotypical jocks.

The first type of D.J. is the one you always hear when making those song trips with Mom, Dad, the kids, and the dog to Plano, Illinois.

Curt Ackman

...on music

That's right, the over-eager, always enthusiastic air personality or what I'll term as the "Man from Glad" jock. This class is so concerned with portraying an image, he Jones right that he does have a personality outside of the one he portrays on the air.

Our second form of life is the "laced-out being" who spends his free time listening to East Indian music while reciting his mantra "Inoemum."

The third form is the "Damn glad to meet ya, have a beer and take your shoes off" prole. This is the type of jock that talks to you like he's your second cousin, if he were to be cast on T.V. he would be Floyd on the Andy Griffith Show.

Our fourth and final form is the "I scrape dead rabbits from the side of the road" jock. This is the type of air personality you cannot listen to while eating lunch and especially if you eat cafeteria food.

You ask "Well, what's wrong with that, I listen to some of these jocks all the time." My only reply is if one of these forms is their real personality, fine, but if they are a product of marketing, forget it. You are only conditioning phoniness.

As a jock at a local station, I have just invoked the "Beal Me" image. It's really simple, all you do is conduct yourself like you would to your peers, well maybe not that obvious, it's not the greatest advertising gimmick, but at least it's honest.

When people get into the world of radio they think they're only footsteps away at Walkman Jack's fame. Once again, another misconception.

Here are some guidelines you should follow before even considering going into the radio industry.

1) There are only about 1,000 people who make it big in the nation (that's management and engineers included).

2) As a small time jock, the pay is lousy, you're overworked, and not appreciated.

3) Yes, there are certain formats you have to follow and songs you have to play. If you have no taste in music you could fair well in radio.

4) Besides all the other things you are accountable for, you can always use your excess free parking in "fun" activities. These include transmitter readings, ripping UPI wire copy, weather forecasts and playing public service programs.

Not such glamorous facts, is it worth it? Yes, think about it and if this falls through I hear there's a spot to take over Ray Barret's job and maybe.

Women's track fares well in first meet

by JOE KOST
 The Harper women's track and field team fared well last week at the Wheaton Open, placing 13 separate times in the events.

Susan Kunesb placed well for the Hawks in three separate events along with Karen Stenerson and Sandy Parks. Kunesb finished second in the mile run with a time of 5:34.4, third in the 800 yard run, 2:42.96, and second on the mile relay team.

The mile relay consists of Kunesb, Stenerson, Parks and Beth Reed. The team finished with a time of 4:42.7 for the event.

Parks finished second in the 440 yard run, 1:44.3, while Stenerson finished third in the 100 meter high hurdles, 20.63. Stenerson's time was hurt by a fall during the run but she came back to have a great finish.

Harper swept the 200 meter dash by taking first, second and third places. Parks finished first, 28.96, Stenerson came in second, 29.99, and Reed grabbed third place, 30.00.

All of Harper's track events were school records.

In the field events Harper had five places, two of those by Tammi Orzeak.

Orzeak placed first in the discus with a throw of 102.7'. Candace Rak placed second in the discus with a measurement of 101.23'.

Orzeak also placed third in the shot put with a throw of 30.4'.

In the high jump Sue Muehler took second place leaping 5'0" and Lisa Hoekstra took fourth place 4'10".

Harper set a school record on the javin throw when Judy Abernathy had a throw of 70.3'.

Some of the other junior colleges that Harper competed against were Trilon, DuPage and Joliet as an independent school.

"This meet has given us a base to work from," said coach Renee Zeiler. "Right now we all know where we're at and what we have to strive for. This meet has made everyone more confident."

The biggest surprise on the squad was Susan Kunesb, according to Zeiler. "Kunesb demonstrated that she is really a tough competitor and a very exciting runner," said Zeiler. "In all of her races Susan was behind and had to pass a girl to place where she did."

Kunesb, who is in her first year of track, had been a runner for a long time on her own time.

"I've never been in track before but I've done running on my own during the summer and things like that," said Kunesb.

"I didn't know what to expect," added Kunesb. "Some girls blew me away but that is what makes me want to work harder."

"I'd really like to go to nationals so that is what I'm trying for. Once I get that then I'll just keep on trying to improve myself."

The women's track and field team will compete Saturday, April 4, at the North Park Relays.

"This will be a fun meet because it will be all relays and those are fun," Zeiler said.

Baseball road trip: very successful

The Harper Hawks men's baseball team started their season off with a road trip to down state Illinois to play five different schools. The Hawks returned with a 6-3-1 record and are right now on a three game winning streak.

Harper beat Parkland in their first game, 7-1, but tied in the second game, 1-1. That game was called off due to darkness.

Harper then lost to Southeastern 2-0, but beat them in the second game, 14-10.

Harper beat Logan in the first game 7-2, but was shut out in the second game, 0-1.

Harper then lost to Paducah 5-7, but turned around to beat them, 4-1.

Harper took two games from Danville 7-4, 6-2, to close out their road trip.

Harper will play tonight, Thursday, April 1, at home against Waubondsee.

Softball looks to freshman and N4C title

by JOE KOST
SPORTS EDITOR
This year's women's softball team has only five returning sophomores from last year's squad, but still expects to finish in the top of the N4C conference.

"We've only got five returning sophomores this season but this year's freshmen look like they'll be a good nucleus for a good team this year," said head coach Lynn Hitchcock. Harper lost two of their top players to four year schools last season. Pat Tarvid, an all-conference pitcher for the Hawks, is now attending Bradley on an academic scholarship. Betty Arsdson is attending Kansas and was also an all-conference player. Harper will be picking up an additional 12 freshmen on the squad this year.

First base this year will be run by freshmen Kathy Czarnecki and Cheryl O'Hara. Czarnecki is one of the best two lefties and possesses one of the team's best psychological edges for the game. O'Hara is one with an injury at the time O'Hara suffered the injury when she was participating on the Harper Women's basketball team in the state finals.

At second base Harper will be playing Marce Grimm and Pam Meyer. Grimm suffered an early season injury in her shoulder but should be back in top form for the season opener. Meyer, along with playing second base, is one of the top contenders to be a relief pitcher on the team.

Playing the short stop position for the Hawks this year will be Lean Uhler and sophomore Sue Goedke.

Uhler, out of Schaumburg high school, is one of the teams best hitters and is expected to be the lead off batter for the Hawks. Uhler suffered an early season pulled muscle but is expected back in full strength by the start of playing. The other short stop on the squad is Goedke. Goedke is very strong at the position and she helps out the infield greatly. Goedke is one of the players on the team that will go out of her way to help another player no matter how much of her own time it takes according to Hitchcock.

Tracy Malaise and Mary Ann Larsen are the two players that will be seeing action at the third base position this season. Malaise played the position several years ago and is now trying to sharpen up the position. Larsen is a tough player according to Hitchcock and should be a great asset to the team once she gets into the feel of playing.

Taking over the catcher position this year once again is Debbie Dika, an all-conference player from last year's squad. Dika is a strong catcher and also a strong leader on the team. She is a very strong and rugged player as well as being on top of things and knowing what is going on at all times. Hitchcock describes her as being "the quarterback of the team with a strong will, desire, aggressive, determined, and gets done exactly what needs to be done in a situation."

Last year Dika hit .416 with one strike out in 41 trips to the plate. Dika also had two triples, one home run, 12 walks and eight stolen bases for Harper last year.

Katie Paull will be one of the Hawks top pitchers this season. "Katie will be the nucleus of our pitching staff this season," said Hitchcock. "She has a lot of talent that hasn't even been touched on yet."

"It may take time but she has improved a great deal since the first day of practice," added Hitchcock.

Moyers is another player that Hitchcock will be looking for strong pitching this year.

"Pam uses a windmill style of pitch and has great potential if she would just put her mind toward the job," added Hitchcock.

In the outfield positions Harper has Viv Wiedner, Janice Schimmel and Megan Gacy, all sophomores.

Teri Bauer is one of the only freshmen that will be playing the outfield position. Wiedner will be one of the leaders in the outfield with her experience and determination. Last year Wiedner batted .250 for the Hawks.

Coach Hitchcock is looking for a strong bot from Schimmel. She is the other of the teams two left handed hitters and also has one of the strongest swings on the team.

Gacy played first base last year and Hitchcock is looking for good defense and a strong bat from her.

Bauer is one of the fastest players on the team and Hitchcock will be using her for a lot of stolen bases.

"Terri is the type of girl that will go after a ball no matter where it is," said Hitchcock. "She takes her job seriously and she is a smart, level headed player."

Joyce Lynn Jones had made constant "improvement" since the beginning of practices but she was hampered by a shoulder injury that may continue to hurt her into the season.

Cludy Lecher is also improving as an infielder and her batting has also started to improve for the Hawks.

Kathy Milligan is one of the pitchers that Hitchcock will be looking for to pull the Hawks along this year.

"Kathy has a very strong pitch and right now we are developing her speed," comments Hitchcock. "She practices a lot and she hasn't given up at all. We need her to round out our pitching crew."

"We hope to finish high in the conference this season," said Hitchcock.

The first home softball game will be on Friday, April 3, when Harper will take on Wright in a N4C conference contest.

I just want to bow. That's all be reserved for the elderly people of our society, or for boys and girls on dates, or for anyone that can't compete in any other type of event. But bowling is a very competitive sport. In fact probably one of the only sports in which you meet your opponent head on.

Some sports meet head on on a court or field or some other type of athletic course but most sports have a place that you can go to be with your team in bowling there is no such place. There are no dugouts, benches or sides of a field to call your own.

You are assigned to a lane along with your opponent and that is where you compete from. It's not too far to stand there at a bowling lane in the eighth frame with your opponent's name to you, knowing that no matter what you try to do, you can't win. Many athletes have never had to face this type of defeat but those that have know that it can't hurt.

Bowling has become one of the most popular sports in the country since the past few years and any bowler knows why too. Because it's fun. If it doesn't cost too much and you can enjoy this sport any day of the year, in any type of weather, with any of your friends. Just make sure that you don't lose. It's so embarrassing.

And now that all leagues must mean come to an end, the fun can really start. I don't expect to win state and I don't expect to be embarrassed either. I just want to bowl. That's all.

McGrath denounces safety's gun request

by MIKE BAMBACH
Should Public Safety officers carry guns? Yes, say Public Safety officers, no, says Harper president James McGrath.

"They're public safety officers and I don't see any reason why public safety officers should have weapons," McGrath said.

"We probably shouldn't," said officer Tom Moers. "If we didn't direct traffic, stop cars, make bank runs, handle mentally deranged people, possible rapists, break up fights, or answer burglar calls. What if somebody robbed the Coast of Arms Restaurant (across from Harper on Knoxville Rd.) and decided to come over here and coast their money? What do we say? "Please drop your guns, you're under arrest!"

Former Harper president Robert Labl set precedent by disallowing Public Safety officers to carry guns in 1971. In a letter to the officers requesting guns, Labl said, "I am not convinced by the facts that arming the public safety officers is justified at this time. I deny request and will recommend to the Board of Trustees that we continue the practice of not arming."

McGrath agrees, but perhaps for different reasons. "I don't see them as law enforcement people," he said. "If we need law enforcement we'll bring in the Palatine police."

"I think the major responsibility of Public Safety is, on weekends, they should make sure the doors are locked, that the rooms are cleaned out by 10 p.m., that parking regulations, especially in the handicap lots are enforced, and to provide assistance when needed. But, as one officer who withheld anonymity said: "The response time of the Palatine force isn't that bad. It's just then when you have to look for an individual building, it could cut response time. And we could need back-up right then."

McGrath has a strong argument against arming Public Safety.

"Quite honestly, I feel that weapons breed weapons, and violence breeds violence." Said Moers. "I can understand that McGrath is concerned about an incident or what the feeling of students might be. But why does Harper carry fire insurance? When was the last time there was a fire at Harper? So drop fire insurance, no way, they wouldn't think of that. It's the same for us. We want to insure our lives."

"My feeling is that we don't have violent crimes on campus," McGrath said. And Moers half agrees, but adds, "Do you know how many potential run-ins with armed cars we've had this year? Two, and both times the person with the gun didn't realize we were armed."

Moers also said that McGrath has told Public Safety to "back off" if a robbery, rape, or other crime was in progress. "What's your reaction to me if I see you getting mugged and say, 'Sorry but I can't help you.' Our president told us to back off."

Such a statement would be a direct contradiction to the Illinois Revised Statutes which state: "Members of the security department have all powers possessed by policemen in the cities, and sheriffs in the counties."

The Staff Policy and Manual says that Public Safety officers will "Protect students, faculty, staff, citizens, and visitors from harm and danger."

But McGrath denies ever telling Public Safety to "back-off" of a serious incident. "I told them not to put their lives in danger. I told them to act like any citizen would."

Again, Moers disagrees with McGrath's comments. "I'm going to get killed because of him." Moers said "If I have to save my life by running away when his daughter is being raped, I guess I have to."

Neither McGrath nor the officers in Public Safety who have shown an interest in carrying guns, is satisfied with the other's arguments. Said McGrath, "I really feel if they think they need weapons, they should resign. It's not like somebody asked them to take the job under false pretenses."

Moers, who has been a detective/patrolman for the Cook County sheriff's department for 3 years, said that guns "may mean I might not get killed or it may mean you might not get killed."

"Polls"

Voting booths for this year's Student Trustee election will be located near the student lounge in Bldg. A and by Bldg. 2143. The polls will be opened from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

A student activity card for the spring semester is the only requirement to vote.

Vote today Candidates face off for student seat

Today, Thursday, is the final day for Harper students to elect one of three candidates as the student representative to the Board of Trustees.

The candidates are: Holly Kutler, a business administration major; Denis Gravel, a liberal arts major; and incumbent John Malkowski, an engineering major.

During separate interviews with the Harbinger, the candidates gave their views on three issues which surfaced during the campaign. The issues are: the threat of a tuition increase, the possibility budget cuts, and improving campus landscaping. The following are the brief position replies from each candidate.

John Malkowski

Tuition: "Last year I was able to convince the board that a $1.00 increase was enough instead of the $2.00 increase they sought. If an increase should come, it should be gradual and I think a $1.00 increase is enough."

Budget: "In 1977 there was a referendum and the budget was frozen everywhere. Today, a cut anywhere is impossible; we're not worried about where to cut money but where to get it from."

Landscaping: "A $135,000 contract has been approved by the school to improve the parking lots and campus roadways."

Denis Gravel

Tuition: "Specifically the board would have to prove to me that the student-teacher ratio is unbalanced and that equipment needed, might be cut. If they could prove an increase to be necessary, I would vote for it but I don't want one."

Budget: "We would have to cut money from wasteful areas but I don't think we can cut the quality of student activities."

Landscaping: "Some kind of landscaping improvement has to be done. Harper should investigate the problems and consult some experts to recommend some action."

Holly Kutler

Tuition: "There is always the possibility of an increase but the only talk now is mention of an increase in laboratory fees. I would think an increase is unavoidable, it's not too often you hear of prices going down. I think if we want a top-quality education we will have to pay for it."

Budget: "I can't see cutting the money from anything other than student activities and other luxury items."

Landscaping: "The problem is real and has to be taken care of. We're going to have to think of ways to improve the landscaping. I hear students complain of poor lighting in the parking lots. I think the money to improve the landscaping should come from the state."

Harbinger endorses Gravel as trustee

It is reassuring to know that three concerned students are seeking the office of Student Trustee. However, as in all races, only one can fill the position.

While incumbent John Malkowski has performed to the best of his ability, it is our opinion that challenger Dennis Gravel embodies the drive and enthusiasm essential to an effective leader.

In our opinion Malkowski had failed to fully achieve his main objective: communicating what the students want to the Board of Trustees.

Beginning his term full of idealism, Malkowski's enthusiasm has dissipated.

Because Gravel has taken an innovative, creative approach to the job, the Harbinger confidently endorses his campaign.

Students need a new voice and ideology to properly represent them. With a full understanding of the responsibilities of the Board of Trustees, Gravel will be most effective in the Student Trustee seat.

MALKOWSKI'S TIME HAS RUN OUT

Student record law case still in court

By Susan Calhoun (CPS)—The days of private student records may be numbered, according to a variety of privacy law experts. A number of the experts say that the immense political pressure now building to get around laws protecting the privacy of student records may succeed despite the opposition of administrators who keep the records, and students themselves.

Most of the pressure comes from the Selective Service System (SSS), which has expressed interest in getting lists of men who have (and have not) complied with military registration laws. The SSS, sworn government lawyer Henry Williams, "has no intention" of requesting information from schools to help locate draft registration dodgers. But the SSS has long made it known it might ask schools to cooperate with it later on. The SSS' ambiguity has pushed many administrators to research the legality of such a request, if it ever made.

Most contend student records are protected by the Buckley Amendment of the Privacy Act of 1974.

"The Privacy Act doesn't apply to colleges," Williams flatly asserts. "And if a college refused us information, it couldn't stand on the Buckley Amendment."

"Unfortunately, the Buckley Amendment wouldn't be very helpful in this situation," agrees privacy expert Trudy Hayden, formerly of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). "If the Selective Service were to be refused by colleges all Congress needs to do is pass a congressional statute overriding Buckley, and the information will have to be given out."

The amendment makes "directory information" on a student—name, address, birth date and place, phone number, and major field of study—public knowledge. The law, however, gives a student the chance to object to having his or her records made public. Upon objection, the school is prohibited from distributing the information.

State laws protecting student records are already under frontal assault in California and Maryland.

The California General Assembly is now considering a bill mandating school's permission to make student records available to military recruiters.

Marie Greich aide to state Sen John Schmitz, who wrote the bill, says the measure was designed to alleviate "problems" recruiters have in getting information to students about military careers.

"This could set a dangerous precedent of cooperation," warns Beth Meador, an ACLU lobbyist in Sacramento. She freezes "his cooperation among government agencies to exchange information about individuals."

Across the country, a Maryland couple has gotten a bill introduced in their state legislature that would allow parents to see their children's "confidential" records as well as directory information.

Currently Maryland law and the Buckley Amendment bar disclosure of student transcripts in anyone but school authorities, but Beverly and Jerome Kamchi contend the laws violate their rights as parents of a dependent child.

"Without access to my son's grades, I do not have the option of counseling him and encouraging him," Jerome Kamchi says. His son, Mark, has refused to tell his parents his grades since he entered the University of Maryland two years ago.

The ACLU's John Roemer doesn't see the Kamchi case as very important, however. He observes the state already allows scholarship sponsors to see grades.

"I would suspect they could require release of transcripts to parents under that same idea," Roemer says. "But I wouldn't call this an invasion of students' rights offbase."

Neither Roemer or John Shaddock of the ACLU's national office know of other legal challenges to privacy laws, but they say that the looming presence of the Selective Service has spread the issue around the country.

"Student governments in Illinois and Nevada, for example, have passed resolutions asking administrators not to allow the Selective Service access to student records. Administrators at places as diverse as Stanford and the College of Wooster in Ohio have already announced they would not cooperate with the SSS unless directed by law.

Over 200 students at the University of California-Santa Barbara recently marched to their administration building, demanding security of directory information. At California-Riverside, a student government official met with campus officials asking for similar assurances of privacy.

Nevertheless, privacy expert Hayden warns students have "little redress" if personal information were released, even over their objections.

The Buckley Amendment, she explains, applies only to schools receiving federal funds, and threatens a school with a cutoff of funds if it violates the privacy law. But as a practical matter, she says, the government would be reluctant to cut a college off from federal funds "for a minor violation like that which would be."

To date, she adds, no schools have been sanctioned in any way for violating the privacy law.

California's Palo Alto school district was the first in the nation to refuse the military access to student records in July, 1979. The number of schools following Palo Alto's lead prompted Congress to revise a military authorization bill last fall to include language "urging" administrators to cooperate with recruiters.

For the moment, Hayden counsels students can only be "vigilant." A student should make sure his school publishes directory information guidelines, and gives him a chance to register objections.

Vacation

While most Harper students will be spending their spring vacations basking in the warm sun of Florida or catching the sights of Europe, several members of Catholic Campus Ministry Club will be spending their vacations in the poverty stricken Appalachian mountains in Ravenna, Kentucky.

CCM's President, Lorraine Neva, Vice President, Linda Webber, Adressne Geary, Dave Sager, Barb Benlic and sisters Peggy Brennan and Julie Flynn will be staying at St. Elizabeth's Church and Mission during their week long stay and work on the Apalachian project.

They plan to work on various projects such as painting the Mission Churches, digging ditches to prevent flooding around some of the centers, and working in a used clothing center.

Art Exhibit

Harper students may submit original art work thru Tuesday, April 14. Limit of two pieces from each area. Drawing, painting, design, sculpture, print-making, photo, ceramics, etc.

Work should be delivered in Bldg. C215 or the Art and Music office, Bldg. P211.

Each piece must have an entry tag attached to the back. Entry tags are available in P211 or C215.

Work will be selected for the exhibit by the Art faculty. The Student Exhibit and Fine Arts Festival will be held April 24-May 8.

Summer intern program

Applications and requirement information are available in Office of Financial Aid, Room A342.

Deadline date for applications is April 27, 1981.

Heart Answers

WHAT IS CHOLESTEROL?

Cholesterol is a fatty substance found in animal tissue. Primary sources of cholesterol in the American diet are fatty meats, egg yolks, and whole milk dairy products. Cholesterol is essential for certain body processes, but the amount the body manufactures is sufficient for these needs. High levels of cholesterol in the bloodstream are associated with a higher risk of heart disease and stroke. This risk can be reduced by adopting an eating pattern moderate in cholesterol-containing foods and saturated (animal) fats which can raise the cholesterol level in the blood. Contact your local American Heart Association for more information.

THERE'S ONLY ONE PLACE TO GET $9,200 FOR COLLEGE IN JUST TWO YEARS.

Soon you'll have your associate's degree. And if you're thinking of continuing your education, you know just how expensive that will be.

But consider the Army. In the Army, if you participate in the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), you can accumulate $9,200 for college in just two years.

That's significant for two reasons. Obviously, that's a lot of money. But what you may not have realized is that two years is the shortest military enlistment available. Only the Army can offer you both.

VEAP is a great way to make it on your own. Since it's not a loan, you won't need a co-signer or collateral. And you'll never have to worry about making payments after graduation.

It's strictly a savings program, and the money is all yours for school.

VEAP is surprisingly simple. If you save between $25 and $100 each month while you're in the Army, the government will match your savings two-for-one. And, on top of that, you might even qualify for the exclusive Army educational bonus of $2,000.

And remember, in just two years, you'll be back in school.

Shooting triggers presidential respect

It had to come down to this. I had not particularly been overladen with joy when Ron Reagan was elected our president. I had not voted for him (nor did I vote for Jimmy Carter) and I had been a little apprehensive about Reagan's desire for a strong military, probably because I'm only 19. And being skeptical of big business and the oil companies, as one might expect of a 19-year-old, I wasn't particularly certain that this was the man that this country needed at our president.

All that changed rather unexpectedly, last Monday afternoon. While "shooting the breeze" (more war stories actually) with friends that afternoon, word came to us via a telephone call that Reagan had been shot. I raced to the nearest TV in shock. On the radio I heard that Jim Brady, Reagan's press secretary, Kevin McCarthy, a Secret Service agent, and Jim Deliahanke, a local police officer, had been shot but Reagan had escaped unharmed.

Mike Bambach

An hour later, I heard that he HAD been shot and the stag from a .22-caliber handgun had missed his heart by only inches. Then I heard Secretary of State Alexander Haig step in front of a White House microphone and announce,

"I'm in charge of the White House." My heart stopped. Where was George Bush? Where was Tip O'Neill? Then I heard that our forces around the world were NOT on a special alert. That's good, I thought.

Then I heard Brady was dead. Then I heard he was NOT dead, that he was in critical condition and still undergoing surgery.

Then the shock of what had happened in a span of three hours wore off. Reagan was undergoing surgery, but he would be fine. He even joked to doctors as he went under. "I certainly hope that you gentlemen are Republicans."

I heard that Reagan, unbeknown to him, had been shot in the left lung and that he had walked into George Washington University Hospital under his own power. Then I heard that George Bush was back in Washington. Then I heard that Brady, McCarthy, and Deliahanke had pulled through surgery. Then I heard Reagan had written a note to the doctors after his surgery that read, "On the whole, I'd rather be in Philadelphia." Suddenly, I accepted this man as my president. He was not the billy of foreign policy we made him out to be. He was our president. And somebody shot our president. Damn, nobody shoots our president and gets away with it.

Reagan had been received with all the warmth of John Wayne Gacy at a kiddie party by his friends when he was inaugurated. Now he had been shot, the victim of an extremely deranged and perverse mind (allegedly speaking, of course).

I haven't agreed with Reagan on many of his policies since he took office three months ago. But for the first time last Monday, he became my president.

And it had to come down to this.

Forget the movie - buy soundtrack

If one does not see the movie, they should at least buy the soundtrack. What am I raving and raving about this time? Why, Keith Emerson's venture, the soundtrack to Nighthawks.

The movie stars Sylvester Stallone (Rocky), Billy Dee

Williams (Empire Strikes Back), Persi Khambata (Star Trek, The Movie), and last, but not least, Lindsay Wagner (Bionic Woman).

The musical talent is very impressive, being orchestrated

Curt Ackman

...on music

with the thought of a philharmonic working for perfection, so is Keith Emerson's technological ideal.

It is the technological ideal that proves the soundtrack so innovative, for effect, such unlikely sound sources as rubbing over piano strings with a sponge or blowing over the mouth of a bottle are implemented.

Does our plastic computer era detour from the intricate workings of this album. Not in the very least, the technology and planning behind this album only heighten and enhance the true sound.

Emerson uses a large string of keyboards and computerized music makers to achieve this progressive sound. Even the recording was completed in a unique way. In half-speed all the cuts were fed into the master recording and then altered as speed up.

Emerson is no newcomer to the workings of progressive sounds. He spearheaded the group "The Nice" in 1967, whose rock interpretation of the West Side Story cut "America" remains a pop musical monument.

By 1970, Emerson had split from the Nice to work on a venture to work with Carl Palmer and Greg Lake to form Emerson, Lake, and Palmer. When 1972 rolled around, ELP could be found at the top of the musical polls. With arranging expertise at hand, Keith Emerson was ready for a solo venture at putting together a soundtrack.

"Nighthawks" jumps musical barriers and crosses diverse styles to create tension and texture to the film. In short, an album with distinction.

Harper Invitational to be held Saturday

The Harper track teams, both the men and women, will compete in the Harper Invitational this Saturday afternoon at Harper College.

The meet will consist of several teams and will begin at 10 a.m. and should continue in to the late afternoon.

According to women's track coach Benze Zeller, "this will be the meet to show how much improvement has taken place."

Last week the women's track team participated at the North Park Relays and fared well.

Harper improved on the school records that they set the week earlier by topping them again. In the 400 relay, Beth Hood, Karen Stenewen, Susan Muechler and Sandy Parks finished with a time of 2:06.3.

In the field events Harper placed very well. In the high jump Sus Muechler finished with a jump of 5'9", good enough for second place.

In the shot put Tammi Orzalek took second place with a toss of 31 feet while teammate Candace Rak took fourth place throwing for 30 feet.

Orzalek took second place in the discus throw, 96 feet. Rak had a throw of 98 feet, second place in the competition.

Judy Abernathy set a school record in the javelin competition with a throw of 74.6 feet. Sixth place in the competition.

Harper's outstanding talents this weekend in the Harper Invitational will be their relay teams consisting of Beth Hood, Sandy Parks, Karen Stenewen and Susan Kunesch.

Kunesch will also be the Harper hopeful in the distance races if she performs as well as she did at the North Park competition.

Harper should also compete well in the field events with Muechler, Abernathy, Rak and Orzalek.

"We're all looking forward to this meet because it should be a lot of fun," said Zeller.

Harper ball clubs step out winning

The men's baseball team and the women's softball team at Harper have both started their seasons out on the right foot, winning. With a combined record of 21-5-1, both teams look toward the top of the NAC in their own conference.

The Harper men's baseball team, 14-5-1, split a pair of games with Illinois Valley last Monday in their first conference game of the season.

"We should have won two," said head coach Wally Reynolds. Harper lost the first game 2-1 but turned around and took the second, 15-3.

"Right now we're at a point where we are good but aren't superstars and we just can't show up and win a ball game," said Reynolds. "A team like IVCC looks at our record and gets pumped up for a big game. We have to play good everytime. IVCC was probably happy to get a split with us but I know we should have taken both."

In Harper's 15-5 smashing, six RBI's by Ron Laramie and a fourth inning grand slam home run by Bill Moran helped the Hawks out.

The men's baseball squad will play tonight, April 9, at home against Wright College. The game will start at 1:30.

The women's softball team extended their record to 7-0 last Tuesday by topping Thornton 20-5.

Kalle Paul, 7-6, pitched a one hitter and allowed only one earned run in the contest.

"We played very strong," said head coach Lynn Hitchcock. "I was pleased with everyone's playing."

Paul also helped herself out at the plate with a double, triple, and six RBI's. Terri Bauer had a triple, a home run, and seven RBI's in the contest. Debbie Dicks had a double and four RBI's. Sue Goodie had a home run and two RBI's.

The Hawks softball team will play tonight at home against DuPage. That game will start at 4:00.

Bechtold: A study in dedication

by MIKE BAMBACH
It was November, 1968. Lyndon B. Johnson was eight months into his third year as president. Gemini 12, the last manned space flight of the Gemini series and precursor to the Apollo series, was successfully launched on November 11th. And on November 30th, the South Vietnamese troops announced its troops would observe brief cease-fires at Christmas and during Western New Year's holidays.

Roger Bechtold was a 21-year old senior at Southern Illinois University. He had come to SIU to play basketball from Belleville Township High School, where he had been an all-star as a senior. He made the Salukis varsity at a sophomore when SIU went 20-6 and was runner-up in the NCAA Division II championship. He played only sparingly as he led as a junior when the Salukis were 23-7 and again finished runner-up in the Division II tournament. As a senior, Bechtold was a starting spot on an SIU team that would win the National Invitational Tournament after passing a chance to win the original for the first time. The Division II tournament. He would be a key staple in what could only be called a Cinderella season.

"It doesn't seem like it was that long ago," Bechtold says. "I remember everything just like it happened yesterday." "We're unappreciated and just aren't ready. I know it's easy to dwell on the things we're not doing well, because you're concentrating on your weaknesses and trying to improve them. But I'm not sounding a wolf cry. We're just not ready."

SIU coach Jack Hartman. The Salukis opened their 1966-67 season ranked No. 2 in the small college polls behind Kentucky Wesleyan, which had beaten them 54-61 for the Division II championship a year before. "We knew we had an excellent team," Bechtold says. "We had some returning players that were excellent." One of those returnees was Walt Frazer, a junior guard who had red shirted his original junior year because of academic ineligibility. Frazer came to SIU from Atlanta after turning down scholarship offers to Indiana and Kansas.

"I liked the campus, the coaches, and the friendly atmosphere at Southern Illinois," he says. Bechtold started in the backcourt opposite Frazer. "I didn't average that many points, but my main objective in contributing to the team was getting the ball to Frazer," says Bechtold. "We got the ball to him as much as possible."

The other starters for the Salukis were Dick Garrett, a streak-shooting forward; Ralph Johnson, the 6-foot-6 center; and Clarence Smith, a 6-5 forward. The sixth man was Ed Zastrow, who would split time with Bechtold in the backcourt.

The coach was Jack Hartman, a hard-nosed, team-oriented type that stressed discipline. He would leave Southern Illinois in 1971 for Kansas State University after compiling an eight-year 144-64 record. He coached the Salukis to 20 win seasons four times and never had a team under .500.

"He hasn't changed as far as his approach to the game," said Bechtold. "He's a very disciplined coach. He looks for perfection. Take his Kansas team this year (which played havoc with the NCAA West Regional before falling to eventual national runner-up North Carolina at the West Regional last). I think the other teams he beat had better talent on the court, but the discipline, good shot selection, 100 percent defensive effort—that's how they won, and that exemplifies his style of basketball."

It is not complicated what they do on the court, but what they do has to be done a certain way. When we were playing, he would take you out of the ball game if you did those type of things that he doesn't want to see done. He would make it clear what he wanted. So you had a good understanding of your role and what was expected out of you. There was a lot of pressure on you to perform. If you didn't perform well, you found yourself watching the game."

Hartman's biggest concern was the ineligibility of Frazer, who made several little all-American teams as a sophomore. But once Frazer's eligibility was intact, Hartman said of his team: "We have a talented group of players, perhaps as much so as any team previous."

Frazer was the key to the Salukis. "It was hard to get to know him," Bechtold recalls. "He was really a quiet type. He was confident in himself but he wasn't a bragger. He wasn't a (continued on page 3)

Student trustee election influenced

by KEVIN BOTTERMAN
Two of the three candidates in last week's student Trustee election have considered a rematch in response to charges of voter influence on the part of poll watchers.

Dennis Gravel and Holly Kutler, two candidates from the election, said they would like to see the elections held again, but both admit the possibilities are slim that anything will come of the suggestion.

Kutler, the second place finisher in the race, said with the reentry over the election, an election would be the best way to resolve the problem.

The calls for a rematch came after reports from witnesses who asked to remain anonymous that at least two poll watchers told voters which candidate to vote for. The charges went on to add that the poll watchers also asked voters who they had voted for.

Jean Panknin, director of student activities, said that no matter how widespread the cheating was, there were no complaints filed within the 24 hour deadline after the polls closed and the election results remain as is.

"I know the people (the poll watchers), didn't violate the rules intentionally but they did and that could disqualify a number of votes," said Gravel. Gravel said he would like to see the race held over again but said he realizes to do so would be difficult. "There just isn't enough time left in the semester to hold another election."

Kutler also agreed with Gravel that as much as she would like to see the election redone, such a task would be unrealistic.

"I'm all for the idea of an election but it would take too much time to get the advertisement out," she said.

"Another problem would be with the lack of time left in the year. Spring break is next week and then we come back for final exams," she continued.

Kutler said also hopes next year's election will be held in a more professional manner.

"It's a shame that this election has to be used as a stepping stone to better elections," Kutler said.

NIU cuts transfers

Northern Illinois University has placed a limit on the number of transfer applicants that they will accept for the fall 1981 semester.

Currently the university is accepting only qualified transfer students on a space available basis. At this point transfer applications, specifically at the junior level, are turning 53 percent ahead of last year.

Admissions officials were forced to put a limit on applications due to a shortage of faculty and staff. Although they cut off freshmen applications in early March, the college is expecting approximately 500 freshmen this fall.

The majority of transfer students are seeking to enter already oversubscribed fields such as business, computer science, industry and technology and allied health.

Board to continue with law suit

by WENDY WINKELHARE
The Harper Board of Trustees decided to continue its lawsuit filed to recover $828,000 in building damages.

The college filed the lawsuit with Cook County Circuit Court last year to recover $828,000 in damages caused by structural problems in the buildings.

The decision to pursue the suit brought criticism from George Dasher who recently urged the board to drop the suit.

Dasher feels that the suit is a waste of taxpayer's money and said that the money should not be used if the chances for winning are not that good.

However, the college's law firm, Robbins, Schwartz, Nicholas and Lifton Ltd., said that Harper has a "viable" suit.

The major portion of the suit seeks to recover damages for repairs due to structural problems. The problems included falling spandrels and leaky roof on the administration building.

The other portion of the suit asks for consequential economic loss caused by the alleged defects to college property. The Illinois Appellate Courts are split as to this decision because there were no injuries.

A circuit court hearing is set for May 14.

Those named in the suit are Canold, Powell and Scott, of Houston, architectural designers; Fitch-LaRocca Associates, Chicago, supervising architects; and Corbett Construction Company, Des Plaines.

Building A, a late blessing

Often, all that is needed to spark a group into action is an enthusiastic leader.

Fortunately, the Food Service has been blessed with such an individual. In addition to improving the cafeteria menu, the new food service personnel has taken a giant step in reopening the Bldg. A snack shop.

Now instead of making the trek down Algonquin Road for their burgers and fries, shakes and sundaes, students need venture no further than the Bldg. A Lounge.

While they can find a more substantial meal in the main cafeteria, the snack bar promises to be heaven for burgers and fries fanatics.

But perhaps the biggest attraction at the snack bar will be the ice cream confections. While they were always able to pick up an ice cream bar in the main cafeteria, students could not find a sundae or shake anywhere on campus.

The only complaint that can be registered at this time is the fact that the reopening of the snack bar came so late in the year.

But perhaps the food service will once again prove that good things come to those who wait.

Students secure, no need for guns

Dear Editor:

I'm writing this letter in regard to a recent article concerning Public Safety's gun request, written by Mike Bamback.

"Should Public Safety carry guns?" No, says Harper, President James McGrath. "I applaud President McGrath's stand against arming Public Safety. As a student, here at Harper I see no reason why my or any other student's safety would be increased by allowing Public Safety to carry guns. Personally I feel very secure with the way Public Safety is operating now.

I would like to answer one of Public Safety officer Ron Moers' questions concerning "What would be my reaction if I was being mugged and Public Safety was instructed to 'back off'?" Let me tell you I'd be damn glad to see you "Back off!" I'd rather have my wallet stolen than have Public Safety arrive with guns out and say something like "Freeze or we'll shoot." They would probably miss the assailant and hit me

I also must say I coincide with President McGrath's comment "that violence breeds violence and weapons breed weapons." And I certainly don't consider Public Safety a law enforcement unit either.

I would probably feel differently if there was a tremendous increase in violent crimes committed on the campus.

Let me put this question to Ron Moers. Why don't you quit? If you're so obsessed with carrying a gun, go back to work for the Cook County Sheriff's office. It seems to me a person who is happy to work under the current regulations will be more effective than a person like yourself who obviously feels inadequate without a hand gun.

lalker. You just know that he's confident. He was very self-assured of his playing abilities. He would say things to you once in a while and he would just mention it and you respected it and tried to respond. Like if you're not playing well, he'd say "Hey, let's get going" or something like that and you know you better start making a better effort. He was that type of leader. We tried to get him the ball in any clutch situation where we needed a basket and he would respond. It was amazing.

"I think down deep, too, he was apprehensive about the pro. Maybe he had doubts that he could play with the best. We used to sit in the lounge and watch the Celtics on TV and just be amazed by the playing ability of these people. You never think you're that quality. You underestimate your abilities. And I think Walt was like that."

The Salukis opened with a 90-50 win over State College of Iowa and then upset St. Louis University, 80-58, behind Garner's 18 points and Frazier's 14. Johnson held 7-foot center Rich Niemann to 11 points and eight rebounds, as SIU outrebounded the Bills 38-37. "That was the big thing for us," said Hartman afterwards. The Salukis played one of the toughest schedules in the country, especially for a Division II team. It was SIU, after its stunning NIT tournament victory, that amended the NCAA's rule for splitting up Division I and II competition. Before the 1967-68 season, SIU's first in Division I competition, a team had to schedule half its games against major colleges or universities to a part of Division I competition.

This was best pointed out by Time magazine in the February 3rd, 1967 issue: "What is a big college? According to the NCAA, Centenary College in Shreveport, La. is a big college. Centenary has 1,193 students. What is a small college? Southern Illinois University, in Carbondale, Ill., is a small college. It has 25,000 students."

Only after SIU won the NIT did the NCAA amend the rule to include teams that competed in a major college tournament into Division I, or "major college" athletics.

And, ironically, SIU fared well against Division I foes. They upset St. Louis University, which was a contender for the Missouri Valley conference title; they knocked off Louisville (by two points), which was ranked No. 2 in the major college polls behind UCLA; they knocked off Texas Western (now Texas El Paso), which was the defending NCAA national champion, and they shocked the Wichita State Shockers, which won the Missouri Valley title.

Of the Salukis two regular-season losses, one was to Louisville 76-66 in two overtimes, and to Southern Methodist University in the Sun Bowl Christmas tournament. "I can recall that game very well," says Bechtold. "I really wasn't feeling well that night. I didn't say anything about it. I played just horribly - I made turnover mistakes. I lost my starting assignment for some time. Really, it was my mistakes that led to that defeat."

And it was the last defeat SIU would incur for the rest of their Cinderella season. They knocked off Division II nemesis Kentucky Wesleyan 83-51 and 82-46 to clinch the No. 1 ranking in

Values unsettled by philosophy

Since coming to Harper in 1971, Harley Chapman, chairman of the Philosophy Department, has seen several changes in students taking philosophy and religion courses.

"There is a change in attitude. There is more openness to other religions than ten years ago. Cultures are more pluralistic and students are more open to other points of view," he said.

"It is very exciting, he noted, to see students re-thinking their views."

"I enjoy watching students seriously considering alternatives that they never thought of before and struggling to orient themselves to the new channels and possibilities of seeing and doing and living."

"A student takes world religion and for the first time comes away realizing that point of view is not so silly," he said.

"In terms of the world today," Chapman said, "the philosophical and religious picture has changed."

"I can no longer ignore the Buddhists, the Marxists, the Aborigines or any of the so-called primitive people. They are human beings. Their stories and myths say something about what the world is like. I have to acquaint myself with them."

"Not only is there a change in attitude, there is a change in age of students enrolling in college."

"I find more and more older students now than I did years ago. I enjoy older students. They bring life experience which I think is very valuable in philosophy and religion."

"Many are in the stage of life where they are questioning their life and values - breaking out of situations in life in which education has a part."

Nora Norton
 ...Teacher
 ...Feature

"I don't sense any feeling of old and young. Ten years ago there was some of that, but increasingly less and less hostile is seen between the older and younger students," he said.

"Not only is there a change in attitude and a change in age, but a change in the woman's role in philosophy and religion."

"Twenty years ago women were not involved. Often philosophy and religion overlooked what they had to say."

"Today," he said, grabbing a handful of books from his shelf, "there are a number of books by and about women involved in philosophy and religion."

"The President of the American Academy of Religion is a woman."

"Chapman, who was at one time a pastor, admitted that at first he had a struggle with the larger role women were taking."

"My male ego has had to go through some re-thinking," he laughed, then added, "my good ages went out."

"Regardless of the change, Chapman said, he is still excited about teaching."

"I find dialogue between teacher and student very exciting."

"I see teaching as caring. And the way you care is by waking up their minds."

When the gas pumps talk . . .

The other day, I pulled into a Standard Oil gas station to fill up and I saw the strangest thing—a talking gas-pump. Yes, I am sure, and I took advantage of my unusual opportunity and had a little "informal chat" with the pump. Here's how it went.

M: Tell me, in all honesty, is there a gas shortage?

Gas-pump: Mike, to be perfectly frank, I don't even know the meaning of the word shortage. Look at me! You don't see me standing in any line, do you?

M: No, no. So you're saying you are always full then?

Gas-pump: No, but the oil companies are full of gas, that is.

M: Why, in your opinion, are the Arabes billing prices—it seems they're trying to cheat?

Mike Bambach

Gas-pump: Hmmm? I'm sorry Mike, I didn't hear you. Did you say something about a robbery?

M: Well, not exactly. I asked you why you felt the Arabes were increasing gas prices, you know, the Arabes—they're in OPEC, the gov-responsible for the sudden rise in gasoline prices.

Gas-pump: Oh, yes, I know what OPEC is. Oil Pilling by Executives of Chumps, like you, Mike.

M: Mike! A chump? Why do you say that?

Gas-pump: Well, dummy, you don't see anyone else standing around here talking to a gas-pump, do you?

M: Uh, no, I guess not. Anyway I sigh, how would you fight the gas crunch if you owned a car?

Gas-pump: Boy, you aren't too bright, are you? If I owned a car I obviously wouldn't have to worry about gas now, would I?

M: [slightly embarrassed:] Yes, this is true. What I mean to ask is: what do you suggest to the American people who use gas faster than the Cubs told in September?

Gas-pump: Hey, watch it! I'm a Cub fan myself!

M: Oh, sorry, but I'm a Cub fan, too.

Gas-pump: [sarcastically:] That figure.

M [frustratedly]: Now, what advice would you give gas hungry Americans to alleviate the sudden scarcity of gas?

Gas-pump: Mike, there really is no scarcity as you put it. If you have the money, you can buy the gas.

M: Well, yes, I guess. But what about the people who can't afford to buy gas on a weekly basis, like so many Americans do?

Gas-pump: Ever hear of an economy car?

M: Is that what those little things crowding the highways are called? I thought they were mutant cars caused by the Three Mile Island incident.

Gas-pump: No, stupid, cars can't be mutant!

M: [triumphantly:] Oh no! Then how do you explain the Ford Pinto?

Gas-pump: Hmmm, I think you've got a good point there.

M: What do you see as the future for gas in this country as far as the big oil companies are concerned?

Gas-pump: Well, you know what the big shots say: "On a clear day you can see forever." And, as Johnny Nash put it, I can see clearly now.

M: It seems to me that the oil companies should be concerned about the public. What if Americans were to boycott the boycott of gas?

Gas-pump: Well, let me answer a question with a question. How would those boycotters get to work? Will they use the electric car that GM has promised to come out with by 1985? Probably not. Because it needs to be recharged every 100 miles, and electric companies could do just what the oil companies are doing right now—making a big profit, only consumers mean about as being price increases. You know, it would be different if Americans weren't so lazy. In my younger days, I'd see hundreds of kids run by here. Not so anymore. Their parents have to drive them everywhere they go nowadays. So why bother walking right? And kids don't learn how to walk anymore. They're too busy learning how to drive. So, tell me, why should the oil companies worry?

M: Excellent point, but doesn't that say something very serious about our country?

Gas-pump: Yes, Mike it does. But tell me, who's going to

Leon Redbone, the obscure

Leon Redbone is perhaps what one would classify as an obscure great. With the release of his latest album "From Branch to Branch," this statement is only further verified.

Redbone incorporates the use of a band that stretches the limits between folk and blues. This creates a unique laid back sound included in the band is Mack Redneck, or, as he is known nationally, Dr. John.

Redbone reminds one of a typical 1950's stereotype crooner. This crooning brings to mind the character Alvin from the Little Rascals, with, uh, a more mature voice.

"From Branch to Branch" is a great disc to play when trying to relax from too much caffeine. Leon's voice is soothing and the tempo glides from cut to cut like a gentle flowing balloon.

Redbone gained some recognition when he performed the classic "Harvest Moon" a few years back on Saturday Night Live. On "From Branch to Branch," he again goes to the classics. For example, on the new album Redbone does his version of the Hank Williams great, "Your Cheatin' Heart," in his own obscure style of course.

Several other interesting cuts are found on "From Branch to Branch." In the cut "Why," Redbone uses improvisation to introduce the state of intense paranoia in "Seduced." Redbone speaks frankly of personal war on ways and desires to the background of tuba and bongo accompaniment. Lastly, "Extra Blues," sounds fresh out of a New Orleans jazz funeral.

Baseball team gets 20th and 21st wins

by JOE KOBT
Sports Editor

The Harper baseball team picked up its 20th and 21st wins of the season in a doubleheader victory over Rock Valley, 5-1 and 5-2.

Despite the win, Harper coach Wally Reynolds was not totally pleased with the team's performance.

"We just don't get mentally prepared for the first game," said Reynolds. "I'm finally glad we won a low scoring game and the mistakes aren't that crucial, we have trouble in these first games.

"In tournaments you only play one game and if it takes a while to get going then we could be in trouble," added Reynolds.

Harper was led in the first game by pitcher Mark Heuer who struck out six, allowed one run on three scattered hits and went the seven inning distance to improve his record to 5-1.

"Each time he pitches he just seems to get better," said Reynolds concerning Heuer.

Rock Valley took the lead in the first inning, but Harper came right back to tie the game at 1-1.

Kevin Maloney scored from third base on Bill James sacrifice fly ball, to tie the game.

Neither team scored again for the next five innings. Harper broke the tie in the bottom of the sixth when Brian Sanders slugged a game winning RBI double scoring James from second base with two out. Sanders then scored on Bill Moran's base hit to take a 3-1 lead.

Heuer kept Rock Valley to just one hit in the seventh inning as the Hawks went on to win 3-1.

Heuer added to his tough pitching performance by performing the best defensive play of the game in the third inning. Heuer leaped in desperation to catch a lobbing bunt attempted by Rock Valley, caught the ball and then threw to first base for Harper's only double play in the game.

In the nightcap, Harper was led by the pitching talents of John Kowalak, who allowed just one hit and had no earned runs to boost his record to 5-0.

Harper took control of the game in the first inning when Ron Laramie and Casey Moore scored on a baseball by Bill James, for a 2-0 lead. Harper scored again in the second inning on a solo home run by designated hitter Kevin Maloney, his second of the year.

Harper held Rock Valley to two runs, both after errors and won the game, 5-2.

In the first game of the day, Dave Loch went two for three to stretch his hitting streak to nine straight games. Loch has hit .625 in the month of April.

Willie Moran has also started to come around with a bat by hitting three for three in the second game of the contest.

Harper fares well at Invitational

by JOE KOST
Sports Editor

Both the men's and women's track and field teams finished well last week at the Harper Invitational Track and Field Meet.

The Men's team finished second in the field of five teams while the women finished fourth, with the exception of two major injuries on the squad.

Saturday, April 18, the women's track team will participate in the Road Runner Invitational at Northern Illinois University.

"I hope we'll do better next week at the Northern meet," said women's track coach Renee Zeller. "Hopefully we'll have a full team. We're now plagued with three important injuries."

Placing first for the Hawks in different events were Ron Therberge in the 800 and the 1500 meter runs, Tom Placek in the 5,000 meter run, Carl Hammenburg in the discus, Dave Sloan in the javelin and Fred Williams in the 400 meter dash.

Williams and Therberge both set new outdoor records at Harper. Williams also set a new school outdoor record in the 200 meter dash, finishing in second place.

Also finishing in second for the men were Placek in the 1000 meter run and the male relay team consisting of Williams, Therberge, Kevin Murray and Jeff Olson.

Third place finishers for the Hawks consisted of Sloan in the high jump, Bill Bingham in the triple jump, Jim Griffin in the pole vault, Jerry Eddler in the shotput, Dan Foley in the javelin, Greg Clark in the 16,000 meter run and Dennis Ludwig in the 110 meter high hurdles.

The only first place finisher for the women's team was Karen Stenersen in the 100 meter hurdles.

Finishing in second place for the Hawks were the 440 relay team consisting of Karen Autumn, Siverreen, Sue Mischler and Sandy Parks. Also finishing for the Hawks in second were Mischler in the high jump, Parks in the 200 meter run and Judy Abernathy in the javelin throw.

Finishing in third place for the Hawks were Stenersen in the 60 meter hurdles and Candace Rak in the discus.

Harper will travel to Northern this weekend missing two of their best runners, Sandy Parks is suffering from a calf injury and Beth Rood is still out sick.

"That could really hurt us because they've both been our top finishers all year long," said Zeller.

Snack bar re-opens, meets favorable reaction

by NORA NORTON
If you noticed a larger crowd than usual on the main floor of Big A at 10:30 a.m. April 15, it was in response to flyers advertising the reopening of the Front Porch.
Closed for several years because of financial problems, a change in management and reorganization has led William T. Norvell, the new director of Food Services, to re-open the snack bar.
He credits Jan Levy with the accomplishment of having the snack bar ready on time.

"I gave her the leadership to get everything together - to get all the details and put a package together," he said. "I met with her approximately once a week, to keep up-to-date and gave her a target date of 10:30 today and she's right on time."
"What I am hoping for," Norvell said, "is to take some of the pressure off the main dining downstairs and still provide good service."
A small random sampling of customers showed a positive attitude on the opening.

Dan Wirtz, freshman, said he liked it. "Downstairs is always crowded. I think the idea of the snack bar is good. I like it. I'll probably just eat snacks here and maybe buy something to drink. When it's warmer, I'll probably buy ice cream. I just don't like it."
Dave Khyan, sophomore, said he would buy snacks. "It's about time this was opened. I'm a food junkie. They should have done this a long time ago."
A sophomore who wished to be anonymous said she thought the food tasted better from the snack bar. "The grilled cheese is good. The beverages are good full cups. I think the food is better up here. Maybe that's because it is a different atmosphere. They cook the hamburgers here when you ask for them. Downstairs you don't know how long they've been sitting there."

Rick Smith, a freshman, noted that the service was fast. "We waited for ten minutes with our order and my friend never got his. It was unorganized. I asked for a chocolate shake and got vanilla. He (friend) ordered a chocolate shake and onion rings and never got them. It might get better once it's organized. It's a good idea if the service is better. I'll buy it (food) up here, otherwise I'll go downstairs."

Mrs. Suzanne Havlic, Journalism instructor, said there was a little too much noise. "It could be quieter. You can't even have a pleasant conversation. The snack bar is nice. It gives a variety. There weren't

Board ups tuition $3

by PETE WICKLUND
The Harper Board of Trustees passed a three dollar tuition increase Monday night which will take effect immediately in time for the 1981 summer and fall semesters.
The increase passed with a vote of 42 with trustees Joan Klusman and Shirley Munson opposing the measure. Student Trustee John Malkowski, who in campaigning for re-election three weeks earlier said he would fight any proposed increase, changed his stance and gave his support to the three dollar increase.
The raise in tuition from $19 a semester hour to $22 will enable the college to surplus extra monies to balance the budget and to initiate work on several updating projects on campus. However, money generated from the increase will not be seen until 1982 when the State will give Harper matched revenue funds based on the money collected from tuition payments from the 1981-1982 academic year.
Among needed updating work on campus are improvements to the parking area, new equipment for the computer education program and the replacement of the computers in the business office which are reportedly some 14 years old. Munson stated that the college would be able to effectively get by with only a two dollar increase. She noted that the college already has a surplus and that money generated from another dollar is not desperately needed at this point in time. "We presently have an excess of $700,000 in already appropriated building improvements," said Munson. Klusman agreed with Munson. She stated that surplus money is available. "Like a personal savings account, the college does have money put aside and saved," Klusman noted.

The announcement of the increase came as a surprise to many people who were not aware that a proposal for an increase had even been enacted. The measure was brought up at the regular board meeting on April 23 but final voting was postponed until some students reaction could be obtained after students returned from Spring Break. Munson stated that she was upset at how quickly the increase was voted through.

Malkowski said that he changed his position after learning that the money generated from the increase would be of benefit to future students. On Monday before the vote Malkowski talked to the Student Senate as well as about 30 members of the student body about the proposed increase. Malkowski said that the reactions of these people were overwhelmingly in favor of the increase. "The senate told me they were behind the increase but were concerned as to the fact of what impact the increase would have on financial aid students," Malkowski said.

"I also talked to many students today (Monday) and they gave their go-ahead to the increase," he continued. Malkowski feels strongly that if no increase is initiated there will be extensive program cuts in future years. He also feels that the increase will strengthen the financial foundation of the campus. "Harper," Malkowski noted, "has not had good capital management in the past."
The issue of financial aid was discussed but a majority of the trustees felt that it would not be that big of a factor in regards to the tuition increase. Trustee Ray Mills stated to the board that the fact that the Reagan administration has put aid cuts in effect and the fact that obtaining financial aid will be increasingly difficult to obtain in a very real problem. However, trustees Jan Bone and George Dasher both felt that other financial aid is readily available elsewhere. "I saw a big sign at the bank today that said student loans available here," stated Dasher. Bone agreed with Dasher. "With the availability of short term loans the impact of the tuition hike will not be that drastic," Bone noted.

Committee votes down stop sign proposal

by PETE WICKLUND
A proposal for a stop sign for exiting cars at the intersection of the South entrance to the campus and the perimeter road has been voted down by the Environmental, Health and Safety Committee. However, a proposal for a stop light at the Euclid Avenue entrance has received the committee's approval and is presently being studied by the Harper administration.
The stop sign, originally proposed by student trustee John Malkowski, was motivated with the intent to relieve congestion on the perimeter road during peak traffic periods such as noon and six p.m. The committee decided against the sign after an extensive study by Kevin King and the Public Safety Department showed that such a sign would not be as practical as originally thought.
The proposal for a stop light at the Euclid entrance is now in the hands of the Harper administration who are in contact with the Cook County Highway Department which has jurisdiction over the portion of Euclid that runs by the campus. A light at the Euclid entrance would assist motorists in entering the campus during the morning and evening rush hours. It will also allow easier exit on the Euclid.
Reaction for the proposed stop light has received favorable feedback from many of the agencies on campus. Included are student senar, public safety, the administration, and the committee. Malkowski agrees that "everyone is keen on the idea." Still, the light, if approved by the administration and governmental agencies, may take a few years in installation. Installation of lights at the Algonquin Road entrance took two years after its approval.

Editorial Tuition increase lacks insight

The Board of Trustees has decided to raise the present tuition rate by $3 a semester hour. Alone that number is small but when that is brought into the terms of 82 a semester hour and that, in turn, is multiplied by an average of say 16 hours, and then added to a $13 student activities fee and astronomical book costs, what is then added up with is a fee of four plus for the average full time student. Now, that is a fairly big number. But that is also an unpleasant fact of life.

Harper College is a very large institution. And, with any large institution there are always "needs" and "crises" that are going to need some kind of new equipment, repairs or updating. It is with this in mind that the board has installed the tuition increase for the 1981-1982 academic year. And, this is a very noble gesture.

However, there is a state known as "jumping the gun," and this, unfortunately, is exactly what the board of trustees have done. Contrary to what George Dasher believes, the board is not only representative to taxpayers, but to 20,000 students as well. To take the easy way out is not being fair. How can the board raise tuition without notifying and consulting their student constituents first. After all, April 23 was a vacation for students and thoughts were far away from Harper College. And, what is the fact that many students had thought that their direct representative, student trustee Malkowski, was going to do all in the power to fight any increase? Facts are facts, 30 students and nine student senators is a awfully small percentage of Harpers population to justify a tuition increase for one and all.

Do alternatives to a $3 tuition increase exist? One may never know because time was ignored for the possibility of studying other plans. The board seems to think that two weeks is time enough to justify grabbing a few more dollars away from already money worried students.

One hopes that the board will learn patience and insight in similar future issues.

Study: tuition up 8-12 percent through '80s

Washington, D.C. (CPS) — Many colleges and universities have already announced tuition increases of up to 16 percent for the 1981-82 academic year, but that may be just another in a decade-long series of tuition hikes of eight to 12 percent per year.

The forecast for large annual tuition jumps through the decade is only one of the gloomy predictions reached by the American Council on Education (ACE) in a study published in Educational Record, its quarterly journal. The forecasts were made for ACE by David W. Breeman of the Brookings Institute, who added that the dramatic decline in the number of 18-year-olds during the next 10 years and the erosion of public and private support for graduate education could force as many as 300 colleges to close.

His findings paralleled those of the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES), which last spring also predicted some 200 colleges will be closed by the enrollment crunch of the 1980s. The NCES speculated that private four-year liberal arts colleges will be least likely to survive the decade. Breeman thinks that "the most troubled group will be the former teacher colleges that began to develop into comprehensive state universities in the 1960s, and now find themselves stranded in a state of semi-development and uncertain mission." Similarly, in a speech last October to administrators from liberal colleges and universities, Stanford education Prof. Lewis Mayhew noted that the first two victims of the enrollment crisis "Sacred Heart in Los Angeles and Lone Mountain College near San Francisco" were just such schools that "attempted radical departures from their traditions" in the last 20 years, and were left vulnerable to the peculiar problems of the 1980s.

Letters over 300 words are subject to editing. All letters should be submitted to the Harbinger office, Blog #387 no later than noon the Monday before publication.

Prospects up for LAS grads

(CPS) — Defying recent trends and statistics, job prospects for liberal arts majors may be improving as businesses and industries begin to look for people to populate "the other side of the field," according to career placement experts. Moreover, observers find that although liberal arts graduates have a harder time getting their first job, they usually are promoted to management positions faster than graduates from technical fields.

Gerry Pheneux of Texas Tech's placement office says that liberal arts majors, with their "broad base of knowledge" and "strong communication skills," are increasingly considered best for most kinds of entry level positions.

Pheneux speculates that the trend will continue despite last year's gross statistics, which showed a decrease of 11 percent in the number of jobs offers to 1980 liberal arts grads. The reason, he says, is that even highly technical companies now need people for the administrative sides of the fields. The ability to synthesize information may be the liberal arts grad's most marketable skill, notes Robert Beck of American Telephone & Telegraph. He makes the grad a good candidate for management positions. A recent study of 600 1980 graduates presently employed at AT&T graded liberal arts scholars as having the greatest potential in interpersonal and administrative skills, intellectual ability and motivation.

Not only do such students often excel in managerial positions, but they reach management level earlier in the careers than those people with technical backgrounds, according to Beck. A study of 20-year AT&T employees showed 45 percent of the former liberal arts majors had reached "mid-management level," while only 25 percent of business majors attained that status.

Although liberal arts students do make good managers in time, IBM's Tom Horton warns that a liberal arts education "may not help an individual get his first job." Indeed, a survey of 560 business and government agencies by the Michigan State University Placement Service showed that on-campus recruiters were least impressed with the "preparations" of liberal arts students. Not enough of them demonstrate their skills during the interview, the survey found.

Board passes $3 tuition hike

noted Director of student affairs Don Slansbury told the board that he had received information that noticeable problems in obtaining financial aid will not be seen until late October. Slansbury however said that she had already received a call from a concerned parent with two children attending Harper on the effect the increase will have on them. Slansbury said she would be supportive to any measures to help financially needy students but she also felt that the three dollar increase was not being "justified."

Most of the trustees seemed in agreement that money for improvements at Harper should come from the users of the facilities and not taxpayers. Harper has retained its same tax pay since the college opened in 1965. "We represent tax payers and we will not spend their money unnecessarily," pointed out Dasher.

Also at the Monday night meeting the board unanimously approved the establishment of a tuition rate for Continuing Education and Non-credit/reimbursable classes. A rate of $22.00 per 15 hours of course contact was instituted.

Teaching a chance to see students grow for Smith-Pierce

Nora Norton

Teacher
Feature

Some teachers aim for a teaching career almost from the time they start college. Others decide midway through college. Still others decide some time after graduation that they would like to teach.

Associate Professor and Chairman of Speech, Dr. Patricia Smith-Pierce was one of the teachers who decided to be a teacher some time after she graduated from college.

"I graduated from Ohio State University and was a stewardess for American Airlines," she said.

"After I finished being a stewardess, I worked in retailing in San Francisco and then I went to Nashville, Tennessee. I liked the job, but I liked working with people better and decided I would like to teach."

Dr. Smith-Pierce chose to work on her master's at the University of Utah because she liked Salt Lake City which was one of her stop-overs when she was a stewardess.

"I had always liked Salt Lake and figured if you're going to school, you might as well go where you like it."

After she received her masters, she came to Harper and has been here for ten years, taking a leave of absence in 1976 to work on her doctorate which she received from Washington State University.

"My favorite area is group discussions or discussions and debate where the students use management problem solving techniques," she said.

"We work on two phases of group dynamics: how people work together to enjoy being in the group system and the way they learn how to logically solve a problem as a group. Each group chooses their own problem. I want them to enjoy what they are doing if they can, so I let them decide what problem they want to resolve."

"One problem a group came up with involved establishing youth centers for teenagers over the age of 16," she continued. "The group that did all the research work has presented the ideas to the Arlington Heights Youth Commission which is considering the suggestions."

"Another group is looking at the various things offered by Health Service at Harper and is involved in the problem of making the students aware of all the services available by the Health Service."

Dr. Smith-Pierce said students learn to accept more responsibility through these classes.

"The thing I have always noticed the most is that the student seems to grow more in terms of responsibility. They have learned to be extremely responsible to each other and to find this interchange: 'uncomfortable drop out of the class.'"

Working with the speech team is another area which Dr. Smith-Pierce said she enjoys.

"I probably have been, in many ways, more fortunate than other teachers. I get to know the students in a closer relationship, especially those students on the speech team. We hear from many of them after they leave Harper. Randy Von Lutke, who used to be the editor of the Harbinger and who is now Governor Thompson's appointment secretary, keeps in touch with us. He was on the speech team for two years."

"I think the thing I like about teaching the most is that in speech you have an opportunity to see students open their minds to other points of view," she said. "We all have our little set thing that we think we are right about. It's very fulfilling when you work with the students and one day their eyes open and they say 'Oh yeah, by god we understand!' It really is nice."

Number of interviews up, jobs down

(CPS) — The mounting uncertainty over economic conditions has not cut down on the amount of job recruiting being done on campuses this spring, but it has made recruiters narrow their focus on the type of students they will interview, according to campus placement officers.

Recruiters, says Ron Falliday, placement director at San Angelo State in Texas, are "tightening up" the criteria they use in deciding which students they will personally interview for job openings.

"They used to come here and recruit every kind of student," Falliday recalls. "But now they're limiting to certain majors. Recruiters want to see those students who aren't going to cost the company money by training them. They want people with skills, like computers or engineering."

Falliday and others find that employers visiting campus this spring tend to ask fewer general questions and more probing questions in a procedure that may cost a company more in recruiting costs, but less in post-hiring costs incurred if the employee doesn't work out for the firm.

Employers, summarizes John Shingleton of Michigan State University, are "willing to go a long way to find the right people."

"People are in business to make money, and they're going to go wherever they can't to make sure they'll get the most bang for the buck," he says.

Now, employers often ask college placement services to screen applicants more vigorously, Shingleton says, in an effort to get the bigger "bang." Employers are also more likely to expect that students are familiar with their companies before the interview begins.

Such methods, Shingleton says, may change the nature of recruitment, but they make it more effective for the recruiters.

The recruiters themselves have stayed busy, despite their increased selectivity and the sluggish economy. Shingleton's survey of over 50 firms suggested recruiting nationwide will have increased two percent by year's end. Some individual companies have enjoyed bigger increases. Lehigh, for example, has recorded a 15 percent jump in the number of on-campus interviews. Interviews at Iowa State are up 30 percent.

But increased interviewing no longer means increased hiring. The number of job offers has increased on most campuses. In some cases, recruiters who used to offer 50 jobs for every 200 interviews have dropped the number to 25 offers for every 200 interviews.

"Obviously, the markets are tightening up," observes Marie Role of Northern Arizona University. "But recruiters still want to interview as many people as they can just in case the economy suddenly allows for quick hiring."

Most companies interviewed by the College Placement Council (CPC), which gathers national data for many campus placement offices, said they don't want to be caught in the same bind as they were in the mid-seventies, when they halted all hiring and were left short-handed when the economy improved.

"Employers really felt the pinch then," says CPC's Judith Kayser. "We've heard them say, 'We need that continuous stream of talent.'"

Harper AAS degree no use in transfer

By WENDY WINKELBAKE
Harper students holding Associate of Applied Science degrees may find them worthless when transferring to a four-year institution. State schools will accept credit earned with an Associate of Arts (AA) and Associate of Science (AS) degree under a community college compact formed in the late 1960s said

Dave Williams, vice president of academic affairs. However, students may run into trouble when trying to transfer credits earned with an Associate of Applied Science degree (AAS).

"An AAS degree is a terminal degree. It is a degree directed toward occupational/vocational training. A student in an AAS program should be aware that the program may not transfer for them. They may have to spend more time for the bachelor's degree," Williams said.

Some of the credit earned in an AAS program may be accepted by a four-year school but only as free elective hours or dropped completely as they do not fit into a program of four year institutions said Williams.

Several areas in which students earn an AAS degree at Harper are designed to prepare students for immediate employment in fields where on-the-job experience is the best training. These include such areas as refrigeration and air conditioning, parks and grounds operation management and supermarket management.

degree require further training and present problems when transferring. These fields require advanced training for best placement in the job market. These areas include journalism, criminal justice and mechanical engineering.

"An AAS degree is a function of advising and student awareness. Students should be aware that they may not be able to transfer easily. A student has to understand and accept that they may not be able to transfer into a baccalaureate program at a four-year institution," said Williams.

"In a field like journalism, each school sets its own standards as to what they will accept and what they will not accept. The University of Illinois and Northern Illinois University may be totally different," he continued. The architectural program is another. The program at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, are totally different although they are offered by the same school at different locations. Criminal justice is another example."

Bellinger Dismissed

By PETE WICKLUND

The student senate has approved the dismissal of Rich Bellinger, elected senator representing the Business Division, and chairman of the important Student Activities Budget Committee for not performing up to expected standards.

In a statement Monday, Student Trustee John Malinowski stated that Bellinger was being dismissed from the senate for "continued lack of attendance in senate meetings and functions; and apparent lack of interest."

Bellinger was treasurer for the senate, a position he asked to be appointed to citing a vast interest in the job. Bellinger was one of four elected senators that make up the 19 total positions. Each year several senators are appointed by the elected senators, the student trustee and the Director of Student Activities as a measure of balancing the representation on the senate.

Earlier this semester student senators Doug Dvorak and Tracee Gilen were dismissed from the senate for an incident in which the two were discovered in the Student senate office with possession of alcohol after campus hours. Gilen and Dvorak were elected senators representing the Humanities and Physical Education areas respectively. The senate presently is composed of seven senators four of which are appointed senators and one which is elected.

Director of Student Activities, Jeanne Pankamin stated that there was little choice in the dismissal of Bellinger. Rich was a busy student. He was planned to be part of the senate. However, his work schedule was greatly increased this semester. The senate did not want to lose him. Nonetheless, he missed an unsatisfactory number of meetings," said Pankamin.

Hey kids, watch that transferability

As many Harper students know, Harper college is an excellent place to work on the preliminaries to a bachelors degree in arts or sciences. Harper offers many transfer programs and gives students a choice of hundreds of different classes and seminars to take. Still, Harper is just not designed with transfer students in mind. Harper also offers extensive class offerings in continuing education, in basic education classes, and in a wide variety of career oriented two year programs. Thus, while many classes transfer to four year institutions for credit towards bachelor work, some do not - and it is up to the student, for the most part, to look out for these classes and programs that will not transfer when they are planning their transfer work at Harper.

It is not difficult to safeguard against such "graduation surprises" as discovering that some of one's classes taken will not transfer. Students should be thoroughly familiar with the student handbook. This publication lists beneficial information that transfer students should know. Another valuable publication is the Harper Bulletin. This book lists course synopsis and, usually, says what direction the class is intended for. Also, students planning on transferring can have many a question answered by Harper counselors. The people in counseling have the background to advise transfer students on what classes a four year school will take and which they will not take. Information sheets on Harper transferability to Illinois Universities, for example, is readily available at the counseling centers on campus.

A little care and a little running around now will pay off in the long run for Harper transfer students.

"TUITION TAX CREDITS? NO WAY - THAT WOULD DESTROY PUBLIC EDUCATION AS WE KNOW IT!"

Student gives support for tuition hike

Dear Editor:

After reading last week's editorial "Tuition increase lacks insight," I felt that the editorial itself lacked insight.

Sure, these are tough economic times. Gas prices, food prices, housing prices, all prices seem to be gravitating upward. It has become a fact of life. And, now the tuition is being increased.

We do little complaining about the gas prices, new and used car prices, rent or mortgage prices or food prices. We have learned to pay those prices in order for us to continue to live in our warm, safe, suburban homes. But, many of us complain much about tuition rate increases, when in fact, it is the best dollar spent today.

Is it possible to put a rate of return on the knowledge or wisdom gained from a college course? We consider rates of return on our investments only on material objects. But, what about our own minds. Don't they deserve the same considerations?

We don't think of the fifteen dollars it takes to fill our gas tanks each week. We don't think of the three dollars it costs to eat lunch at McDonald's. We don't think of the four and a half dollars it takes to see a movie. We grudgingly slip the money on the counter and see the product.

We do think, however, of the twenty-two dollar per hour fee. And those thoughts are unjustified. We can use the product over and over again. We may take the product with us to the grave. What can you buy today for twenty-two dollars, use it for fifty years, and have it increase in value?

There are few bargains today, but education at Harper is one of them. Even at twenty-two dollars per hour, the instructors and the facilities can not be beaten anywhere.

It makes one feel good that the Board had the foresight to raise the fee. What would happen if the fee was not raised? Would faculty be laid off even though student demand increased? Would the many excellent instructors be denied pay raises, forcing them to look elsewhere for work? Would the needed repairs to fix the campus ever take place, making the campus possibly dangerous? Would the institution itself be denied the ability to stay ahead of the rapidly changing academic world?

I was raised on the old maxim, "It's always better to bring a coat, you can always carry it." Haven't we learned yet, that it is always better to have a surplus, not a deficit? And there were four tight faced students last tax referendum when the school had the chance to become fiscally solvent for years to come?

I congratulate the Board and our Student Trustee John Malowski, on a job well done, in this age of cuts without thought. It is nice to see leadership with common sense.

Hopefully, future editorials will not lack insight on future vital issues. Hopefully, Harper students will see the bargain that is theirs for the asking.

Moers shoots back at student's letter

To the editor:

Recently I addressed the weapons issue in the Harbinger and I expressed certain opinions favoring their implementation. I felt I could express these views as I have expertise stemming from a law enforcement and martial arts background. My schooling includes an Associate degree in criminal justice, graduate of the Chicago Police Academy, a former teacher and second degree black belt in Korean Taekwondo karate, and extensive street experience as a police officer.

I have responded to a letter written by Dan Foley, student of officers having weapons, but it reeks of yellow journalism. When one expresses a differing viewpoint, one should have certain facts in favor of his position. But it was apparent that Mr. Foley's only objective was to try and humiliate the Public Safety Department with scurrilous remarks and blind attempts at humor. This is usually the format followed by those who are ignorant on the subject they are writing about. Of course with President McGrath referring to us as mere door lockers it is no wonder that this lack of respect should filter down to the student level.

Mr. Foley is in agreement with the President when he says he doesn't consider Public Safety as law enforcement personnel. So, if Mr. Foley and the President didn't consider rape a crime, it could be abolished. Can't student Foley grasp the simple concept that it is not up to him to consider what our role is? We are given police powers by law and we have a duty to protect, not an option.

I don't know what Mr. Foley is trying to convey to us when he thinks we would say "free-er we will shoot" and then imply we might shoot him. Since we have identical training and schooling as Palestine Police Dept., would that same statement apply to them? I doubt it. I think Dan is itching too much Sheriff Lobo on TV.

As far as the comment about me personally feeling inadequate without a weapon, to some extent it is true. If I were involved in a situation of armed confrontation while making a bank run, what would I protect myself with . . . I could say,

"Mr. Crook, the President and a student don't consider me a law enforcement officer, therefore you can't shoot, it wouldn't be fair!" Don't be naive when it is someone else's life you are dealing with. And especially if you don't have the slightest idea the type of possible danger a cop could be confronted with.

On Bambach, morals

To the Editor:

I read with interest Mike Bambach's column on "Now what is up Moral Majority's scheme?"

The particular issue that Mike disagrees with is the "abortion" issue. He evidently has not taken Biology or learned of that biologists also agree with Rev. Falwell, "the moment of conception" is the moment of giving life to a child [that is known fact]. Just as we look back with horror at the Holocaust of the Jews, future generations will look back at our generation at the Holocaust of the unborn and ask "why didn't they do something?"

No automatic credit transfer with AAS

For example, Harper has an AAS program in criminal justice with many of the courses directed to the justice but very few directed toward general education fulfillment. They may be taken as free electives but they will probably not be accepted toward their major. Students will then wind up taking more courses resulting in more than 130 hours for their bachelors degree," said Williams.

The compact agreement, designed to make transferring a smooth operation, states that any person with an AA or an AS degree can transfer into a four-year institution with junior standing and have all general education requirements met.

However, the terms of the compact do not apply to AAS degrees. Students attempting to transfer with the AAS degree do not have the general education requirements met and will not be guaranteed junior standing, said Ray Hylander.

Harper counselor. "All of the state schools, with the exception of the University of Illinois, follow the compact and allow students with an AA or an AS degree to transfer into the school with junior standing and have all general education requirements met. If they have an AAS degree the compact does not apply in an AAS program. There are a number of general education requirements excluded," said Hylander.

According to James Howard, deputy director of the Illinois Community College Board, incidents of students in an AAS program having to spend extra time completing their general education requirements is not uncommon at the community college level.

"Incidents of students completing a two-year program that was guaranteed by instructions to transfer, then having to spend extra time at the community college to finish their general education requirements is frequent," said Howard.

"Or there are cases of students transferring and having to spend time in the school of liberal arts to make up the general education requirements. Only after these are complete can they begin work on their major," he continued. "It is dangerous to tell anyone that a program will transfer without checking ahead of time."

With the exception of the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, Illinois state schools follow the compact agreement. Gary Engelgau, University of Illinois, acting director of admissions and records, cited the college's orientation towards course blocks rather than two-year degrees for their nonconformity.

"If a student has a specific two-year degree that is fine but if they stop short that is fine also. Essentially applicants are treated by course blocks rather than on degrees. There is no automatic acceptance of credit," said Engelgau.

"The major problems we find with transfers is the overload of college prep courses and those are the ones that will get bounced. For example, anything below college algebra won't be accepted," he said.

Although students will be accepted as juniors at other state institutions, it does not necessarily mean that they will be prepared to immediately begin their major said Dr. Evert VanDeVort, community college relations director at Northern Illinois University.

"The general policy is that any baccalaureate oriented courses are given credit and that any course that we have received outlines for and NIU faculty has evaluated can be substituted for another class," said VanDeVort.

"But that doesn't mean that students have the requirements for their major. We accept some credit from an AAS degree but if the student doesn't have the general education requirements met, they will have to spend time making up the general education requirements before they will be allowed to continue," he said.

Williams said that while there is no guarantee that AAS degree credit will transfer, it is a responsibility of community and four-year colleges that students be able to transfer with ease.

"It is a community college concern that students can transfer; there needs to be a guarantee for community college students. It is a four-year concern that students are able to get experience similar to what they would at a four-year institution at a community college," he said.

"Fifty-five percent of students in a baccalaureate program rest on the assurance that two years of credit will transfer from a community college to a four-year institution," he said.

Academic, social adjustments for transfers

by JOE KUENK
"Will I fit in? Can I make the adjustment? Will I be accepted socially? And finally, what is the hell am I doing?"

These questions go through one's mind as soon as the decision is made. They get more intense as summer draws to a close and school time comes nearer. The decision—transferring from a two-year community college to a four-year institution. Making the adjustment to a four-year university is a much bigger task than most people think. Ask any transfer student.

"The biggest thing is the hours that I have to put into study now," said Lou Eisold, a Joliet Junior College transfer, now enrolled in the Journalism program at Northern Illinois University. "In junior college it was easier to get by with a bit less."

Transfer students are overwhelmed with the amount of work that is given out at first. They walk around saying to each other, "Gee, I never did this much work at so-and-so." One even remarked, "I've done more work here in one week than I did in two years at."

"Here people are much more serious. You have to get it done. Now you are competing with the cream of the crop," said Bonnie Buensow, a Harper transfer currently enrolled in the education program at Northern Illinois University.

Another change for the transfer student is the availability of teachers and professors. At a junior college most of the instructors are available all day, but at a university they may only teach one class then head for another job or home.

"It's much harder to catch instructors. To many it is a sad story," said Eisold.

"At a junior college sometimes they sort of guide you by the hand. At the four-year school they're not always reminding you when things are due. Here the responsibility is all on the student if they sink or swim," said Buensow.

Social life is also almost entirely different. Now the student is surrounded night and day by people his or her own relative age. With most community college students goes academics work social life, with all three making up the student's time equally. But at a university, academics take up more than 80 percent of the time. The rest is devoted to social life. Work is almost invisible, but many do have very part, time jobs work 10-15 hours a week at the most.

Most students going to a community college follow a general work-study pattern. They go to classes then hop in the car and head for work or go from work to classes staying away from the school as much as possible.

At the four-year school one usually has few places to go after class. Students head back to their rooms or to the library to study. Therefore, the student is forced to go out and make friends. This not only helps the person gain self confidence but a sense of belonging as well.

"People are more willing to be your friend. There is more social activity for the students," said Eisold.

The student can find almost any type of entertainment from week to week. Ballet, dance, rock concerts, even opera is of-

Even with the big culture shock, the transfer students had no regrets about going to a junior college.

"I got to complete my gen ed, save money and work for a while. I was able to start right into my major and at DuPage I got a taste of college courses," said Ron Bibby, a Northern Illinois physics major who transferred from the College of DuPage.

"I'm not saying that junior college is easy, not by a long shot. Many of my classes were as tough or tougher than ones I have now. ## "Outward Bound"

Over 8,000 men and women, both adults and students will take part in a unique program called "Outward Bound" this year. Designed so that participants will meet challenging experiences in wilderness settings at all times of the year, Outward Bound courses take place in sixteen states and can go as far afield as Canada or Nepal. While many come to Outward Bound seeking a taste of high adventure... most leave with a new understanding of themselves after discovering they are capable of doing things they might previously have thought "impossible." Outward Bound believes many limits are self-imposed.

Backpacking, mountaineering, canoeing, skiing, snowshoeing, sailing, cycling, rafting, and over-camping form the core of the Outward Bound experience, depending on the environment in which the course takes place. Previous outdoor skills are unnecessary, as is special equipment other than personal clothing and boots. Each small group of students has one or more expert instructors and specialists who help them develop outdoor and interpersonal skills, culminating in a "final expedition," with minimal instructor supervision, relying on what they have learned during the course. Academic credit is often available, at the instructor's aid based on need. In addition, several Outward Bound schools offer no-interest tuition loan plans, some for up to three years.

Outward Bound courses are offered year-round and last from 5 to 26 days. For information, write Outward Bound, Inc., 38 Field Point Road, Greenwich, CT 06830, or call toll free 800 243 8320.

Andresen finds life busy, rewarding

Backpacking, jogging and working on a second master's degree are the activities which keep William Andresen, instructor in biology, busy when he is not teaching.

When Andresen goes backpacking he eyes the scenery from an ecological point of view.

"I just walk along looking at the plants. You can walk through an area and tell what has happened according to the vegetation. There are certain trees and plants associated with certain conditions. If you walk through an area and see a plant which is usually associated with fire, you know there has been a fire there," he said.

Andresen likes backpacking because of the plants and trees he sees. A native of Duluth, Minnesota, he says he prefers Minnesota to Illinois and also likes the West Coast.

"I like the big city of Chicago, which I never thought I would, but I don't like the area of Chicago. I miss the trees. This is an ugly place to live. I just came back from California where they have real trees. I would like to move to the West Coast."

The jogging Andresen does is not connected with the backpacking at all. It came about as a result of the work he is doing at Northwestern in exercise physiology. Some of the questions that have come up in his work involve what happens to the body after exercise, what happens during training and what kind of exercise program a cardiac rehabilitation patient should be on.

"Here I am into jogging and being outdoors, and I work in a classroom that doesn't even have windows," he joked.

Andresen, who has always liked animals, never thought about teaching.

"I always liked animals, especially frogs and snakes. I never planned to be a teacher when I was a kid. In fact, I didn't like school very much."

"When I was going to school at Southern Illinois University (for a master's degree) there was a teaching assistantship position open which I took. I liked the teaching. I liked animals. So I put the two together," he said.

Over the years that he has been teaching, Andresen said he noticed that students are better informed today.

"I have worked in different places, so I don't know if it is the students or where I have been, but I think they are better informed. I think they know more about the world of nature, about animals. Television has had an influence on the students, though they have less reading skills. They also seem to have a greater awareness in other fields."

Andresen also noticed that "students get younger every year."

THERE'S ONLY ONE PLACE TO GET $9,200 FOR COLLEGE IN JUST TWO YEARS.

Soon you'll have your associate's degree. And if you're thinking of continuing your education, you know just how expensive that will be.

But consider the Army. In the Army, if you participate in the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), you can accumulate $9,200 for college in just two years.

That's significant for two reasons. Obviously, that's a lot of money. But what you may not have realized is that two years is the shortest military enlistment available.

Only the Army can offer you both. VEAP is a great way to make it on your own. Since it's not a loan, you won't need a co-signer or collateral. And you'll never have to worry about making payments after graduation.

It's strictly a savings program, and the money is all yours for school.

VEAP is surprisingly simple. If you save between $25 and $100 each month while you're in the Army, the government will match your savings two-for-one. And, on top of that, you might even qualify for the exclusive Army educational bonus of $2,000.

And remember, in just two years, you'll be back in school.

Serve your country as you serve yourself. Call 800-421-4422. In California, call 800-252-0311. In Alaska and Hawaii, 800-423-2244. Better yet, look in the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting."

Stage craft class to be offered

by KEVIN BOTTERRMAN

A new class being offered next semester focuses on developing skills for stage productions and special effects.

"Art 279, Stage Craft, concentrates on the development of scenic, costume and lighting skills as applied to stage productions and musicals," said Mike Brown of the Art Department.

The class is a three credit hour course instructed in building U. The course is open to all students in addition to art or theatre majors.

Brown said the class would have been offered sooner if facilities for such a course were available. "Prior to this year there was no room on campus for this type of class. Before we had building U, all the sets for plays were done in the acting studio over in Building A by a volunteer group."

Brown also said that since the opening of Buildings J and U there has been a surge in student interest with theatre in both acting and production.

"Our abilities to do things with the theater and that has increased and should contribute to the minimum which is presently growing among the students," said Brown.

The class is in the planning stage for some time and, according to Brown, all the right ingredients came together at the right time.

"I have a personnel background in theatre and that experience along with the other factors were used and just made this an opportune time to develop the class," said Brown.

Students in the class will be given the basic skills in production of scenes, lighting and costumes, and will be required to participate in the construction of a set or costumes in a school production.

Brown said he thinks the development of this particular class plus the redesigning of lights and sounds will increase the interest and quality of theatre productions.

Brown said Building U, the three dimensional facility for ceramic, design and sculpture classes of the art department, opened in the fall of 1980. "We offer about two or three ceramics classes a semester depending on the demand of enrollment."

Students can enroll in the class through pre registration and for more information may contact Brown at his office in Building U.

Flash signs proposed gift

by PETE WICKLUND

Postage and "flashing signs" are ideas that the Student Senate is looking into for the purpose of being the Harper Class of '81 class gift.

The senate has already appropriated $600 towards the purchase of various forms of postage, in the form of plaques and small trees. This fund will be used to help enhance the appearance of the bldg. A lounge and will be a permanent source of decor for the annual graduation ceremony. The Parks and Grounds Management program has agreed to take on the responsibility of caring for the greenery.

The senate is studying the possibility of purchasing two programmable message display signs. The sign would be used to advertise upcoming student activities. These signs are similar to those moving signs seen on expressways and in shopping centers. The senate would like to have the signs located in the cafeteria and in the J building lounge area. Jeanne Fantanini, Director of Student Activities, said that other colleges have had much success in promoting activities with use of the signs. "I know the message boards are an effective way of promoting because other colleges are raving about the system," said Fantanini. "It's hard to communicate with night students," Fantanini continued, "chances are less than better that a night student will pick up a Harbinger or hear announcements on WHCM."

No decision has yet been made on the proposal for the message boards, as Student Activities is awaiting word from other prospective bidders. One representative from a company that deals with the message boards did make a presentation to the senate.

"The representative made a very pleasant and very informative presentation," said Fantanini.

The message boards would be approximately 6' by 4' and have the capacity of storing several messages. The screens would be programmed by one small keyboard programmer which would be used for both screens and the programmer would cost in the neighborhood of $4,000.

Student Trustee John Malkowski stated that the message board would keep students updated on upcoming activities better than posters."

Panfankin stated that posters and all other forms of communication from the student activities office will continue to be used.

Other suggestions for gifts included landscaping materials for the campus grounds including trees and benches, a new marquee, similar to existing ones at Algonquin Road and Euclid Avenue for the Roselle Road entrance, and construction of a TV watching lounge. This last suggestion will most likely be constructed but under funds from another area.

amount of clinical space the school has.

"Generally when a school has this kind of program there is a selective enrollment that is all predetermined. We have a limited enrollment classification. That is the number of students we allow to enter our program depends on the amount of clinical space we have to use."

Lytie said the problem of finding a school with a nursing program isn't difficult because more colleges are offering programs for degree completion.

Lytie expressed confidence in the nursing program which has been offered since the school opened. "I think we have a pretty good arrangement with other schools; we've been quite successful so far."

Great thoughts gleaned over the past year

Some parting random thoughts about life at Harper. Ever wonder why our spring break came so late in the semester? I have a theory. It seems the justice of being with Harper people for four straight months wasn't cruel enough, so the administration decided to wait until late April, when nobody had any friends left, to have a spring break. That way, when we all came back, it would be really quiet for two weeks. But they people are nosier when they hate your guts than when they like you or just don't give a damn. I either need more friends or fewer enemies. Maybe next year, huh?

Somebody recently asked me if I was going out with any girls. (See, I told you people were noisy.) Being the typical, I said, "No. I've changed my sexual preferences." Maybe that's why I don't have any friends left.

A Vacation. The food down there is okay. But the front porch is even better. It's actually good. One question: Why did they wait two years 'at least the two years I've been sentenced here to open it up? Maybe they got tired of eating their own stuff. I know I did.

I was asked recently by a school official if I thought Public Safety should be allowed to carry guns. Being a very touchy area, I approached this very cautiously. After much thought and long sleepless nights, I answered, "Why not? They let Ron Reagan run for president and Mike Simms write about music."

Does anybody know what Artesian New Year's is?

I'm about fed up with being 19 years old. Do you know what it feels like when you're carded going to an "R" rated movie? We're old enough to get our balls blown off in Ft. Mauder, but we're too young to have any fun. Maybe I'm too immature. Maybe the war is fun, coming back, thinking everybody is trying to sneak up on you, or taking pot shots with a high-powered rifle because they look like the enemy. (Don't ask me how, or coming home without an arm or leg or hand or feet or something. Now that I think about it, I can see how that would be fun. At least then I'd have a chance at getting a ban-occupied sticker for my car, and I could park 50 feet away from school instead of the current 15 miles. Besides, I've always wanted to learn how to play Russian Roulette.

If anyone tells you that the United States wants world peace, tell him I've got this.

piece of swampland in New Jersey I'd like to sell. I've figured it out. We don't strive for world peace. That way, we can go to war every 10 years and be able to justify military actions. Of course, we wouldn't try and win the war, we would do just enough to keep the war going for about 10 years until something better came along, like hippies, or race riots, or disco music, or something like that. I think war is cool: everyone has every bit as good a chance to get killed or slaughtered as the next guy. There's no discrimination involved: race, creed, or color. Now that's what I call equal rights.

You know what I like most about living in the suburbs? Everyone's parents makes just as much money as everybody else, everybody drives about the same type of car, everyone's families are really close, and everyone has a backyard. And everyone voted for Reagan. That's nice: I like middle-class equality. I think everyone should be a middle-class equal. There'd have real equality. We'd have to be same.

Read diet book

by DANIELA STOJANOVIC
If you're tired of diet pills, liquid protein diets and other fad diets or if you just want to know more about your body nutrition then The New Balance Way to Lose Weight and Rejuvenate may just be the book for you. According to Sally W. Mason, part-time instructor at Harper and author of the book, "It's much more than just weight loss. It's a science—it's chemistry, and it's rejuvenation. That's why it's so valuable."
Mason has been doing research for the book since 1970. It all started as a result of her job as Recreational Director of Cambridge-on-the-Lake which is a condominium complex in Buffalo Grove. "We used to go to parties and social gatherings a lot and after a while we realized that we were getting fat."
Mason invited diet experts to come and talk to the group. She says, "some of the information was valuable but much of it was garbage. I took very good notes and later made tapes."
According to Mason the idea to write a book came later. She has been teaching painting and drawing in Continuing Education at Harper for seven years and started teaching two diet education classes in 1977.

Mason says the book was written because "there was a demand to know the material and it was needed as a reinforcement for the course."
Linda Cannon, a teacher at Fremd High School and former student of Mason's, went from 190 to 110 pounds and says, "It's changed my entire life style."
"I've gone from a size 14 to a size 8 and people can't even recognize me. I even look younger."
Dana Harrison, another student of Mason's is a nutritional consultant at the Charley Club health spa in Palatine and says she would recommend the book to anyone, "even those without weight problems."
Mason's method deals with "educating people to know what their body and health is all about," says Harrison. "She gets you aware of what you're eating and where you're making your meal more satisfying."
According to Mason the book has "been amazing" well received by the nutrition people.
"The good thing about the book is that you don't have to follow the whole thing but it's all there in that you can pick and choose. I've tackled the problem from every angle."

Music year varied

In retrospect, the music of this year has been of wide variety and very interesting. We have seen groups like the Police break out of type cast made in as they appeared in their first album "Outlandos De Armonar" into progressive mainstays. The Police's "Zenyatta Mondatta" has proved to be more creative and sounder musically than past Police projects.
Rockie, this past year, cut "Seconds of Pleasure" and this title proved to be the group's theme song disbanding as an "official group" only a few months after the album's release.
Even the Talking Heads came out of obscurity this past year. While underground and neo-progressive stations had always played the heads since their conception, 1980-81 saw FM power play stations getting into the act with airing Head songs like "Once in a Life Time."
Bruce Springsteen received much praise for his platinum release, "The River." This album did not receive any accolades from yours truly. In fact I earn the way promoters pushed this album through the golden tubes of the "Which way did he go, Doc?" public. Springsteen's gravel voice is enough to make anyone drink too much coffee, but repetitive alipay of "The Boss'" songs can be compared to screeching fingernails on a blackboard.

Curt Ackman

...ON MUSIC
Hey, but I hear he is great in concert though.
Early in December the music world lost a great talent, one not to be equalled. Who would have thought, in the blistery days of the end of the year that one of the "Fab Four" would have been killed in the streets of the Big Apple? John Lennon will always be remembered when radios play "Imagine" in tribute.
The resurgence of music of yesterday was amazing this year. Doors tunes were often aired over the waves, and Japan's latest craze became the "Monkees" yes, the characters from that same stupid show you still watch on Channel 21. The Monkees, or better yet, TV's answer to the Beatles, recorded on the Columbia label that went out of business years back. The Japanese went crazy when so many bought the rights to the label and used Japan for a marketing venture. Maybe they will soon release "The Monkees Live at Budokan."
XTC released "Black Sea" with the big hit "Generals and Majors" which was a pleasant surprise to the hype, large progression bass riffs that accompanies most music.
Queen cut "The Game," and it truly was that. Being in the verge of a complex, I listened to "Another One Bites the Dust" and "Dragon Attack." These two sophomore, lack-luster tracks excited me as much as a good of mellos lead.

REO Speedwagon, the big headliner on Billboards charts surprises me on how they can sell garbage. I've been to flea markets that sold better junk than REO's fidelity. The words "Heard it from a friend" who heard it from a friend? are now resonating noticeably in my ears.
Devo being played on WLS? Maybe they'll soon have Animal Stories on WRR? Why? It's rare the charts even though it was about a subject like asado masochism.
Blondie used her video promotion to sell "Autoamerican." "The Tide is High," using a Jamaican influence balancing on a reggae rhythm, watermarked up the charts. "Rapture" the cut that used the rhyming words - cars, bars, and Mars to sell albums, did significantly well.
And recently, Gerald Jeffreys has cut "Escape Artist," an album that promises to be great. Outstanding cuts are "96 Tears," "R.O.C.K.," "Graveyard Rock" and "Mystery Kids."
Now, if someone could only come up with a country version of the David Geddies 75 release "Run, Joey, Run!"
This is Curt Ackman signing off for 1981.

Harper's year in sports reviewed

by JOE KOST
Sports Editor

After a year of disappointments and a year of surprises, Harper can look back at it all and remember the few jobs that he did.

It all started out in the fall with the football team. The first surprise of the year came at the quarterback position. Tim Tyrrell, who started the team as a tailback, converted himself to quarterback half way through the season to lead the Hawks to one of the greatest turned around seasons in the history of Harper College.

Harper lost their first game of the season, 19-7 to Rock Valley. Then Harper fell to Thornton, 25-12, in a game that they should have won. Then the Hawks were buried alive by DuPage 49-14, then 47-14 to Illinois Valley and 32-29 to Joliet.

Then something stopped. The losing trend that Harper had been going along with, Harper smashed Wright with a 30-6 win to start things off. Harper then moved on to bigger and better things by topping North Park College, 28-6 for two wins in a row. Harper made it three wins in a row when they upset the #10 ranked team in the nation Trilon, 34-29. And finally, Harper closed out their season with a 35-14 win over Wright in the NCC conference game to determine final standings.

ed by Sander Saabo also finished the season with a fine record but they were eliminated from the playoffs earlier than they thought to be.

Harper lost to Lewis and Clark, 1-0 in the Region IV Semi-final match. The Hawks, who finished the year with an 11-3 record, will not be seeing Sander Saabo as their coach when the next season rolls around.

"They just don't give a damn," Saabo said when referring to the athletic department at Harper. "When the chips are down, they just don't want to help you."

The women's volleyball team, improved their record from the previous year by 10-6. This year, the squad won two games, compared to the solo victory the year before.

The team was led by freshman star Terri Bauer, the female athlete of the year. Bauer will be back for the next season with Harper in hopes of improving their record.

Martha Bolt's tennis team finished the year with a 0-4 record and hopes of improving even further next season. The squad was very freshman oriented.

The cross country team did another fantastic job by naming two of their athletes to the All-American squad. Tom Placek and Bill Bingham both received the honors.

The golf team finished fourth in the NCC, and also had two outstanding players. Brian Dumber and Mike Hager were named to the NCC all conference team.

One of the biggest disappointments of the year came during the winter sports. The Harper men's basketball team which looked to be very promising, was hit by injuries and other types of setbacks that prevented them from having the kind of season that they were looking forward.

At the beginning of the season, basketball coach Roger Bechtold planned on running his team as much as possible because he didn't have the height that other teams had.

Harper started off great with a quick 4-1 record. Then before anyone knew what was going on, Harper had a 9-1 record and was looking for some surprises to fill their wins with. Then the injuries came. Kevin Murray, one of Harper's top scorers all season, had to leave the team with muscle problems. His attempt to return to the team late in the season was temporary due to the severe problems that he faced earlier in the season.

Keith Miller, Harper's 6'7" back up center, suffered a broken ankle right before the Christmas holiday and sat the rest of the season out on the bench.

Demetris Gaines left the team at the semester break Games was the only hope that Harper had for rebounding.

Fernando Goss, an NCC All-conference selection, suffered knee injuries all year long and was sidelined for most of the final games.

And last but not least, Dave Strawn, one of the top all around players on the squad, broke his ankle and left the team just before the regional playoffs.

The men's team finished the season with an 18-15 record.

The women's basketball team finished the season with a 16-6 record, and a victory over Trilon in the Regional championship game.

The women's team was led by several stars. Sue Hoday, Dianna Dieter, Kim Placek, Karen DeMoss and Sue Maschler were just a couple of players that enabled the female Hawks to be so successful.

The team of the year is the men's swim team. The team finished 8th in the nation, 1st in the state and 1st in NCC conference play. The swim team, coached by Steve Bull and Lynn Hitchcock, was led in the water by Mike Soja, Mark Waks, Mike Sheridan, Mike Zwierzinski and Todd Mussell.

The women's swim team also did well in the national meet, finishing 19th in the nation. Leading the women's team was Terri Westdale, Pam McEacher, Donna Gawwell and Dana Olson.

The diving team, coached by Lynn Hitchcock, also went to nationals.

Both members, Mike Schuevitz and Doug Pool, competed. Schuevitz finished 9th in the nation in the three meter competition and Pool finished 5th in the three meter competition and Pool finished 25th in the three meter competition and 35th in the one meter competition.

The Harper wrestling team also finished well, sending four of their members to nationals. D.D. Leggett, Paul Leskewski, Kevin Roszdeucher and Rich Courney all competed in the national competition for Harper.

Harper's gymnastic squad also represented themselves at nationals by sending three sophomores to nationals, all

The gymnastic squad was bountiful with talent but because of the lack of participants on the squad, they were forced to accept zeros in several events and therefore, they were unable to win as a team.

The men's basketball team finished their season with a 31-61 record, a new record for most wins in a season.

The team was led by pitcher John Kowalski who finished the season with an 11-1 record and was also selected as the top pitcher in the nation at one point.

Other top performers on the squad consisted of Kevin Maloney, Dave Loch, (Loch had a 13 game hitting streak), Ron Larraque, Casey Moore, Art Aevermann, Dave Grant, Brian Sanders and Frank Sarri. The team was coached by

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

Hawks hit 30 wins this year

by JOE KOBY
Sports Editor

The Harper Hawks topped Triton College, the top team in the state, Tuesday, 4-0.

John Kowalski, the Harper ace with an 11-1 record that can speak for itself, shut out Triton for five hits, all singles.

"Kowalski pitched a fantastic game," said Harper catcher Dave Loch.

Midway through the contest, Kowalski came down with a blister on his pitching hand that burnt and started to bleed.

"At first I worried and I took several trips out to the mound to stall and see if he was o.k.," said Loch. "The coach asked him if he wanted to continue and he was determined to do it."

"I was getting worried about my finger but I just tried to get it out of my mind and decided to win," said Kowalski. "I had a game to pitch and that's what I did."

Harper lost the first game of the Triton Sectional to Wright College 2-1 in 11 innings. That got Harper's must-win situation for Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This win forced one final game between Harper and Triton that will be played on Wednesday. The winner of the game will advance to the state playoffs in their bid for a national championship.

"We had everything going for us," added Kowalski. "The defense was great and the effort was fantastic. Loch had a great day behind the plate."

"These guys were so rocky," added Loch who had a 12 game hitting streak in the middle of the season. "I know we're going to win Wednesday. We can't lose."

Harper scored the winning run in the second inning when Casey Moore and Bill James scored on an error that allowed Dave Grant to reach first base.

Two more powerful blows were added in the sixth inning when Bill James slugged a three run double and Ron Laramie slugged a two run double.

Loch had nothing but compliments to say about the rest of the team. Frank Sarullo played a fantastic game at third base. He made some unbelievable plays.

PAUL BUCAR hurts to the plate as the Hawks continue to win.

HARPER'S BEST can be found in shortstop Ron Laramie as he races for the plate.

Women's track 4th in N4C conference meet

The Harper women's track and field team finished in third place in the N4C conference meet.

Sue Mischler placed first in the high jump competition with a leap of 5'4". Karen Stenersen finished in first place in the 100 meter hurdles, 16.6. Harper's only other first place finisher was Candace Rak with a throw of 110'8" in the discus competition. Rak's throw was also a new school record.

Tammie Oranish finished second in the discus throw measuring 104'9". Judy Abernathy threw for 89'11", her personal best in the event.

In the 3000 meter run, Susan Kunesh finished third for Harper with a time of 11:47.23. Sandy Parks finished in third place also in the 400 meter run, 48:10. Parks also finished fourth in the 200 meter run. Judy Abernathy took third place in the javelin throw, while Oranish and Rak took third and fourth place in the shotput event. Oranish finished third, 31'10", and Rak fourth, 30'.

Harper's mile relay team finished third with a time of 4:37.4. The team consists of Karen Stenersen, Sue Mischler, Susan Kunesh and Sandy Parks.

Harper's other relay team, the 400 meter relay, finished fourth in the competition. The squad consists of Beth Reed, Stenersen, Niemiak, and Parks.

Predictions, Reflections, Disappointments at Harper

by MIKE BAMBACH

Some reflections and predictions on the Harper sporting scene.

Predictions: I predict that with the help of a $3 per semester hour tuition increase, the athletic department will add a new position, probably an athletic counselor to aid athletes with academic scheduling. It would be an excellent move by the school, because it will aid athletes to be better prepared to go on in school, which is what Harper is all about anyway.

I also predict that in the near future a sports information director, whether full or part time will be added to the athletic department staff. It is not as crucial as the former, but never underestimate the publicity getter a SID can be. I will also go so far as to predict who the SID might be: Wally Reynolds, the Hawk's baseball coach. Reynolds has an outstanding rapport with the local press, and has done a tremendous job of covering football and men's basketball when no press coverage is allowed.

I predict the football team, which I so mercilessly hammered last semester, will have the best record of a Harper football team in recent years. Most of last season's freshmen-laden squad will be returning, including quarterback Scott Chiskold and running back Ron Burke, who was named the Barbarger Male Athlete of the Year.

I predict the soccer team, which lost headcoach Sander

Stabo to retirement last fall, will be hard-pressed to match last season's record. Sophomores Steve Todd, Frank Blinett, Dan Reynolds, Jim Marworn, Chris Small, and a host of others won't be back next year. There is also a possibility freshmen standouts Rick Puls, Mark Mota, and Matt Pistone won't be back either.

Other predictions: There will be a renaissance in women's sports primarily because of the outstanding coaching that has assumed control of the volleyball, tennis, track and softball teams, with coaches Lynn Hitchcock, Martha Bost, and Renee Zellmer, and Lynn Mustare (gymnastics). Swimming will continue to dominate the state junior college swimming competition as it did last winter, especially with the return of Jin Soja, Mike Soja, and Mark Wark.

Reflections: It is difficult to pick one outstanding male Athlete of the Year, because there are so many. Others who were nominated for the award: Steve Todd, Rick Puls, Frank Blinett, Scott Chiskold, Tom Pleck, Bill Brigham, Jim Soja, Fernando Goss, Tim Murray, Dave Strawn, Howard Laggel, Ron Theberge, Carl Hansenburg, John Kowalski, Jeff English, and Spet the Wonder Dog.

Over a two-year period I picked the most memorable game in any sport. The winner of the Hawks 34-20 win over Triton in football last fall. The Hawks, in point of better understanding entering the game, jumped to a 14-0 lead. The Trojans managed to cut that to 20-14 by the first quarter and eventually took a 29-27 lead into the final period. Then, late in the game, the Hawks had the ball at their own 20 yard line. Ron Burke, who had led the game in the second quarter with a sore left shoulder, came back and rushed for 62 yards including a 19-yard touchdown run that gave the Hawks a 34-20 win. Triton, the eventual state champion, went on to crush Rochester, Minnesota in the Midwest Bowl.

Biggest disappointment: The fact that I wasn't named Harper Coach of the Year for my job with our intramural basketball team. I racked up six technical fouls in six games. My squad, the Media Cubs, got off to a quick 3-0 start. Then we lost our next three games to finish at 2-3. Come to think of it, I guess because we lost our last three games, I couldn't be named coach of the year. Oh well.

Biggest surprise: I was surprised, especially when talking to some football players recently, that I'm still alive. I've been told of many terrible things that almost happened to me because I was so down on the football team. I really wasn't I was trying to provide a motivational tool which I shouldn't have done either. I asked one player why I wasn't torn into bits and he said, "Because you weren't worth it." My sentiments exactly.

SOMEWHERE OVER THE RAINBOW... in this case the gold lies over the high bar.
